35. ——— Agent of owner of estate—Lease by agent—Fraud and collusion—Ratification.—In a suit to set aside a lease as granted without authority by an agent to the defendant, who was the naib of the estate, and as procured by fraud by the defendant in collusion with the agent, the latter charge of collusion having been withdrawn at the hearing before the Subordinate Judge, the High Court remarked on the impropriety of presenting a plaint charging collusion between the agent and defendant without good grounds for such imputation, and on the withdrawal of such charge at the hearing if there were grounds for it; and agreed with the Subordinate Judge in thinking that the owner of the estate in issue must be presumed to know what was being done on her behalf by her agent. The presumption is that a man acts rightly and not fraudulently. The mere circumstance that the rents were low does not give rise to the presumption that there had been fraudulent conduct on the part of the naib, or that he did not state the circumstance to the agent before obtaining the lease from him. It was sought to render the principal liable, on an account stated by her husband as her mooktear so empowered, for a debt, without proof that the money constituting it had been borrowed on her account. Held, on the construction of the mooktearnama, that the mooktear had no authority to bind her by such a statement of account, whatever authority he might have had to bind her by an actual borrowing of money on her behalf. No implication of authority in the mooktear to bind the woman by his stated account had arisen from the carrying on of a course of business. Accordingly, when the evidence of express authority failed, the statement of account by the mooktear was insufficient to render the principal liable. No evidence was given of the items lent, so as to establish an indebtedness independently of the account stated. SUDISHT LALL v. SHEOBABAT KOER

49. ————— Partnership in tea garden—Liability of partner for acts of managing partner—Authority of agent.—By an agreement made on 22nd July 1862 between C and T (since deceased) and the defendants P and S, C agreed to sell, and T, P, and S to purchase, a half share in the lands, plantation and estate belonging to C, known as the Laojan Tea Estates and Grants. The agreement provided that C was to conduct and manage all matters and affairs of the estates, but nothing was said as to its being done in his own name or in that of the partners of any firm. Money to carry on the business was provided by means of bills drawn by the local manager upon C in the same manner as if he (C) had been the sole owner, the defendants being fully aware of this and finding the funds. This mode of dealing continued down to the time of the transaction, which is the subject of this suit. The only act in the way of notice to the public on the part of the defendants was a notification in a directory published by them in Calcutta (T, S & Co. being booksellers and publishers), in which in the list of tea estates the Laojan concern was mentioned, and C, T, P, and S named as proprietors. In the directory for 1870 and 1872 C was also described as Calcutta agent. This suit was brought to recover a balance due in respect of moneys alleged to have been advanced by the plaintiffs on the tea to be manufactured in the season 1872, the plaintiffs being tea brokers who made the advances on the security of tea invoices and bills of lading. The terms on which the required advances were to be made were arranged by an agreement, dated 9th February 1872, between C and the plaintiffs, who were under the belief that C was the proprietor of the Laojan concern and not merely manager. By reason of C's death and the non-delivery of a portion of the season's tea, the plaintiffs were unable to reimburse themselves for their later advances, and brought the present suit against the defendants, who, they contended, were bound by all C's acts and dealings. Held by COUCH, C.J., that, assuming that the plaintiffs knew what was in the directory, it could not be considered as a notice to them that the authority which C had been exercising, and which he continued to exercise with, so far as it related to bills and drafts drawn by the local manager, the knowledge of his partners, the defendants, had been determined, and that he had only the authority of an ordinary Calcutta agent. Held also that the question in the case was whether the transaction between C and the plaintiffs was within the scope of the authority which C had, or was allowed by his partners to appear to have, in managing and conducting the affairs and business of the partnership. It was a question of actual or apparent authority, and whether the transaction was one which the owner of a tea garden carrying on the cultivation of it would in the ordinary course of business enter into. Held further that the transaction would have been according

His promise to redeem the mortgages was not made to the plaintiff, but to his adoptive mothers, and there was no consideration for such promise as he made. Nor could the promise have the effect of ratification, for the ratification of the authorized contract of an agent can only be effectual when the contract has been made by the agent

The defendant subsequently revoked this authority, and the plaintiff shortly afterwards found a purchaser, whose offer the defendant did not accept. Held that the plaintiff could not recover on the agreement, which had not been performed on his part; that there was no ground for holding that the plaintiff and the defendant were partners in the transaction as between themselves; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover for work done as broker, or for commission, the nature of the agreement being that —Consideration—Specific performance—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 202, 203.—The defendant, by an agreement in the nature of a letter of attorney, constituted the plaintiff and his descendants the hereditary agents of the defendant, gave him authority to collect the rents of his share in an inam village, and promised to pay him an annual salary out of the rents. Held that, as between the parties and during their lifetime, the appointment was valid and binding, whether or not any valuable consideration passed, the mere acceptance of the office by the plaintiff being a sufficient consideration for the appointment. But, independently of the terms of the agreement, and whether or not the agency had been created for valuable consideration, the defendant had, under the general provisions of s. 203 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), a right to revoke the authority, as the mercarrangement that the plaintiff's salary should be paid out of the rents could not be regarded as giving to the plaintiff an interest in the property, the subject-matter of the agency, within the meaning of s. 202. If the defendant had revoked the agency improperly, the remedy lay, under ordinary circumstances, in a suit by the plaintiff for damages for breach of contract. Where, however, the plaintiff chose to sue for specific performance, and demanded arrears of salary, —Held that, without a valuable consideration for the defendant's promise, the agreement passed by him to the plaintiff would be nudum pactum, and the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover, except for work and services actually rendered. *VISHNUCHARYA v. Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 201, 202, 203—Agent—Interest of agent in property—Exercise of authority so as to bind principal.—The plaintiff received instructions by letter from the defendants to purchase cotton on their behalf. This letter was received by the plaintiff before a telegram sent by the defendants the next day revoking the order reached him. The plaintiff replied by letter stating that the telegram had arrived too late, and that the purchase had already been made. In fact, the plaintiff had merely appropriated to the defendants a contract entered into by himself with a third party the day before the defendants' order reached him. Held that the telegram was a revocation of the order contained in the letter of the previous day. Held further that the plaintiff had no such interest in the subject-matter of the agency as to prevent its termination; nor had he exercised his authority so as to bind his principal, no contractual relation with any third person having been created before the receipt of the telegram. *LAKHMI-CHAND RAMCHAND v. The defendants pleaded that the suit was wrongly brought against them, as there was no contract between themselves and the plaintiff. Held that the suit, whether or not it might also have been brought against the Madras Railway Company, was rightly brought against the defendants, inasmuch as the agreement between the two companies, if it did not actually constitute a partnership between them, showed at least that the Madras Railway Company became the agents of the defendants to make the contract for carriage with the plaintiffs. *G. 72. ——— Undisclosed principal —

Settlement of accounts between principal and agent — Right of unpaid vendor — Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 231, 232.—The defendant, who resided in Dholera, employed the firm of S K as his agents in Bombay. A running account was kept, in which the defendant was debited with the price of goods purchased on his account by S K, and was credited with the price of goods sold by S K on his account, and with the amount of the remittances which he made from time to time. In fulfilment of orders received from the defendant on 16th March 1879, S K, on the 23rd March 1879, bought from the plaintiff 20,000 cocoanuts (out of a cargo of 42,000 then lately arrived at Bombay); on the 24th March 1879, 10,160 cocoanuts (out of a cargo of 23,000); and on the 27th March, 26,626 cocoanuts (out of a cargo of 71,250). By each of these three contracts it was agreed that the purchase-money should be paid on delivery. At the time of making these contracts the plaintiff did not know, nor had he any reason to suspect, that S K was an agent, and not principal, in the transactions. On the 27th and 28th March 1879 the 30,160 cocoanuts (the subject-matter of the first two contracts) were transhipped into the vessel Lakhmiprasad, and on the 29th March 1879, the 26,626 cocoanuts (the subject-matter of the third contract) were transhipped into the vessel Lalsari for conveyance to Dholera. The Lalsari sailed from Bombay on the 31st March, and on her arrival at Dholera the defendant obtained possession of the third lot of 26,626 cocoanuts which had been shipped on board. On the 1st April S K received from the defendant remittances sufficient to pay for all the cocoanuts, and to leave a balance of Rs. 1,727 to the credit of the defendant in his account with S K. These remittances were made by the defendant in good faith, and were received by S K at a time when the plaintiff gave credit to S K, and did not know of any one else to be charged with the price of the cocoanuts. On the 2nd April the firm of S K stopped payment, and on the 3rd April 1879 the plaintiff, in consequence of the failure of S K and the non-payment of the price of the

cocoanuts, transhipped the 30,160 cocoanuts (the subject of the first two contracts) from the Lakhmiprasad into the Ramprasad. These cocoanuts were subsequently sold, and the proceeds of the sale deposited in the Bank of Bombay to abide the result of this suit. On the 4th April the plaintiff discovered that the defendant was the principal in the coconut transaction, and brought this suit against him to recover the price of the three lots of cocoanuts. The defendant denied that S K had authority to pledge his (defendant's) credit in making purchases, and contended that, having in good faith paid his agent S K for the cocoanuts prior to the institution of the suit, he (the defendant) was not liable to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The rule of English law, which makes the liability of an undisclosed principal subject to the qualification that he has not bona fide paid the agent, or that the state of accounts has not been altered, is not adopted in the Contract Act. S. 232 is to be read as a qualification of the first portion of paragraph 1 of s. 231, which gives a principal a general right to enforce a contract entered into by his agent. S. 232 qualifies that general right by making it subject to the rights and obligations subsisting between the agent and the other contracting party. The 2nd clause of paragraph 1 of s. 231 gives a party contracting with an agent the same rights against the principal only as he would have had against the agent; and s. 234 adds a further qualification to his rights as against the principal. S. 232 of the Contract Act adopts the qualification imposed by English law upon the right of the principal to enforce a contract, viz., that he must take the contract subject to all the equities, in the same way as if the agent were the real principal; but it does not impose upon the right of the other contracting party the qualification laid down by the cases of Thompson v. Davenport, 2 Smith's L. C., 7th Ed., 364, and Armstrong v. Stokes, L. R., 7 Q. B., 598, namely, that the principal has not paid the agent, or that the state of the account between the principal and agent has not been altered to the prejudice of the principal. The only qualification to the right of the other contracting party against the principal is that imposed by s. 234, namely, that he has not induced the principal to act upon the belief that the agent only will be held liable. *PREMJI TRIKAMDAS v. on board, and that the master on behalf of the owners should have a lien on the cargo for freight, etc. The charter-party was signed by the plaintiffs and defendants in their own names. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for breach of the charter party in refusing to load the said steamship Heid that the plaintiffs had contracted as agents, and were therefore not entitled to sue. If a contract made by a person who is an agent is worded so as, when taken as a whole, to convey to the other contracting party the notion that the agent is contracting in that character, he cannot sue or be sued on the contract. Where one contracting party knows that the other is contracting as an agent for a third person whose name he also knows, the presumption laid down in cl 2 of s 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) does not arise, although at the time of making the contract the agent does not disclose the name of his principal. The essential point is the knowledge, and actual knowledge is equivalent to disclosure the whole object of which would be to convey such knowledge. MACKINNON, MACKENZIE & Co v LANO, MOIR & Co I L R, 5 Bom, 684

The charter-party was a time-charter to commence on arrival at Calcutta and to terminate at one of certain ports, the steamer in the interim to ply to and from any port the charterers pleased. It was agreed that the steamer should be provided with a proper and sufficient crew of seamen, engineers, stokers, firemen,

The names of the principals were not disclosed in the charter party, but were verbally disclosed before the charter-party was signed. In an action against the agents for damages for refusing to supply stevedores and other persons, in addition to the crew, when loading and discharging cargo—Heid that the presumption created by the second clause of s 230 of the Contract Act is merely a prima facie one and may be rebutted, and that the contract was not personally binding on the agents, because the prima facie presumption of an intention to contract personally was rebutted by the language of the contract entitled to call on those responsible for the steamer to load and discharge cargo by stevedores instead of by the crew. Reading the second part of s 230

93 On 6th April 1865 A, who resided and carried on business at Bombay, through his grmastah at Calcutta, shipped on board the Sir Jamsetjee Family 268 bags of sugar, and received from the captain a bill of lading by which he certified that they were shipped in good order and well conditioned on board the said ship bound for Bombay, to be there delivered in like good order and well conditioned to B, or his assigns, on payment of freight at Rs 16 per ton. The bill of lading was subject to the usual exceptions. The vessel was at the time chartered to H A and C & C were agents for the owners. H A being unable to carry out the terms of the charter, there was a delay in the departure of the vessel. On 26th May 1865 A wrote to C & C, addressing them as agents of the ship "I beg to inform you that I have shipped per Sir Jamsetjee Family 268 bags of sugar for Bombay, I hold the bills of lading for the same, and the ship is still detained here. I hope you will be kind enough to let me know what you will do about the cargo if the said ship will sail for Bombay or trans-ship to any other vessel, or deliver the cargo here." To which C & C on the same day replied "We shall be able to tell you in the course of a week or so what we propose doing with the ship Sir Jamsetjee Family as on as any thing has been decided due notice shall be given to the shippers of cargo already on board." On 1st June C & C again wrote; H A having failed to carry out his charter of the Sir Jamsetjee Family in terms of the shipping order and sundry goods having been sent on board by him of which the following are believed to be to our order, and for which bills of lading have been signed and delivered to H A, we shall be glad to know whether you are willing that the said goods—268 bags of sugar—be trans shipped to a steamer going to Bombay, at the current rate of freight, the bills of lading for the same being sent to the owners of the Sir Jamsetjee Family, to be delivered to the consignees of the goods upon production of the bills of lading already signed. You will, of course, understand that the goods are liable for the chartered rate, viz, Rs 20-10 per ton, and the charterer having failed to complete by the shipper previous to the goods being delivered in Bombay." On the 6th June A replied "I am agreed that my goods be trans-shipped to a steamer going to Bombay at the current rate of freight, but I must not pay the difference of freight, whatever it may be. In regard to H A, I have nothing to do with them, as the bills of lading per Sir Jamsetjee Family for 268 bags of sugar being signed by the captain of the same at the rate of freight, R16 per ton, I am liable for the same only. If you are willing to trans-ship my said goods to a steamer at the same rate of freight, I am willing and must pay it; otherwise you will kindly order to deliver my goods from Sir Jamseljee Family here." C & C accepted and acted on the proposal in the last letter. The sugar was trans-shipped from the Sir Jamseljee Family to the Gunga, from the mate of which C & C obtained a receipt, stating that the goods had been shipped in good order, etc. The goods were afterwards removed without the knowledge of C & C from the Gunga to another steamer, the Mula, which belonged to the same owners. Subsequently C & C gave up the receipt from the mate of the Gunga, and obtained in exchange a bill of lading signed by the agents for the captain of the Mula. The bill of lading stated the receipt of goods (in which were included those of A) from C & C, and made them deliverable to order of C & C, at Bombay, and receipt of freight for the whole at R15 per ton was admitted. A knew that his goods had been put on board the Mula, and got his policy of insurance, which was against a total loss only, transferred. There were inserted in red ink in the bill of lading when given to A the words, "Bags all more or less in bad order and contents damaged and rotten; marks indistinct; not responsible for marks or condition of packages or contents." The Mula proceeded on her voyage, but returned to Calcutta with her cargo damaged by the perils of the sea: 260 of A's bags of sugar were condemned and sold in Calcutta, under the authority of the agents of the Mula, without notice to C & C or to A, and neither were aware that the sale was about to take place. The remaining eight bags were sent to Bombay in another ship by the agents of the Gunga and Mula, and were received by A. Held (overruling PHEAR, J.) that C & C were agents only of the owners of the Sir Jamseljee Family; but had C & C been liable as agents for A, they would not have been liable for the full value of the goods damaged by the perils of the sea. Quere—If C & C had expressly, as agents of the owners of the Sir Jamseljee Family, contracted to trans-ship and deliver at Bombay, according to the terms of the bill of lading, would they have been personally liable? Seemle—A contract made with express reference to a principal, though not by name, would not render the agent personally liable as the agent of an undisclosed principal. *COWIE v. At the same time, A sent a demi-official letter to B, in which, after several directions having reference to the disposal of the cargo, he added, "After getting all you can, I should think that the wreck ought to be burnt; but all is left to your discretion and judgment." In pursuance of these orders, the wreck was burnt without the consent of the owner. A subsequently ratified the act of his subordinate. Held, first, that A, by the expressions used in the demi-official letter, rendered himself liable as principal; and second, that B, as the agent directly concerned in causing the burning of the ship, was liable jointly with A to the owner for the damage occasioned thereby. *ABDOOLA BIN SHAIK ALLY v. The appellant was discharged before the completion of the work, and he sued Y, M, and the ex-King jointly. due. The defendants admitted the correctness of the debit side of the account, but denied in general terms that of the credit side. Evidence was given by the plaintiffs of the receipt of the account-sales in the ordinary course of business and of the delivery of copies to the defendants from time to time, and they were filed as exhibits without further proof. It appeared that in the account the defendants were charged on account of local exchange at a rate higher than that actually paid to the Bank, with which the plaintiffs had made a special arrangement without reference to the contract with the defendants. It also appeared that the plaintiffs, under an arrangement made with their agents at the ports of consignment, had received from them about 1 per cent. on the various consignments by way of return commission, and that this arrangement had not been communicated to the defendants. Held (1) that the account-sales were prima facie proof of the transactions to which they related; (2) that evidence of the contemporaneous oral agreement was admissible; (3) that the defendants were not entitled to the benefit of the special arrangement between the plaintiffs and the Bank; (4) that the plaintiffs were liable to the defendants for the amount received by them as return commission. MAXEN v. 105. ——— Principal and factor—Consignment for sale—Advance by factor on consignment—Right of factor to sell goods consigned to him for sale below the limit of price prescribed by consignor.—In January 1889 an agreement was made between the plaintiffs and the defendant which provided that the defendant in Bombay was to act for the plaintiffs “in influencing consignments of produce” to the care of the plaintiffs in London. Such produce was to be sold by the plaintiffs in London for a certain commission and brokerage. One of the terms of the agreement was that the business in England was to be worked entirely in the defendant’s name, and the defendant was to “undertake to guarantee the plaintiffs free of all loss in connection with the said consignments and to guarantee the payment of redrafts, etc.” On the 25th January 1889 the defendant consigned 435 packages of cloves to the plaintiffs in London and drew against the consignment a draft for £2,100 on the plaintiffs. In his consignment letter the defendant stated that the consignment was from his constituent C K, but that, as Rs. 30,000 had been advanced to him, the consignment was shipped in the defendant’s name. The letter continued: “The cost is 9d. per pound, but he expects more, and not to be sold under the above rate.” The sum drawn against the cloves (£2,100) was £400 in excess of their value, and on receipt of the consignment letter on the 11th February 1889, the plaintiffs at once telegraphed to the defendant to remit by cable £400 against overdraft against cloves. On the next day the defendant replied by telegraph: “I will remit you by outgoing mail.” The plaintiffs accepted and paid the draft for £2,100 drawn against the cloves. The price of cloves in the London market fell rapidly. The defendant from time to time lowered the limit of price, but not to such an extent as to allow of a sale being effected. The lowest limit named by him was 6d. per pound on the 31st October 1889. In December 1889 the market price was only 5d. per pound, and the deficit owing to the plaintiffs was £1,300. The plaintiffs presented bills to the defendant for this balance, but they were refused. On the 5th February 1890, after due notice to the defendant, the 435 bales of cloves were sold, 20 of them at 4½d. per pound and 415 at 4¼d. The balance due to the plaintiffs in respect of this consignment after allowing for the proceeds of sale was £1,432-15-0. This sum was part of the amount for which the present suit was brought. The defendant contended that the plaintiffs were not justified in selling the cloves below the price limited, viz., 6d. per pound, and claimed to be credited with £329-1-8, which was the difference between the amount actually realized by the sale and the amount which would have been obtained if the cloves had been sold at the prescribed price. Held by FARRAN, J., and by the Court of appeal on the evidence (1) that the plaintiffs had accepted the consignment and had advanced money against it on condition of being kept in funds in case a deficit should arise owing to a falling market, and that the defendant acquiesced in that condition (2) that the plaintiffs had throughout claimed the right to sell if the condition was not observed, and that the defendant inferentially admitted the right claimed by the plaintiffs. The conclusion to be drawn was that the business was conducted on that basis, and that, when the condition was broken, the plaintiffs’ right to sell arose according to the course of business, notwithstanding the limit of price imposed by the defendant. Per SARGENT, C.J.—The result of the authorities is to show that where a factor for sale, who has made advances, claims the right to sell, invito domino, the question is whether there was an agreement between the parties, either express or to be inferred, from the general course of business or from the circumstances attending the particular consignment, that the factor should under any and what circumstances have the power to sell against the wish of the owner of the goods. The onus of proving such agreement lies on the factor who has made the advances. Per FARRAN, J.—On the whole, the authorities warrant the inference that where goods are consigned to a foreign merchant as security for an advance, albeit he may be a factor entrusted with the sale of goods on commission, and where by reason of the fall in the market or other causes his security is declining in value, and becoming insufficient, such foreign merchant is invested with a power of sale over the goods after due notice to his principal, although the latter may place a limit on their sale, and desire to hold them on, if the principal do not put his factor in funds to make up the deficit so caused. JAFFERBOY LUDHABHOY CHATTOO v. sale, and in respect of each consignment he received an advance from the plaintiff, who was the agent of the London firm, and signed a consignment note, which contained the following passage "I hereby authorize you to sell the above goods at the best price obtainable without reference to me, and I give you full discretion and power to act on my behalf to the best of your judgment in regard to such sale and in all matters connected with the management of this consignment. Should there be any short fall after realisation of the above consignment, I hereby authorize and I engage to presentation of the redrafts to the London firm, on whose account he made the advances to the defendant. Short falls having occurred on certain consignments, and the London redrafts having been disallowed, the plaintiff paid them, and now sued to recover the amount from the defendant. It appeared that consignments had been sold at prices less than certain limits which had been fixed by the defendant subsequent to the receipt of the advances and the signature of the consignment notes. Held that the defendant had no right (regard being had to the terms of the consignment note and the course of dealing between the parties) so to impose limits of price, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. KONDAYA CHETTI v NARASIMHULU CHETTI 1 L. 7. ————— Sale of mortgaged property in execution of money-decree obtained by first mortgagee—Effect on second mortgagee's rights—Purchase by one of several joint mortgagees of mortgaged property—Limitation—Suit for sale of mortgaged property.—In January 1866 B obtained a simple money-decree only in a suit for enforcement of lien created by a bond executed by the wife of Z, and, at a sale in execution of such decree, a 10-biswas share hypothecated in the bond was sold and purchased by Z in November 1872. On the 3rd May 1872, two bonds were executed in favour of B and H jointly, the first by Z and I jointly hypothecating 6½ out of the above-mentioned 10 biswas, and the second by S, in which the obligor promised to pay the obligees the amount of the bond given by Z and I in the event of such amount not being paid by them, and mortgaged certain property as security for such payment by him. In December 1872 Z gave another bond to B hypothecating the same 10 biswas, and in execution of a decree obtained by B upon this bond the 10 biswas were sold and purchased by B himself in 1877, and in 1883 were sold by him to D. Subsequently, B and H brought a suit against Z and I, the joint obligors, under the bond of the 3rd May 1872, the heirs of their surety S, a purchaser from those heirs of the property mortgaged in the security-bond, and D, in which they claimed to recover the money due on the bond by sale of the property mortgaged therein, and also by the sale of the property mortgaged in S's security bond. Held that, inasmuch as the bond executed by S was only a guarantee for the personal obligation created by the joint bond of Z and I, and a cause of action could only accrue as against him in respect of the personal default of the joint obligors to pay the bond-money, and such default occurred beyond the period of limitation within which a suit to enforce the personal obligation to pay the money could have been maintained, it followed that, had there been a claim in the plaint to obtain a decree personally against the joint obligors, the plea of limitation by which such a claim could have been defeated would have been equally efficacious as regards the heirs of S; but no such claim had been made, and the obligation of surety under his bond of the 3rd May 1872 being confined to the personal default of S, his heirs had been wrongly imported into the present litigation, which alone sought to enforce the hypothecation of was estimated to be Rs 1,35,000. The mortgages,

Bank on certain bills, etc., and had agreed to give security in respect of such indebtedness as was thereafter expressed, and they contained covenants by K to pay to the Bank all sums of money then due, or there-and leave under these certain bills of K's which fell due on the 9th September 1889, unless further security were given, and accordingly the plaintiff became surety for K for the sum of Rs 1,25,000. This sum he was subsequently obliged as security for the whole debt (viz., Rs 1,35,000), that of this debt he as surety had paid a part, viz., Rs 25,000, to the Bank, and that he was therefore to that extent entitled to stand in the place of the Bank and to receive a share of the proceeds of the said securities proportioned to the sum which he had paid. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to the benefit of the securities held by the Bank until the whole of the debt due to the Bank by K was paid. A surety, who has paid the debt which he has guaranteed, has a right to the securities held by the creditor, because as between the principal debtor and surety the principal is under an obligation to indemnify the surety. The equity between the creditor and the surety is that the creditor shall not do any thing to deprive the surety of that right. But the creditor's right to hold his securities until his whole debt is paid is paramount to the surety's claim upon such securities, which only arises when the creditor's claim against such securities has been satisfied. GOVENDRANATH GORULS DAS TETPAL v. B was the second clerk in the Bank, and it was arranged between him and the agent that he should still continue to fill that office. He did so after his appointment as khajanchi, and he received obtained a decree against him for the total amount, and they sued the defendants as sureties. The defendants pleaded that they were not liable, inasmuch as the Bank had appointed B to perform the duties of second clerk, in addition to those of khajanchi without the variance. The Court was of opinion that, inasmuch as the evidence showed that B was second clerk was not whether there had been a subsequent variation of the contract, but whether, as the surety bond was silent as to this part of the arrangement between the Bank and B, and it was made (as the defendants concealed. In this case there was not the slightest reason to suppose that there had been any intentional concealment by the Bank of the fact that B was to continue to fill the office of second clerk, or that, if the defendants had been informed of it, it would have in the least degree affected their readiness to make themselves liable for his faithful discharge of the duties of khajanchi. The evidence showed that the duties of the two offices were perfectly distinct, and therefore, even if B had been reappointed to the

there would have been no material alteration in the duties of khajanchi which would have relieved the defendants from their obligation as sureties, but merely the addition of a new office which would not affect the sureties' liability, unless, indeed, the surety-bond contained an agreement that the principal should not undertake any other business. It was also contended for the defendants that they were discharged from liability, inasmuch as in the year 1883 the names on certain bills discounted with the Bank were found to be forged. The Bank then made a claim upon B in respect thereof, and he repudiated his liability. The defendants contended, on the authority of Phillips v Foxall, L. R. 7 Q. B. 666, that it was the duty of the Bank to have informed them of this occurrence at that time. Held (distinguishing Phillips v Foxall) that it could not have been assumed that B was infallible in detecting forgeries, and the guarantee given by the defendants was not

On a bill filed by A, the Bank was restrained by injunction from proceeding with the action at law. Held on appeal by the Judicial Committee, discharging the injunction and reversing the decree of the Supreme Court, that, under the circumstances, the redemption of the securities was a sale within the meaning of the condition contained in the deposit bills, and that such sale was not a release to A as surety for the previous bills, the condition not being that the copper or the proceeds thereof should be applied preferentially or pari passu with the other debts, but simply in reimbursement to the Bank of the principal and interest due on the bills. *BANK OF BENGALEE v. 33. ——— Agreement for payment of decree, or in default to execute it—Failure to execute it on default—Act IX of 1872, ss. 134, 137, 139, and 141.—A decree-holder, in execution proceedings, agreed to accept payment of the decretal amount by the judgment-debtors in annual instalments. He also accepted from certain other persons a surety-bond in the following terms: "In case of default of paying the instalments, the whole decretal money, with costs and interest at 8 annas per cent., shall be executed after one month; and for the satisfaction of the decree-holder we, the executors, stand as sureties of the judgment-debtors." The judgment-debtors paid five instalments and then made default. The decree-holder omitted to apply for execution, and the decree became time-barred. He then sued the sureties to recover the amount of the decree. Held that the terms of the bond requiring the creditor to execute his decree within one month were peremptory, and imported much more than the usual agreement under such circumstances; that the decree holder might execute his decree, if he pleased, on a default; that the legal consequence of his omission to execute the decree being the discharge of the principal debtors, the sureties would, under s. 134 of the Contract Act, stand discharged likewise; that his action was much more serious than "mere forbearance" in favour of his debtors, in the sense of s. 137; that he had done an act inconsistent with the equities of the sureties, and omitted to do an act which his duty to them (under the agreement) required, whereby their eventual remedy against the principal debtors was impaired (s. 139); that he had deprived the sureties of the benefit of the security constituted by the decree; that they were therefore discharged to the extent of the value of that security (s. 141); and that the suit must consequently be dismissed. *HAZARI v. 36. ——— Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 37, 39, 66—Contract Act, s. 135—Accommodation maker, Discharge of—Presentment of promissory note.—Suit by the endorsee against the maker of a promissory note, dated 9th August 1886. The plaintiff was aware that the note was made by the defendant for the accommodation of the acceptor, Watson & Co., with whom the plaintiff had large dealings. On the 4th August 1887, Watson & Co. executed in favour of the plaintiff and another creditor a mortgage of certain property to secure the amount then due by Watson & Co., including the amount due to the plaintiff on the promissory note: the mortgage contained a personal covenant by Watson & Co. to pay the sums due, together with interest on the 4th August 1888; and the mortgagees practically took over the whole business of the mortgagor, and it was intended that they should work it for his benefit up to that date. The promissory note fell due in June 1887, but was not presented to the defendant for payment. Held that the plaintiff, by accepting the mortgage, promised to give time to Watson & Co., and thus rendered it impossible for him to sue Watson & Co. had the defendant as surety called on him to do so, and that the defendant was accordingly discharged. *Pogose v. 1. ——— Commencement of, and restrictions on, right—Penal Code, ss. 97, 99.—The right of private defence as described in s. 97 of the Penal Code is subject to the restrictions mentioned in s. 99, that is, it should be exercised only in the defence of one's own body or that of another person against an offence affecting the human body. Under s. 102, the right commences only on a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body caused by an attempt or threat to commit an offence, and by s. 99, cl. 4, the right is restricted to not inflicting more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence. *QUEEN v. 2. ——— Extent of right—Penal Code, s. 103 and s. 99.—The right of private defence under s. 103 of the Penal Code is restricted by s. 99 of that Code, and does not extend to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence. QUEEN v. DHUNUNJAI POLY

3. ——— Commencement and extent of the right—Penal Code, ss. 99, 105—Information of offence to be committed.—The third clause of s. 99 of the Penal Code must be read with the first clause of s. 105. The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences. Before such apprehension commences, the owner of the property is not called upon to apply for protection to the public authorities. The apprehension which justifies a recourse to the authorities ought to be based on some information of a definite kind as to the time and place of the danger actually threatened. The accused No. 1 received information, one evening, that the complainants intended to go on his land on the following day and uproot the jvari seed sown in it. At about 3 o'clock next morning he was informed that the complainants had entered on his land and were ploughing up the seed. Thereupon he at once proceeded to the spot, followed by the other accused, and remonstrated with the complainants. The complainants, without paying any attention to his remonstrances, commenced an attack on the accused. In the fight which ensued, both sides received serious injuries, and the leader of the complainants' party was killed. The accused were thereupon charged and convicted, under ss. 304, 114, 325, and 323 of the Penal Code, of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, and of causing hurt. Held, reversing the convictions, that the complainants being the aggressors, the accused had, under the circumstances, the right of private defence, both of person and of property, and that, in the exercise of this right, they did not inflict more harm than was necessary. Held also that the accused were not bound to act on the information received on the previous evening and seek the protection of the public authorities, as they had no reason to apprehend a night-attack on their property. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 6. ——— Right of private defence—Plea of accused.—If the accused pleads not guilty and does not admit the act, but the pleader for the defence advances in his argument the plea of the right of private defence, the duty of the Court is to accept the plea if it appears upon the evidence, either for the prosecution or from the defence, that what was done by the accused was in self-defence. *PASPOT GOPE v. 7. ——— Onus probandi—Evidence Act, s. 105.—Where the accused had been convicted of riot under s. 148 and of grievous hurt under s. 325 of the Penal Code, the Sessions Judge on appeal held that the complainants had themselves been the aggressors, and that the accused had merely exercised the right of private defence; but, inasmuch as they had not set up the plea of private defence, he considered it was not competent to him to set aside the conviction. Held that, though the onus was on the accused, the finding of the Judge amounted to one that they had discharged that onus, and on that finding the accused were entitled to an acquittal. Public function.—In a suit filed in a Mamlatdar's Court under Bombay Act III of 1876, the plaintiff obtained a decree against the accused for possession of a certain piece of land. When the Mamlatdar proceeded to execute the decree, he found that there was no land corresponding to the boundaries set forth in the plaint, and that the parties were joint owners and in joint occupation of the land in dispute. Finding himself unable to execute the decree, the Mamlatdar referred the matter to the Collector for advice. The Collector, on looking into the papers of the case, ordered a surveyor to execute the decree by dividing the land in dispute and putting the decree-holder in possession of his share. The surveyor, in attempting to execute the decree, was obstructed by the accused, who was thereupon tried and convicted of voluntarily obstructing a public servant in the discharge of his public functions, under s. 186 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). Held that the Collector's order was entirely ultra vires as to leave no room for the operation of either the first or the second clause of s. 99 of the Penal Code, as to right of private defence. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The river at the time was almost dry, and the party did not go armed ready to fight or use force, and they did not during the subsequent occurrence use force. Having arrived at the spot about 10 A.M., they proceeded to work at the bund until the afternoon. At about 4 P.M. a body of men, consisting about 1,200 in all, many of them armed with lathis and headed by the prisoners, who were servants of M, which had been seen collecting together during the day, proceeded to the spot, and about 25 or 30 of them attacked T's men, some five of whom were more or less severely wounded with the lathis. The occurrence resulted in the conviction of some of M's servants for rioting under s. 147 of the Penal Code. M's people wholly denied any right on the part of T to construct or repair the bund, and had previously denied the existence of such right and refused permission to T to exercise it. It was contended that the assembly of M's people was not an "unlawful assembly"; that the interference by T's people with the channel of the river justified them in coming to stop the work, and the show and use of force in compelling them to do so. Held that the prisoners had been rightly convicted. Held further that, as no right of private defence of property is conferred by the Penal Code, except as against the perpetrators of offences under the Penal Code, and that, as upon the facts of the case as found no offence had been committed by T's people, their acts amounting merely to a civil trespass, and as there was no pressing or immediate necessity of a kind, showing that there was no time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities, no question as to the right of private defence arose in the case. GANOURI LAL DAS v. QUEEN-EMPRESS. I. L. R., 16 Calc., 208

25. ————— Trespass—Penal Code, ss. 97, 104, 105.—Where A trespassed on the lands of B, whose servants seized and confined A till the following day, when B gave information to the police, it was held that the conduct of B and his servants in confining A could not be supported on the ground that they were exercising the right of private defence of property under ss. 97, 104, and 105 of the Penal Code. SHURUFOODDIN v. KASSINATH

26. ————— Trespass—Demand for payment of rent.—Mere persistence in demand for rent does not amount to trespass justifying the exercise of the right of private defence. MAHOMED JAN v. KHADI SHEIKH. HURNATH DE v. JOYGOPAL DE. HURIS CHUNDRA DAS v. BOZA

1. ————— Professional communication —Attorney and client—Privilege—Act I of 1872,
s 126—To be privileged under s 126 of the Evidence Act (i of 1872), a communication by a party to his attorney must be of a confidential or private nature Where defendants at an interview, at which the plaintiff was present, admitted their partnership to their attorney, who was then also acting as attorney for the plaintiff, —Held that the attorney was not precluded by s 126 of the Evidence Act (i of 1872) from giving evidence of this admission to him 1st because the defendants' statements, having been made in presence and hearing of the plaintiff, could not be regarded as confidential or private, 2nd, because those statements did not appear to have been made to the attorney exclusively in his character of attorney for the defendants but to have been addressed to him also as attorney for the plain-

2. ————— Privilege, Extent of—How far solicitor bound to disclose communication made in course of employment—Attorney and client—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s 126—The law relating to professional communications between a solicitor and a client is the same in India as in England It is not every communication made by a client to an attorney that is privileged from disclosure.

he is bound to disclose the name of his client, on whose behalf he claims the privilege The mere fact that the client's name had been communicated to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as solicitor by another client, affords no excuse, unless it was communicated to him confidentially, on the express understanding that it was not to be disclosed.
 But a solicitor is not at liberty, without his client's express consent, to disclose the nature of his professional employment S 126 of the Indian Evidence Act protects from publicity not merely the details of the business, but also its general purport, unless it be known ab initio that such business falls within proviso I or II to the section. At an interview between a solicitor and a client, the solicitor took down a certain statement made by a person named A B, who was in his client's company, and whose name was communicated to him in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment. A B was afterwards tried for defamation, and the solicitor was examined by the prosecution with reference to the statement made to him by the accused at the above interview. The solicitor was asked whether the person who had made the statement had given his name as A. B. The solicitor declined to answer the question on the ground of privilege. Held that the solicitor was bound to answer the question, unless A. B.'s name was communicated to him by his client in confidence with a view to its not being disclosed. FRANJJI BHICAJI v. MOHANBING DHANSING. I. L. R., 18 Bom., 263

3. ———— Communication to Mukhtars acting as pleaders for their clients—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 126.—The restrictions imposed by s. 126 of the Evidence Act in respect of what are known as privileged communications extend also to communications made to mukhtars when acting as pleaders for their clients. *ABBAS PEADA v. 4. ———— Communication to clerk of pleader—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 120, 127—Per BANERJEE, J.—S. 127 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) extends to a communication made to the pleader's clerk the same confidential character that attaches to a communication to the pleader direct, under s. 126. KANESHWAR PERSHAD v. AMANUTULLA. I. L. R., 26 Cal., 53 [2 C. W. N., 649]

5. ———— Act II of 1855, s. 24—Vakil and client.—S. 24, Act II of 1855, does not warrant a vakil's exclusion from the witness-box, though it may excuse his answering certain questions relating to communications between him and his client. DOOLAR JHA v. KUNJEET ROY [15 W. R., 340]

6. ———— Act II of 1855, s. 24—Mukhtar and client.—The question whether a communication between the accused and witness is privileged, is a question of law for the Judge to decide. Communications between mukhtars and their clients are not privileged within s. 24 of Act II of 1855. QUEEN v. CHANDRAKANT CHOKERBUTTY [1 B. L. R., A. Cr., 8: 10 W. R., Cr., 14]

7. ———— Prosecutor in criminal case and his attorney and clerk.—Semble—Communications between a prosecutor in a criminal case and his attorney, and between the attorney and his clerk with respect to the case, are not privileged. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BELLIOS [12 B. L. R., 249] servants to another for the purpose of obtaining information with a view to possible future litigation are not privileged, even though they might, under the circumstances, be required for the use of the defendant's solicitor. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL*

10. ———— Letters between solicitors for various plaintiffs—Attorney and client—Inspection—Production—Waiver of privilege.—The plaintiffs resided in England, and sued the defendant in Bombay for specific performance of an agreement to purchase certain premises. This agreement had been made on behalf of the plaintiffs by S, their agent in Bombay. The defendant pleaded that by the terms of the agreement it was provided that the deed of assignment should contain a covenant by the three plaintiffs to indemnify the defendant against any claims upon the premises that might be made at any time by or on behalf of the representatives of one N. The defendant's solicitor prepared a draft assignment which contained this covenant, and sent it to the plaintiff's solicitors (Messrs. P and W) for approval. On the 19th March 1850 W called upon B, the defendant's solicitor, and informed him that M, the third plaintiff, refused to sign any deed which contained the above covenant. At this interview W read to B portions of a letter written with reference to the proposed deed by McG & Co (solicitors for the first two plaintiffs) to V, the solicitor of the third plaintiff, and of another letter written by V to his client, the third plaintiff. The defendant called upon the plaintiff to produce these letters for inspection. Held that the letters were privileged, and that the fact that portions of them had been read to the defendant's solicitor was no waiver of the privilege as regarded the parts which were not read. KAY v. POORUNCHAND. POONALAL. I. L. R., 4 Bom., 631

11. ———— Letters by client to solicitor—Discovery—Affidavit of documents—Sufficiency of affidavit—Further affidavit—Inspection of documents—Practice.—Where in an affidavit of documents privilege is claimed for a correspondence on the ground that it contains instructions and confidential communications from the client (the plaintiff) to his solicitor, it must appear not merely that the correspondence generally contains instructions, etc., but that each letter contains instructions or confidential communications to the attorneys with reference to the conduct of the suit. Bewicke v. Graham, 7 Q. B. D., 400, followed. ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION v. BROWN & Co. I. L. R., 12 Cal., 285

12. ———— Statement in petition to Magistrate—Defamation.—Held that, under the circumstances of the case, the allegations contained in a petition presented by respondent to the Magistrate acting in his administrative capacity cannot be regarded as a privileged communication made in the course of judicial proceedings; and it being proved that the allegations so made were made with sinister

13 ——— Statement to punchayet—Illegal conviction for defamation—Where a person called upon by a punchayet convened by the complainant's relatives to explain why he had made a defamatory remark concerning the complainant made a statement by way of explanation—Held that such statement being privileged a conviction for defamation for making such statement was illegal. IN RE GOVINDAPPA NATAR I L R, 7 Mad., 36

14. ——— Petition to Revenue Officer—Defamation—Presumptions as to malice—Certain rayats in a zamindari village addressed a petition to the tehsildar praying that the Village Munsif might be retained in office notwithstanding the zamindar's application for his removal. The petition imputed criminal acts to the zamindar who now sued the petitioners for damages on the ground that the petition contained a false and malicious libel. It was found that in fact the communication was made bona fide and that there was some ground for some of the imputations. Held the petition was a privileged communication and the alleged libel was not actionable. The question when malice may be presumed, discussed. VENKATA NARASIMHA v KOTAYTA, I L R, 12 Mad 374

15 ——— Communication by a servant of a company to one of his subordinates as to another subordinate—Defamation—An action for damages for defamation brought by a brewer recently employed by a brewery company against the local manager of the company the defamatory statements complained of were contained in a letter written by the defendant to the directors of the company and also in a letter written to another brewer in the employ of the company in which he said that the plaintiff had failed most utterly and I have been compelled to inform him that you will take the position of senior brewer at the brewery. Held that all these statements were in the nature of privileged communications. LEISMAN v HOLLAND I L R, 14 Mad., 51

16 ——— Letter from husband to wife—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s 122—Letter taken on search of wife's house—On a trial for the offence of breach of trust by a public servant a letter was tendered in evidence for the prosecution which had been sent by the accused to his wife at Pondicherry and had been found on a search of her house made there by the police. Held that the letter was not inadmissible in evidence against the accused as being a privileged communication. S 123 of the Evidence Act was not applicable. QUEEN EMRESS v DONAGHUE I L R., 23 Mad., 1

1. ADMISSION TO PRACTICE.

1. ——— Rules of 31st of March 1871—Vakil of High Court.—The words of ss. 2 and 3 of the Rules of 31st March 1871 are such that the classes of persons to be admitted to practise in the Privy Council must be either solicitors or others practising in London, or solicitors admitted by the High Court in India or in the Colonies, respectively, and have not left an undefined class admissible at the discretion of the Judicial Committee. 2. RECORD, PREPARATION OF.

2. ——— Decision limited to one of several issues of law—Omission of immaterial matter in preparation of printed book.—In a suit in which the original Court had framed and decided several issues, the High Court on appeal confined their decision to the questions which in their opinion governed the case, leaving other issues undecided as not affecting the result after the decision to which they had come. Afterwards the suit was admitted to appeal in conformity with s. 603, Code of Civil Procedure. In the preparation of the printed copy of the record the question arose whether the copy should be made of the whole record, or of only so much of it as was material to the correctness of the High Court's decision. Their Lordships directed that only so much of the original record as bore upon, and was material to, the questions decided by the High Court, and the subject of the appeal, should be printed in the copy. 3. APPEALS FROM INTERLOCUTORY ORDERS.

3. ——— There is no law which requires a suitor to appeal from interlocutory orders under penalty of forfeiting for ever the benefit of the consideration of the Appellate Court. 4. ENLARGING TIME FOR APPEAL.

4. ——— Jurisdiction of Judicial Committee as to application to enlarge time for appeal.—The Judicial Committee have no jurisdiction to entertain an application for extension of time to appeal until the petition of appeal is lodged. Where it appeared that an inquiry was pending before the Master in the Court below, arising out of the decree which was the subject of the appeal, the result of which might render the prosecution of the appeal unnecessary, the Judicial Committee enlarged the time prescribed by Rule 5 of the Order in Council of 13th June 1853 for prosecution thereof, until further order. GUNGADHUR SEAL v. RADDAMONEY DOSSEE . 6 Moore's I. A., 209

5. SPECIAL LEAVE TO APPEAL.

5. ——— Form of petition—Amendment of a petition too general and vague.—It is incumbent upon a party applying for special leave to appeal to set out in the petition a full statement of the facts and legal grounds, to show that there is a substantial case on the merits, and a point of law involved, proper to be determined by the Appellate Court. A petition for special leave to appeal contained a general statement of the proceedings in India, and an averment that they were irregular and contrary to law. Such petition ordered to be dismissed or to stand over for amendment as being too general and vague. On the amended petition, stating in detail the facts, and specifically showing legal grounds of objection to the decrees and order of the Court below refusing leave to appeal, special leave to appeal was granted. GOREE MONEE DOSSEE v. JUGGUT INDRO NABAIN CHOWDRY . 11 Moore's I. A., 1

6. ——— Application for special leave—Omission of material facts—Costs.—A petition for special leave to appeal being ex-parte, it is a universal and most important rule of the Court that every fact which is material to the determination of the question raised upon the petition should be truly and fairly stated, and where there is an omission of material facts, whether it arises from improper intention on the part of the petitioner, or whether it arises from accident or negligence, still the effect is the same, if the Court has been induced to make an order which, if the facts had been fully before it, it would not, or might not, have been induced to make. Where the Court was of opinion that there had been no intentional misrepresentation, and that there had been delay on the other side, it discharged an order giving special leave to appeal where an important fact had been kept from the Court, without costs, remarking that it would have thought it right, whether the mistake was intentional or not, to have given costs, had it not been for the delay. MOHUN LALL SOOKUL v. BEBEE DOSS . 8 Moore's I. A., 193

Appeal admitted from an order confirming the report of the commissioners in a partition suit, although the appalable value was under R10,000, the amount prescribed by the Order in Council of the 10th April 1838 The petitioner (the plaintiff) had offered to compensate the defendant if the report of the commissioners was varied The Judicial Committee, in granting leave to appeal, put the petitioner upon terms of lodging in the Council office, within four months, a certificate of recognizance to the Queen in the sum of £1,500 for such compensation and costs as might be awarded. JOYKISSEN MOOKERJEE v. COLLECTOR OF EAST BURDWAN

[8 Moore's I. A., 265]

20. ————— Leave granted on terms as to payment of costs—Question of jurisdiction.—The Supreme Court, in overruling the objections to the jurisdiction of the Court, refused leave to appeal, the subject matter of the action being trifling and under the amount required by the rules of the Privy Council. On petition, the Judicial Committee granted leave to appeal, but upon terms of the East India Company paying the respondent's costs of the appeal, to enable him to appear, to prevent the question being argued ex-parte. 22. ————— Decrees of the High Court made on cross-appals—Procedure.—The High Court passed a separate decree on a cross-appeal identical in terms with those of a decree passed on the appeal in the same suit. From the latter decree an appeal to Her Majesty in Council was then declared by the High Court to be admitted under s. 603, Civil Procedure Code. But the defendant's application to have his appeal from the decree on the cross-appeal similarly admitted was refused. 37. ——— Mode of valuation—Appeal to Privy Council—Appealable value—Stamp on plaint—Beng. Reg. X of 1829, s. 17.—In estimating the appealable value for an appeal to the Privy Council by order of 10th April 1838, viz., ₹10,000, regard should be had to the whole matter involved in the suit, and not to the value of a fractional part of the property sought to be recovered. A suit was brought to recover a zamindari in the possession of different persons under deeds of sale in execution of a decree. The value of the property was, by Bengal Regulation X of 1829, stated in the plaint to be ₹14,325. The Sudder Court upheld the sales so far as related to the claim of some of the defendants. The other defendants applied for leave to appeal to England, which the Sudder Court refused, on the ground that, as the value of their portion was only ₹8,215, it was not within the appealable value; but this construction was overruled by the Judicial Committee, and leave was granted to appeal. Quare—Whether the stamp on the plaint required by Regulation X of 1829, s. 17, being for fiscal purposes only, is conclusive of the value of the property sued for. *AMEENA KHATOON v. 52. ——— Stay of proceedings in India pending appeal—Protection of property pending an appeal by special leave—Order for stay of proceedings—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), Ch. XLV.—Special leave of Her Majesty in Council was obtained for the filing an appeal from a decree of the High Court affirming the dismissal of the petitioner's suit. The High Court rejected his application as plaintiff (appellant) for an order staying execution and continuing the possession of a manager of the estate in litigation pending the result of the appeal. The rejection was grounded on the absence of authority for this purpose, the High Court being authorized in their judgment only to make such an order in regard to appeals admitted by themselves. On the petition that the High Court's decision might be reversed or such order made as would protect the property to abide the ultimate disposal of the suit, their Lordships were of opinion that direct interference to continue the management or to appoint a Receiver was impracticable. But that, on the other hand, interference had, on occasions, been effected where, the appellant being in possession, an order for stay of proceedings had maintained the existing state of things. Therefore, an order staying proceedings should now be recommended by them, the petitioner being answerable in damages, and any aggrieved respondent having leave to move for the discharge of the order. Technical nature of grounds of appeal.—A defendant obtained special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, on the ground that the case involved questions of law of great importance to the Jain sect, of which he was a member. On the appeal coming on for hearing, he contended that the suit should have been dismissed by the Courts below as a claim for a declaration of right in respect of which no consequential relief was sought or could be given. Held that, considering the special grounds on which the defendants had obtained leave to appeal, the somewhat technical character of the defence now put forward, and the general circumstances of the case, he ought not to be allowed to insist on this objection. SHEO SINGH RAI v. 86 ——— Credibility of witnesses—Effect of evidence—It is not the habit of the Privy Council, unless in very extraordinary cases to advise the reversal of a decision of the Courts of India merely on the effect of evidence or the credit due to witnesses NARAGUNTY LUCHMEYAVAMAN v VEN GAMA NAIIDOO [I W R, P C, 30 8 Moore's L A, 66]

102. ——— Judgment on facts—Appeals from Non-Regulation Provinces.—In cases from Non-Regulation Provinces, wherein the procedure is somewhat loose, and where the merits depend much on local custom and local inquiry, it is even more necessary than it is on appeals from the Civil Courts in the Regulation Provinces to act on the principle of not disturbing the judgment under appeal, unless it is substantially wrong. *HYDER HOSSEIN v. [14 Moore's I. A., 401: 17 W. R., 185

103. ——— Improper admission of evidence—Sufficiency of evidence.—Where evidence, such as hearsay, is improperly admitted, the question for the Judicial Committee is whether, rejecting that evidence, enough remains to support the finding. Disapproval was expressed by their Lordships of the reception by the lower Court of evidence which ought not to have been admitted. MORUN SING v. GHURIBA sioner from a decree given on first appeal by an Appellate Court, and maintaining a finding of fact by the original Court, the only questions were (1) whether secondary evidence had been properly admitted on a case that had arisen for its admission; and (2) whether the evidence offered constituted secondary evidence of the matter in dispute, which was the making of a document. Held that (no special leave to appeal from the judgment of the Commissioner, the first Appellate Court, having been applied for) the facts were not open to decision on this appeal; this Committee could only do what the Judicial Commissioner on second appeal, under the above sections, could have done; and that, as the case stood, they were bound by the findings of facts of the first Appellate Court. *LUCHMAN SINGH v. 108. ——— Question in issue—Parties—Admission—Execution of deed.—The plaintiff claimed to have inherited estate in the possession of the defendant, who was also related to the last owner, but who set up, independently of other title, a deed of gift from the latter in his favour. It was decided in the Appellate Court that, even if this deed had been executed, it was inoperative, and on this point the decision of the first Court was maintained. An issue having been fixed as to the execution, and the plaint also showing that the execution was disputed, their Lordships declined to treat the execution as not having been in contest. *ANAND KUAR v. [I. L. R., 11 All., 396

109. ——— Failure to produce evidence at hearing—Omission of Judge to call for record.—At the hearing of a suit a party, though he had sufficient warning of what was necessary, did not take the proper steps to cause the production of the documentary and only admissible evidence of a material fact which had to be proved by him, and the decision was against him. The record of another proceeding would, it was said, have supplied this evidence; and an application had been previously made on which the order of the Judge was that "the matter would be decided when the case was tried, and the record would be sent for, if necessary." No further application to the Court was made, and no attempt to supply this evidence. Held that, if there had been, as there might have been, an oversight by the party in not calling the attention of the Judge to the above order, and in not tendering the evidence, there had been no omission on the Judge's part affording ground for appeal, and the Judicial Committee refused to interfere. *CHANDICHURN SHASHMAL v. security and that interest was to run thereon at a

‘The same (i.e. the sum borrowed with interest) are demand payment thereof’ The defendant contended that the note in question was in form one payable to being in contravention of the provisions of s 2a of the Paper Currency Act (XX of 1882) Held that dhani was not in the ordinary or the commercial language of

12. ————— Note given partly for "balance of bets and lotteries"—Lottery Act (V of 1844).—The defendant agreed with the plaintiff to take the plaintiff's mare "Bridesmaid" on "racing terms,"—all winnings to be divided equally between them, and the plaintiff to have the option of claiming a one-fourth share of any lottery in which she might be bought by or on account of the defendant; the plaintiff to keep and train "Bridesmaid" for ₹60 a month. Subsequently, the plaintiff agreed to keep and train, for a like sum for each horse; five horses belonging to the defendant. The defendant having been posted as a defaulter, the plaintiff, at the defendant's request, advanced certain sums to the Secretary of the Calcutta Races to enable the defendant's horses to run. As security for the repayment of such advances, and of a sum of ₹4,456-6 which had become due to the plaintiff, and which included an item of ₹1,149 for "balance of bets and lotteries," and a smaller sum in respect of certain tickets in the "Secundra Raffle," the defendant gave to the plaintiff a letter of hypothecation of his five horses, whereby it was agreed that in case of the defendant's default the plaintiff should be at liberty to sell the horses. The defendant made default, and the plaintiff advertised the horses for sale. On the same day the defendant wrote and gave to the plaintiff a letter, stating that, in consideration of the plaintiff's withdrawing the advertisement, and withholding the sale for a certain period, he would give the plaintiff a promissory note for the balance of his claim. A note for ₹7,000 was accordingly given by the defendant to the plaintiff. In the account delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, he had by mistake overcredited the defendant with ₹744 in an item headed "cash received from the Secretary of the Calcutta Races, balance of racing account," and under which was included the following item: "I. O. U., deducted from lottery account, ₹480." On receiving information of the error, the defendant gave the plaintiff another promissory note for ₹744. In an action on the notes brought under Act V of 1866, the plaintiff obtained a decree, which was set aside on the defendant's application, and leave was given to him to appear and defend. Written statements were then filed on the plaintiff's application. Held by MACPHERSON, J., that the two promissory notes were given as security for the whole of the plaintiff's claim; that the items for "balance of bets and lotteries" and for the "Secundra Raffle" being rendered illegal by the Lottery Act (V of 1844), part of the consideration for the notes was illegal, and no action was maintainable upon them. His Lordship therefore dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal, held by COUCH, C.J., that the promissory note for ₹7,000 was not vitiated by the ₹1,149 being part of the consideration for it: although that portion of the latter sum which was won by lotteries was obtained by an illegal transaction, it was not illegal for the defendant to receive the money, and, having done so, to pay the plaintiff his share or to promise to do so. But the money paid in respect of the "Secundra Raffle," being money paid in execution of an illegal purpose, was an illegal consideration which disentitled the plaintiff to recover on the note. Held further that the note for ₹744 was given upon good consideration. All the facts of the case being stated in the plaintiff's written statement, the Court might allow the plaintiff to be amended, and frame an issue as to what amount was due to the plaintiff in respect of the consideration for the note for ₹7,000. Held by MARKBY, J., that both notes were good, inasmuch as the promise contained in them did not spring from, nor was it the creature of, the original illegal agreement, but was a separate agreement. JOSEPH v. SOLANO

25. ——— Effect of an invalid endorsement of a promissory note by payee. Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 46—Note recovered by, but not re-indorsed to, the payee.—The defendant gave plaintiff a promissory note payable on demand. The plaintiff endorsed the note to a third party, a creditor of his, who sued the defendant on the note on his refusal to pay. The defendant pleaded that it had been agreed between the payee and himself that the note should not take effect until the payee had performed certain conditions which remained unperformed. The suit was accordingly dismissed. The plaintiff thereupon paid the endorsee and took back the note, which, however, was not re-indorsed, and instituted the present suit against the defendant, who pleaded that the property in the note was not vested in the original plaintiff so as to enable him to maintain the suit. On the decess of the plaintiff before the trial, his sons were substituted as plaintiffs. Held that, although the property in a promissory note payable to order on demand passes by endorsement and delivery (Act XXVI of 1881, s. 46), the endorsement in this case had been declared invalid in the suit referred to, and must therefore be treated as cancelled, and consequently the property in the note was vested in the plaintiff at the

On defendant's failure to send the consignments as promised, a suit was brought under Ch. XXXIX, Civil Procedure Code. Held that the suit was rightly filed under Ch. XXXIX; that the agreement to liquidate the amount due by fortnightly consignments was a collateral undertaking consistent with the existence of the note containing an absolute promise to pay; that such collateral agreement was no answer to the suit on the promissory note; and that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. *SYRON v. The uncle had always recognized the debt as a family debt, and the land purchased with the money borrowed had, in a subsequent division of property, been allotted to the uncle and his sons, who had also agreed with the maker of the note that they would discharge the debt. On a suit being brought against the maker of the note, as well as the uncle and his sons, —Held (per SHEPARD and SUBRAHMANYA AYYAR, JJ. certificate issued under Bengal Act VII of 1880, and who has sustained substantial injury by reason of a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, is by way of an appeal under s. 2 of Bengal Act VII of 1868. The effect of s. 2 of Bengal Act VII of 1880 is that Act XI of 1859, and Bengal Act VII of 1868, and Bengal Act VII of 1880, are to be considered as if the provisions contained in them were contained in one Act so far as such construction is consistent with the tenor of the last-mentioned Act. By the force therefore of s. 2 of the Act of 1880, the provisions of s. 2 of the Act of 1868 became applicable to a sale under an execution issued upon a certificate made under the Act of 1880. Bengal Act VII of 1880 is an Act for the recovery of all kinds of public demands, and therefore applies to cases of road or other public cesses. SADHUSARAN SINGH v. PANCHDEO LAL . I. L. The debtor objected under s. 12 on the ground that no arrears were due, but the objection was overruled, on his failure to produce evidence, on the 7th August 1895, and the sale took place on the 10th August 1895. In a suit brought on the 8th August 1896 to set aside the certificate and the sale,—Held that the terms of s. 8, cl. that s 8 of Act VII of 1880, read with s 3 of the said Act, makes a certificate of sale conclusive evidence that all notices have been duly served ing received a report from the Tehsildar that arrears of road cess Bengal Act IX of 1880) were due in respect of villages, took proceedings purporting to do so in pursuance of Bengal Act VII of 1880. In the certificate of unpaid demand, the names of the persons described as debtors were those not of the present proprietors, but of former proprietors and the copy and notice were addressed to them. Held by the High Court that the procedure laid down by Bengal Act VII of 1880 must be strictly followed, and it is therefore absolutely incumbent on the Courts, when considering the validity of sales under that Act, to rigidly require an exact compliance with the formalities prescribed therein by the Legislature. Where a certificate is issued in respect of a demand under the Act, upon payment of such demand, it becomes the duty of the Collector under s. 22, to enter satisfaction upon the certificate, and also in the register kept under a 21. A sale in execution

Notice of suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 421—Talukhdari settlement officer managing estate under Act XXI of 1881—Broach and Kaira Encumbered Estates Act.—The plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was entitled to succeed, on his father's death, to a talukhdari estate to the exclusion of defendant 1, who, he alleged, was a supposititious child set up by his step-mother to defeat the plaintiff's right of inheritance. It appeared that defendant 1 had obtained a decree against the plaintiff's father establishing his legitimacy and declaring him entitled to receive maintenance out of the estate in question. In accordance with that decree, the talukhdari settlement officer (defendant 2), who was manager of the estates under the Broach and Kaira Encumbered Estates Act (XXI of 1881), paid defendant 1 an allowance of Rs200 a month on account of his maintenance, which allowance, the plaintiff alleged, was illegal and wrongful. The defendants contended that the suit was bad, because notice had not been given to the talukhdari settlement officer as required by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, following Shahbazadee v. Fergusson, I. L. R., 7 Calc., 499, and Bhau Balapa v. Nana, I. L. R., 3 Bom., 343, that although the talukhdari settlement officer acting as manager under XXI of 1881 was a "public officer," yet the suit was maintainable without giving the talukhdari settlement officer the notice required by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as it was not a suit arising out of acts done by him in his official capacity. *SARDARSINGJI v. 1. ———— Liability for nuisance caused by works—Statutory powers—Beng. Reg. I of 1824—Act XLII of 1850—Land taken for public purposes—Suit for injunction to restrain nuisance.—The plaintiffs, the owners and occupiers of a house and premises in Howrah, sued for an injunction to restrain a nuisance caused by certain workshops, forges, and furnaces erected by the defendants, and for damages for the injury done thereby. The defendants were a railway company incorporated under an Act of Parliament for the purpose of making and maintaining railways in India, and by an agreement (entered into under their Act of Incorporation) between them and the East India Company, they were authorized and directed to make and maintain such railway stations, offices, machinery, and other works (connected with making, maintaining, and working the railways) as the East India Company might deem necessary or expedient. The workshops complained of were erected in 1867 under the sanction of the Bengal Government on land purchased by the Government in 1854 for the purposes of the railway under Regulation I of 1824 and Act XLII of 1850, and which had been made over to the defendants. Held, a nuisance having been proved to exist—that is to say, such annoyance as materially interfered with the ordinary comfort of human existence in the house and caused sensible injury to the property, of the plaintiffs,—the defendants could not plead laches or acquiescence on the plaintiffs' part, as, upon the plaintiffs complaining in May 1870, the defendants had admitted that there was a nuisance, and had up to June 1871 made various efforts to abate it. Nor could the defendants escape liability on the ground that the nuisance had been caused by them in the reasonable exercise of powers conferred upon them by the Legislature. An injunction was granted restraining the defendants, and liberty to apply was reserved in the decree. On a motion by the defendants, supported by an affidavit showing the alterations which they proposed to make with the view of abating the nuisance, and alleging that a period of three months was required to carry out these alterations, and that a refusal to grant this time would necessitate the closing of the company's workshops, and would occasion great inconvenience, the Court granted the time asked for, on the conditions that the defendants paid the costs of the application, and did all they possibly could in the meanwhile to prevent annoyance to the plaintiffs. RAJ MOHUN BOSE v. 2. ———— Fire caused by spark from engine—Action for damages—Negligence—Statutory powers.—The East Indian Railway Company was incorporated under 12 & 13 Vict., c. XCIII, "for the purpose of making and constructing, working, and maintaining" the East Indian Railway, including all necessary, accessory, or convenient extensions, branches, etc., as might be agreed upon between the Railway Company and the East India Company; and by agreement between the Railway Company and the East India Company, dated 17th August 1849, the Railway Company was "authorized and directed to make and maintain such stations, offices, machinery, and other works and conveniences connected with the making, maintaining, and working the railway," and "to provide a good and sufficient working stock of engines, carriages, and other plant and machinery for working the said railway." The plaintiff was the owner of a piece of land adjoining the railway line at Kharmatta, a station on the Chord Line of the Company's railway, on which land was erected a bungalow, with stables and out-houses adjoining. In the action brought by the plaintiff against the Railway Company to recover compensation for damages occasioned by a fire caused by a spark from one of the engines of the Company, the plaintiff alleged want of due care on the part of the defendants in the management of the line by allowing dry grass of too great a length to remain on the railway banks, and in driving their engines along the line without due precautions being taken to prevent the expulsion of sparks. Held that the defendant Company was authorized to run locomotive engines on the lines of railway constructed by the Company under the statutory powers given to it, and therefore the Company was not liable for damage caused in working the line under such statutory powers, without proof of negligence. Held also on the evidence that neither in the construction of their engines nor in the condition of the railway banks was any negligence shown on the part of the Company. HALFORD v. The conditions of s. 10 are not fulfilled by the sender merely giving an account of the quantity and description of the goods delivered for carriage when required to do so by the booking clerk. protection to the defendants, on the ground that it was invalid as a regulation for non-compliance with the provisions of s. 43 of Act XVIII of 1854, inasmuch as it had not been sanctioned by the Local Government, and had not been posted up at all the stations of the Madras line of railway; and that it could not otherwise be binding against the plaintiff, as neither the plaintiff nor his agent were shown to have had any knowledge of it at the time of entering into the contract with the defendants. Quære—Whether, if the plaintiff or his agent had such knowledge at the time of making the consignment, the notice would have constituted such a stipulation as to contravene s. 11 of Act XVIII of 1854 or whether it might be read together with that section, and treated as effectual, except so far as its operation would be limited in its scope by that section. Held also that, the arrival of the grain at the station of destination (Bellary) having been proved, the burden of showing that the goods were ready for delivery to the plaintiff for a reasonable time after such arrival lay on the defendants, although no proof had been given of any application for delivery by the plaintiff within a reasonable time. It is the duty of a railway company to keep goods which have reached the station of their destination, ready there for delivery until the consignee, in the exercise of due diligence, can call for and remove them, and it is the duty of the consignee to call for and remove them within a reasonable time. Semble—The object of s. 11 of Act XVIII of 1854 is to preclude railway companies from being able by any stipulation to escape from liability for loss or injury to goods caused by the gross negligence or misconduct of their agents or servants. *SURUTRAM BHAYA v. In cases not met by the special provisions of the Act relating to railways and carriers, the liability of carriers for loss or damage to goods entrusted to them is prescribed by ss. 151 and 152 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872). The plaintiff's goods were being carried in a train of the defendants from Nandgaon to Egatpuri. During the journey the train was plundered by robbers, and the plaintiff's goods were stolen. Held the defendants were entitled to the benefit of s. 152 of the Contract Act, and should be permitted to give evidence that the robbers of the plaintiff's goods were not the servants or agents of the defendants, and that the defendants (by their servants and agents) took as much care of their goods as a man of ordinary prudence would, under similar circumstances, take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality, and value as the goods in question. *KUVERJI TULSIDAS v. The defendants pleaded a special contract signed by the consignor, which, in consideration of their carrying the goods at a special reduced rate instead of the ordinary tariff rate, exempted them from liability for loss or damage to the goods from any cause whatever, before, during, and after transit over their railway or other railways working in connection therewith. Held that under the contract the defendants were not liable to the plaintiff. *TIPRANNA v. The payment of "an increased charge" is not equivalent to insurance. In January 1890 a box containing rupees was delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendant Company in Bombay to be carried to Saugor. From the evidence it appeared that the plaintiffs did not intend to insure the box. The box was taken to the booking office at the station, and the parcel clerk asked what it contained, and was told that it contained coin, and he learned casually that the amount was Rs. 6,000. The clerk charged Rs. 18-1-0 for the box, which was the "treasure rate" for carriage. This sum was paid, and the box was duly despatched, but was lost or stolen in the course of transit. The plaintiffs sued to recover the Rs. 6,000. The defendants contended that, having regard to the provisions of s. 11 of Act IV of 1879, they were not liable, inasmuch as (1) the contents of the box had not been duly disclosed, nor (2) had an increased charge been paid. The plaintiffs obtained a decree in the lower Court. On appeal,—Held (reversing the decree) that the defendant company was not liable (1) because there was no sufficient declaration of the value and contents of the box; (2) because the sum paid by the plaintiffs for the carriage of the box was the ordinary charge for treasure, and was not the increased charge which under s. 11 of Act VI of 1879 should have been paid in order to make the company liable. *GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY Co. v. "Terminal charge" means a charge for the use of goods station and for the various duties which a

Railway Company, as common carriers perform in connection with the goods consigned to them for carriage. Semble—Under ss 41, 45, and 46 of Act IX of 1890, the High Court has no jurisdiction to consider or entertain a claim relating to terminals charged by the defendants subsequently to the time at which that Act came into operation. Held on appeal (SARGENT, C J, and BAYLEY, J) that these charges were within the authority given by that Act. Such charges, if not strictly "tolls" were certainly charges for performing of services, if not "necessary" at any rate "convenient for the working of the railway," and payment for such services might also properly be regarded as a source of "profit" to the Railway Company, within the meaning of that Act. The only "terminal charge" sanctioned by Government was a charge sanctioned in 1865, and then, expressly defined as "including collection and delivery." The defendant Company had since that date

ded by the plaintiffs that the "terminal charge" now levied had never been sanctioned. Held also that a review of the proceedings leading to the sanction of 1865 showed that Government had contemplated the possible abandonment by the Company of "collection and delivery" when it sanctioned the rate then fixed, and that consequently it must be presumed that Government had left it to the defendant Company to make such deductions in case of abandonment of this portion of their services as they should think proper, which they had done. LALJIHAR SHANJIV R I P RAILWAY COMPANY I L R, 16 Bom, 434

The plaintiff had given no notice to the Company that the goods were required to be delivered within a fixed time for any special purpose, and he had signed a forwarding note under a statement that he agreed to be bound by the conditions at the back, and one of those conditions was to the effect that the Company is not liable "for any loss of or damage to any goods whatever by reason of accidental or unavoidable delays in transit or otherwise." If a railway carriage be rendered dangerous to the passengers travelling therein by reason of the fact that there are fireworks in it, and if the carrying of the fireworks could have been prevented by the exercise of due care on the part of the Railway Company, they are liable for damages for negligence should an explosion of the fireworks occur. carriage open or unfastened—Hurt caused to passenger while trying to secure door.—Leaving the door of a railway carriage open or unfastened amounts to negligence on the part of a Railway Company, and the Company is liable for any injury caused thereby to a passenger. If any inconvenience or danger is caused by the negligence of the Company, a passenger may lawfully attempt to get rid of such inconvenience or danger, provided that in doing so he runs no obvious risk disproportionate to the inconvenience or danger, and is not himself guilty of any negligence; and, if in such attempt he is injured, the Company is liable in damages. The door of a railway carriage attached to a train running from Poona to Bombay was left open or unfastened when the train left the Khandala station. The plaintiff was then asleep in the carriage. He subsequently awoke when the train was passing through a tunnel, and found that the whole of the door, which opened outwards, had been torn away from its hinges, except the upper part or sunshade, which was flapping backwards and forwards against the side of the tunnel and the door post of the carriage. In attempting to secure it, the top of the plaintiff's finger was torn away and the bone of one of his fingers fractured. Held that the injuries were caused by the negligence of the Railway Company, and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages. *BROMLEY v. 9. ————— Grounds for appointment—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503—Waste by Hindu widow. The powers conferred by s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code are not to be exercised as a matter of course, and it is not a reason for allowing an application for the appointment of a receiver that it can do no harm to appoint one. The discretion given by that section is one that should be used with the greatest care and caution. Because a plaintiff in his plaint makes violent and wholesale charges of waste and malversation against a defendant in possession of property as executor under a will or as the tenant for life, and upon this basis applies for a receiver to be appointed, it is not a necessary consequence that such appointment should be made. Held in this case, where the sons of a Hindu widow, in possession of her husband's estate under a will, sued their mother, as reversioners under the will, for possession of the estate, on the ground of mismanagement and waste, and on the same grounds applied for the appointment of a receiver under s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code, that a receiver had been appointed on insufficient grounds. *PROSONOMOYE DEBI v. 10. ————— Power of Subordinate Judge—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 503, 505.—A Subordinate Judge, if he has good grounds, may decline to appoint a receiver even after he has received the necessary authority from the District Judge under s. 50 to do so. GOSAIN DULMIE PURI v. Act VIII of 1869, ss. 23, 52—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 503, 505.—Although, having regard to the provisions of ss. 23 and 52 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code would not apply to a suit brought under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 merely for arrears of rent, there is no provision in that Act which excludes the operation of s. 503 when a suit is brought for recovery of the tenure itself. When therefore a suit was brought under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 for arrears of rent and for ejectment of the defendant,—Held that a receiver of the rents and profits of the tenure might properly be appointed under the provisions of s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code. *KARTIC NATH PANDY v. 12. ————— Ground for Appointment of receiver—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 503—Discretion of Court—Waste.—The removal of a large amount of property by the defendant, and under circumstances which might fairly give rise to suspicion during the pendency of the suit in which the question of title to that property would be determined, is a sufficiently strong ground for the appointment of a receiver. *Sidheswari Dabi v. Abhoyeswari Dabi, I. L. R., 15 Calc., 818; Chandidat Jha v. Padmanand Singh, I. L. R., 22 Calc., 459; and Sham Chand Giri v. Bhairam Pundey, Suit No. 179 of 1893, referred to. SIA RAM DAS v. In such a case "the owner" in s. 503 (d) means the whole body of owners to whom the joint estate belongs. The Court has jurisdiction to place the whole of a joint estate out of which a plaintiff seeks to have his share partitioned in the hands of a receiver, and to order that a receiver so appointed shall be at liberty to raise money on the security of the whole of such joint estate. *PORESH NATH MOOKERJEE v. 14. ————— Receiver of mortgaged property appointed at instance of mortgagee—Receiver appointed by Appeal Court—Practice.—In a suit by a mortgagee for foreclosure or sale in default of payment of his mortgage-debt the Court of first instance, when passing a decree for the plaintiff, refused, on the plaintiff's application, to appoint a receiver of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property. The plaintiff appealed against the latter part of the decree, and after filing a memorandum of appeal obtained a rule for the appointment of a receiver until the hearing of the appeal. The Court of appeal, after argument, made the rule absolute, and appointed a receiver until the hearing of the appeal, and subsequently, when the appeal came on for hearing, varied the decree of the Court below by appointing a receiver of the mortgaged property. The High Court possesses the same powers with regard to the appointment of a receiver as are possessed and exercised by the Courts in England under the Judicature Act. *JAIRISSONDAS GANGADAS v. Where, however, the garnishee denies the debt, there is no other course open to the judgment-creditor than to have it sold, or to have a receiver appointed under s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code. TOOLSA GOOLAL v. ANTONE . . . I. L. R., 11 Bom., 448

24. ——— Receiver of High Court—Position of—Right to sue and defend suits.—The Receiver of the High Court does not represent the estate for which he is receiver, but is merely an officer of the Court, and as such cannot sue and be sued, except with the permission of the Court. MILLER v. RAM RANJAN CHAKRAVARTI [I. L. R., 10 Cal., 1014]

25. ——— Position and functions of—Parties—Suit for specific performance.—The receiver in a suit is nothing more than the hand of the Court for the purpose of holding the property of the litigants whenever it is necessary that it should be kept in the grasp of the Court in order to preserve the subject-matter of the suit pendente lite; and the possession of the receiver is simply the possession of the Court. He has no personal rights in the property, nor can he take any steps with regard to it without the sanction of the Court. If it is necessary for him to take action of any sort, he should be put in motion by the Court on the application of the parties to the suit; and whatever he rightly does with regard to the property, he does simply as the agent of the owners of the property. Where the receiver in a suit had, by order of Court, sold certain property in the suit, and had executed the contract of sale in his own name, a plaintiff praying for specific performance against the purchaser for refusing to complete the contract was admitted with the receiver as co-plaintiff, he having obtained leave to sue. WILKINSON v. GANGADHAR SIBKAR . . . 6 B. L. R., 486

26. ——— Right of suit as receiver and right to possession of property—Rule of Supreme Court.—In a suit by K against B and others, the Supreme Court ordered that the estate of R (deceased) should be applied to the payment of his debts, legacies, etc., and appointed a receiver of the rents and profits of his real property. It also ordered the defendants and persons claiming through them to give up to the receiver such of the real property

as might be in their possession. Subsequently, in the same suit, the High Court declared that K was entitled to a moiety of the estate of R after payment of costs and legacies, and directed the estate to be sold and the proceeds brought into Court. Afterwards the receiver brought a suit in his own name against R and one S, alleging that, though the property had been decreed to K and himself jointly, yet K had, by collusion, obtained sole possession of it, and that, in execution of a money-decree against her, it had been sold to S. Held that, as Receiver of the High Court, plaintiff had no title as of right against S to the immediate possession of the property, and no right to sue in another Court in his own person to receive possession thereof. The rule on the Original Side of the Court, taken from the practice of the English Court of Chancery, is not to compel a party to a suit to give up to the receiver possession of property unless an order of Court to that effect has previously been made upon him; the proper course being by proceedings in Court to fix an occupation rent, and to order the party in possession to pay the same. RAM LOCHUN SIRCAR v. HOGG . . . 10 W. R., 430

27. ——— Power of receiver—Power to question title of third party.—A receiver appointed by order of the Supreme Court can only sue for possession, and has no right to question the title of a third party in a suit with respect to the property put under his management. DINONATH SREEMONEE v. HOGG [2 Hay, 395]

28. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503—Right to sue.—A zamindar was attached in execution of certain decrees against the zamindar, and the plaintiff was appointed receiver with full powers, under s. 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to manage the zamindari. Before the appointment of the receiver, the zamindar had expended certain sums at the defendant's request to repair a tank for the irrigation of lands held by them in common with him. This suit was brought to recover the sum so expended. It was objected that the receiver could not maintain the suit on the ground that the sum sued for was neither the subject of a suit against the zamindar nor property attached in execution of a decree against him. Held that the receiver could maintain the suit. SUNDARAM v. 29. ——— Power of Court to allow receiver to sue in his own name—Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), s. 503.—The Court has authority, under s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code, to confer on a receiver the power to sue in his own name; and if the order appointing the receiver gives him liberty, he may do so. PINK v. 41. ——— Money in hands of Receiver—Estate administered by Court—Pressing claims against estate, or part owners thereof—Power to order Receiver to pay—High Court, Power of.—Plaintiff was admittedly entitled to a half share of an estate, which this suit was brought to divide. A decree had been made referring it to the Commissioner to ascertain and divide the said estate, and a Receiver had been appointed. No power had been especially reserved by the decree to the Receiver to pay pressing or other debts due by the estate, or the part owners thereof. Some time would elapse before the accounts could be taken in the Commissioner's office, and meanwhile two creditors were threatening attachment of the property of the estate, and their debts were running at considerable interest. The estate was not otherwise indebted. There was money in the Receiver's hands to the credit of the estate, half of which would be more than sufficient to pay off the claims of these creditors. The plaintiff applied to the Court for an order to the Receiver to pay these two debts out of the plaintiff's half share of the moneys in his hands, leaving the plaintiff to prove his right to debit the estate with such payments. Held that the Court had power to make the order asked for, though such an order would only be made in special cases and on special conditions. Held further that the present was a

A receiver is not justified in delegating or entrusting to another a duty entrusted to him by the Court. He should in all important matters apply for and obtain the direction of the Judge who appoints him. A receiver is entitled to his costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred in the discharge of his duties. BALAJI NARAYAN PATVARDHAN v. RAMCHANDRA GOVIND KANADE . . . I. L. R., 19 Bom., 660

Some of the judgment-debtor's tenants paid the rents due by them into the hands of the receiver, but the receiver did not pay the money into Court. Held by MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—In cases in which a receiver, appointed at the instance of the judgment-creditor under s. 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure, misappropriates money collected by him, the decree is not satisfied pro tanto, but the loss falls on the estate or its owner, subject to the receiver's liability. ORR v. Held on appeal under the Letters Patent, per SHEPARD, J., that the payment by the tenants to the receiver did not pro tanto discharge the judgment-debtor from liability under the decree. Held per DAVIES, J., that payment by the tenants to the receiver pro tanto discharged the judgment-debtor from liability under the decree. MUTHIA CHETTI v. Power of Magistrate directed of the peace—Wrongful act.* Orders, 282 of Act XXV of 1861, a Magistrate could prevent a person from doing a wrongful act, but not one which the person might lawfully do. It was not intended that a person should be prevented by a Magistrate from exercising his rights of property because another person would be likely to commit a breach of the peace if he did so. IS THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KASHI CHUNDER DOSS, KASHI CHUNDER DOSS v. Where the notice directs a person to show cause why he should not be bound down to keep the peace, it is improper to make an order directing him to execute bonds for his good behaviour. When a rule is issued upon the Magistrate to show cause and the order sought to be set aside is one that is only intended to secure the peace of the district by binding down the petitioner, the Magistrate is the only party entitled to be heard. The Sessions Judge recommended that the order as to recognizances should be quashed, as criminal trespass was not one of the offences detailed ins. 489 for which such recognizances could be taken. [9 W. R., Cr., 16]

51. ———— Order giving insufficient time to show cause—Irregular order—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 491.—Where parties required on the 1st July to show cause on the 9th under s. 491, Criminal Procedure Code, why they should not furnish security for breach of the peace, were served on the 5th and 7th idem, it was held that they had not had sufficient time allowed them for the purpose, and the order requiring security was accordingly set aside. QUEEN v. CHEYT SINGH

52. ———— Omission to give opportunity to show cause—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 492.—On a complaint being lodged of criminal trespass and assault, the Magistrate recorded that, after interrogating the witnesses, he found that a breach of the peace was likely to ensue, and proceeded to examine the complainant and two of his witnesses and the accused, and thereupon ordered that the parties should furnish recognizances to keep the peace.—Held that the parties had not had opportunity afforded them under s. 492, Criminal Procedure Code, to show cause why they should not be bound. *QUEEN v. 7. SUMMONING WITNESSES.

54. ———— Obligation of Magistrate as to summoning witnesses—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 491.—A Magistrate is bound to assist both parties in a case under s. 491, Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, in bringing in their witnesses by issuing summonses to attend. QUEEN v. CHEYT SINGH

55. ———— Right to adjournment to produce witnesses—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, ss. 491, 496, 497.—Under the sections (491 and 497) of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to security for breach of the peace, the party charged is not entitled, when sufficient time has already been given him to show cause and to produce his witnesses, to an adjournment in order to produce his witnesses. In such a case, he must either bring his witnesses with him or apply for summons in such time as to enable him to bring them into Court on the day fixed. CHULAN TEWARI v. SUKEDAD KHAN

The language of s. 514 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) does not indicate that the final order making a person bound by a bond can be made without taking any evidence in his presence or giving him any opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses on whose evidence the forfeiture is held to be established. The mere production of the original record or of a certified copy of the original record of the trial in which the principal had been convicted of breaking the peace within the period covered by a bond would not be conclusive, if indeed it would be any evidence, against the surety in a proceeding under s. 514 of the Criminal Procedure Code. *QUEEN-EMRESS v. 105. ———— Delay in taking steps to forfeit recognizance—Invalid proceedings.—When a Magistrate has before him the fact that a person convicted by him of an offence attended with violence was under recognizance to keep the peace, and does not nevertheless proceed to forfeit such recognizance, it must be held that he thought it unnecessary to do so. Proceedings taken after the lapse of a considerable period are bad and contrary to the intention of the law. IN RE RAM CHUNDER LALLA 1 C. L. R., 134

106. ———— Liability to forfeiture—Commission of offence—Theft.—Where a person has been bound down by recognizance not to commit a breach of the peace, the amount of the recognizance cannot be recovered from him if he is guilty of an offence, such as theft, which does not amount to a breach of the peace, or which is not likely to occasion a breach of the peace. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HABAN CHUNDER ROY

Some time afterwards he wrongfully confined and extorted a sum of money from two raiyats who were supposed to have committed theft on his lands, he being for such offence fined and his recognizances forfeited. Held that the matter ought to have ended with the fine; for the raiyats not having offered any resistance, no breach of the peace took place, and the amount of

111. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 502—Forfeiture of recognizances—Fresh recognizances.—On the 30th of April 1877 A was bound down to keep the peace for one year. On the 14th of January 1878 he was convicted of an offence, and sentenced therefor to fine and imprisonment, but no order was made for the recovery of the penalty, though the Magistrate knew that the recognizance had been forfeited. On the 2nd of April 1878 the Magistrate, at the instance of a third party, called upon A to show cause why the penalty of the recognizance should not be paid, and a warrant for its recovery was issued on the 6th of June 1878. Held that the warrant must be quashed, on the ground that the Magistrate having inflicted a sentence of fine and imprisonment with the knowledge that the recognizance was forfeited, he was not competent to inflict a further penalty on a reconsideration of the circumstances. IN THE MATTER OF PARBUTTI CHURN BOSE 3 C. The Recorder's Court cannot take judicial cognizance of the fact that the country, in which the rights of the party attempting to rebut such prima facie title accrued is lawless and unsettled, and possesses no tribunal capable of pronouncing a decision on the rights of the parties which the Recorder's Court could consider as the decision of a Court of competent jurisdiction. 1. ————— Cause of action—Defendant out of the jurisdiction.—The Court of the Recorder of Rangoon had no jurisdiction in a suit brought against a defendant dwelling in Surat, though the cause of action arose in Rangoon. ANONYMOUS CASE . . . 18 W. R., 397

2. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1892), s. 16 (c), proviso—Suit for damages for trespass on land and for injunction.—The plaintiff sued in the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon to recover damages for trespass on land in his own possession situate outside the limits of the original jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court; asking at the same time for an injunction restraining the defendant from further acts of trespass. Both plaintiff and defendant resided within the limits of the original jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court. Held (1) that the plaintiff, having alleged that the land was in his possession, was not entitled to the benefit of the proviso to s. 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and (2) that a suit for damage to land cannot be said to be a suit for which relief can be entirely obtained through the personal obedience of the defendant, even though it may be joined with a claim for an injunction; and that for the above reasons the Recorder had no jurisdiction to try the suit. was the 30th September 1880. A Division Bench of the High Court held on the appeal on the case coming up before them on the 18th October 1877 that the suit was not based upon any express contract made between the parties; that the transaction which took place on that date did not constitute an implied contract; and that therefore these contentions were not open to the plaintiffs, but the Court referred the question whether the plaintiffs' claim, so far as it was based on the statement of account on the 18th October 1877, fell within art. 64 of sch. II of Act XV of 1877. Held by MITTER, PRINSEP, and McDONELL, JJ.—That the question referred was a matter of limitation arising in the case which had not been decided in the order of reference, and without such a decision the case could not be disposed of; and as to that point, that the statement of account, not being signed by the defendant, did not fall within the terms of art. 64 of sch. II of Act XV of 1877. Held by GARTH, C.J., and TOTTENHAM, J.—That the Division Bench, having held that the transaction afforded no basis for a suit, had disposed of the case, and the question referred was therefore immaterial. *DUKHI SAHU v. The Subordinate Judge returned the plaint, being of opinion that the suit was not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. The plaint was then presented in the Court of the District Munsif as an ordinary suit, but the District Munsif returned it on the ground that the suit was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. The plaintiff then applied to the District Judge to submit the record for the orders of the High Court. cedure Code (Act X of 1872), s. 318—The accused was convicted of the offence under s. 457 of the Penal Code by the Deputy Magistrate of Barrisal, who found that the accused was a boy of fourteen or fifteen years, decidedly under sixteen, and passed the following order: "I find Ahmad Ali, boy, guilty of house breaking by night for the purpose of committing theft, and instead of being imprisoned in the jail under s. 457 of the Penal Code, I direct, under s. 399 of the Criminal Procedure Code and s. 7 of Act V of 1876, that Ahmad Ali be confined in the Calcutta Reformatory for two years for training in some branch of useful industry." Held that the order could not be sustained under s. 7 of Act V of 1876, as that Act had been repealed before the date of the order and the commission of the offence, nor under s. 8 of Act V of 1876 of 1897.

present Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) must also be held by virtue of s. 3 of the Code to have been repealed in the provinces including Bengal, to which Act V of 1876 was extended. The repeal of a statute repealing another statute does not revive the repealed statute. The law in India, as embodied in s. 7 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897) is the same as the law in England. Queen-Empress v. Madasamt, I. L. R., 12 Mad., 94, and *Queen-Empress v. Manoj, I. L. REFORMATORY SCHOOLS ACT (V OF 1876)—concluded.

1. ——— s. 22—Government Notification (India) No. 173 of the 14th March 1889—Sentence.—Where a boy over fourteen, but otherwise of uncertain age, was ordered upon conviction by a Magistrate to be detained in a Reformatory School for two years,—Held that such sentence, having regard to the rule made by the Governor-General in Council on the 14th March 1889 under s. 22 of Act V of 1876, was illegal. The proper course for the Magistrate to have adopted with reference to the above-mentioned rules was to have ascertained, as near as might be, the exact age of the offender and sentenced him to a specified period of detention, which should be that elapsing between his conviction and the attainment by him of the age of eighteen years. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ——— ss. 8, 9, 11—Recording of and finding on evidence as to age of offender—Jurisdiction of Sessions Judge as a Court of appeal to pass order for detention in reformatory school in lieu of imprisonment.—A Sessions Judge can on appeal, from a Magistrate pass an order for detention in a reformatory school in supersession of an order for imprisonment. But he can only do so when he has before him evidence as to the age of the accused, otherwise he must take evidence under s. 11 of the Act, and record a finding stating the age, and then with reference to such finding pass a sentence within the terms of the Reformatory Schools Act and the rules made by the Local Government thereunder. *DEPUTY LEGAL REMEMBRANCER v. 1. ——— s. 16 and ss. 8, 11, and 31—Rule framed by the Local Government—Youthful offender—Evidence of age—Order not properly passed—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 83.—If an order for detention in a reformatory school in substitution for transportation or imprisonment be not properly passed, a Court is not debarred by s. 6 of the Reformatory Schools Act (VIII of 1897) from altering or reversing such order. A boy of about 9 years of age was found in the grounds of the residence of the Commissioner of Patna at 3 A.M. in the morning with a brass lota in his hand. He was tried summarily and, without any preliminary inquiry as to the age of the boy being made, was sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment, or in lieu thereof to be detained in a reformatory school for seven years. Held the accused did not come within the definition of "youthful offenders" as given in the rules framed by the Local Government under s. 8 of the Reformatory Schools Act, and the offence of the accused being his first offence, the case should have been dealt with under s. 31 of the Act. It is not that a Magistrate is under no circumstances competent to find from the appearance of a person convicted by him that he is a youthful offender, but it is generally desirable that there should be some reliable evidence on the point, and especially when it is necessary to determine the period of detention. The age of the accused being under twelve years, the Magistrate should, considering the provisions of s. 83 of the Penal Code, have found that the accused had attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his act. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. In such a case the High Court has power to interfere in revision. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BILLAR . . . I. L. R., 20 All., 160

4. ——— Substitution of an order of detention in a reformatory school for a sentence of imprisonment passed on a youthful offender—Power of Appellate Court to order the alteration of such order—Evidence—Age of such offenders, Finding as to—Revisional powers.—S. 16 of the Reformatory Schools' Act (VIII of 1897) does not entitle any Appellate Court to order the alteration of the substitution of an order for detention in a reformatory school to imprisonment. Before an order for detention in a reformatory school can be passed in lieu of a sentence for imprisonment, there should be a definite finding as to the age of the boy and as to his being a fit subject for a reformatory school. *EMPRESS v. 2. ——— Authority of Registrar—Power to execute conveyance and enter into covenants on behalf of infants and persons refusing to execute—Effects of title known to purchaser at time of sale—Covenants for title and quiet enjoyment—Pardanashin, when not bound by conveyance executed by her containing covenants for title and quiet enjoyment—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 261, 262—Rules of Court (Belchambers' Rules and Orders), Nos. 341 and 456.—The

Registrar of the High Court has authority, when so directed by an order of Court, to execute a conveyance on behalf of a party refusing to do so, so as to pass his estate, if any, but has no authority to bind him by entering into any covenants on his behalf. The power of the Registrar to execute such a conveyance rests upon statutory authority. General covenants for title and quiet enjoyment extend to the case of a defect known to the purchaser at the time of the sale, unless the intention of the parties that they should not do so is clearly expressed in the covenants themselves. "Conveyance," as used in rule 486 (Belchambers' Rules and Orders) means such an instrument as may be necessary to transfer the estate, if he has any, belonging to the person on behalf of whom the Registrar executes the transfer to the purchaser. Circumstances under which a pardanashin lady will be relieved from liability under covenants contained in a conveyance executed by her. D, an heir of one X, a deceased Hindu lady, sold and conveyed to M, in March 1878, a moiety in certain premises belonging to the estate of X. Subsequently a decree was made for partition of the estate left by X in a suit to which D, A, R, G, and S were parties, and an order was made in that suit directing the premises, of which D had so sold a moiety, to be sold by the Registrar, and the parties were directed to join in the conveyance, the Registrar being directed to approve and execute the same on behalf of G, who was an infant. At the sale, the plaintiff purchased the premises, and thereafter D refused to execute the conveyance, which included the usual covenants for title and quiet enjoyment. A summons was thereupon taken out against him, and an order was made directing the Registrar to execute the conveyance on his behalf. The conveyance was then executed in September 1885 by A, S, and R, and by the Registrar on behalf of D and the minor G. In a suit instituted by M under the conveyance of 1878, the Court held that he was entitled to possession, as against the plaintiffs, of the moiety of the premises covered by his conveyance. The plaintiff therefore brought a suit against D, A, R, G, and S to recover damages for breach of the covenants for title and quiet enjoyment. It was not found that R had any good independent advice in the matter, or that she clearly understood the nature of the contract she was entering into, and the liabilities she was taking upon herself. Held that, although the Registrar had authority to execute the conveyance on behalf of D and G, he had no authority to enter into the covenants on their behalf, and that the suit should be dismissed as against them. Held also that, having regard to the position of R, the suit should also be dismissed as against her. RAM CHUNDER DUTT v. DWARNA NATH BYSACK

3. ——— Sale by Registrar—Title to property purchased at Registrar's sale—Doubtful title, Enforcement of—Endowment—Rent charge.—The Court will not enforce a doubtful title on a purchaser where (a) there is a reasonable probability of litigation resulting; or (b) where the title depends on the construction and legal operation of some ill expressed and marvellous instrument and the Court holds the conclusion it arrives at to be open to reasonable doubt in some other Court. Case in which the title sought to be enforced did not fall within these rules. KALLY DOSS SEAL v. NOBIN CHUNDER DOSS [I L R, 14 Cal, 518]

4 ————— Compensation to purchaser for deficiency in area of land—Conditions of sale—At a Registrar's sale held on 13th June 1890 a property described as Lot No 11 formerly La No. 21, Emambaree Lane containing by estimation 8 cottahs be the same a little more or less was sold to the applicant. One of the conditions of sale was that the purchaser would not be entitled to any compensation. On the 10th July the purchaser applied for and obtained an order to pay the balance of the purchase money into Court and for confirmation of the sale. Subsequently the purchaser caused the property to be measured and discovered that it consisted only of 5 cottahs 13 chittaks and 35 sq ft and he accordingly applied for compensation in respect of the deficiency. The purchase money was still in the hands of the Court at the time of the application. Held that the proviso in the conditions of sale applied only to small or unimportant errors and misstatements and not to a deficiency in measurement of a substantial character, and that in respect of the latter the purchaser was entitled to compensation out of the purchase money in Court although he had obtained an order for confirmation of the sale. Whitmore v Whitmore, L R 8 Eq 603 followed. KISSORY MOHAN ROY v KALI CHARAN GHOSH [I C W N, 106]

5 ————— Sale notification—Boundaries Rectification of—Compensation—Annulment of sale—In an application by a purchaser for rectification of boundaries or annulment of sale where such rectification would involve the inclusion within his boundaries of a cookroom, which according to the sale notification was included within the boundaries of another lot purchased by another person but which according to the evidence was always included in the lot purchased by the applicant and which the applicant was led to believe was included in his lot,—Held that in determining what the property is which is purchased at Registrar's sale one has to look at the sale notification the description of the property and the boundaries therein given. It is therefore impossible to determine in the present application what were the boundaries of the property purchased by the applicant. That in a proceeding of this kind an application for rectification of boundaries cannot be entertained, and the best course is to annul the sale. ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL OF BENGAL v ANANDA PRASAD DAS [4 C W N, 504]

12. ———— Suit for instalments due more than a year before suit.—In a suit on a bond registered under s. 53, Act XX of 1866, one instalment of which had fallen due more than a year before the institution of the suit, the plaintiff sued for that instalment, and also included another instalment which he might have recovered in a summary way. The Judge came to the conclusion on the evidence that the bond had not been executed by the defendant, nor duly registered. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to waive the first instalment and get a decree for the second, as if he had enforced the summary remedy on the bond. DIJUNUNJOY GHOSE v. 13. ———— Decree on bond—Interest.—No sum as interest from the date of decree to the date of realization could be awarded by a decree under s. 53, Act XX of 1866: a decree under that section could only award a sum not exceeding that mentioned in the bond, together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of decree, and a sum for costs to be fixed by the Court. MANCUM CHUND v. If the creditor intended to secure interest at the rate stipulated after suit and decree, it was not enough to insert the customary phrase "date of realization" in the instrument, as such phrase must be held controlled by other parts of the agreement as expressed in the bond. ADUR MONEE DEBIA v. 2. ———— Suit to set aside decree on registered bond—Grounds for setting aside decree under s. 55, Act XX of 1866.—Decrees on two specially registered bonds were obtained against plaintiff under s. 53 of the Registration Act (XX of 1866). He petitioned the Civil Court, under s. 55, to set aside these decrees, on the ground that the bonds were executed on consideration of something to be done by the obligee, who had wholly failed to perform his part. The Judge dismissed the petitions, because he thought the matter was a more proper one for investigation in a regular suit. His successor dismissed the suit when brought, because, in his opinion, it did not lie. Held on appeal (by the majority of the Court) that no suit lay. The effect of ss. 52 to 55 was to make a decree under them of precisely the same validity as any other decree, to make it enforceable by the same process, but to render it impeachable on the special grounds referred to in s. 55. Held also that the matters alleged were not such as, if proved, would have justified the setting aside of the decree. The special circumstances must be such as to show a vice in the mode in which the contract to submit to decree and the special registration were obtained, and an infirmity in the original obligation will not do. SINIA TEVAR v. RANGASAMI AYYANGER . 7 Mad., 112

3. ———— Right to sue to cancel deed and enforce it.—The powers conferred on the Courts under the Registration Act, 1866, for enforcement by process of execution of the payment of a bond are not inconsistent with the right to sue to cancel and annul the deed as fraudulent. SREERAM v. HOKOOM SINGH

—Admissibility in evidence of documents compulsorily registrable but unregistered—A karinama (agreement), dated 11th day of June 1885, was passed by A to B to the following effect "As my father S is dead it has been arranged that I should succeed to his estate. Part of this estate at Vagoji consisting of a house, fields, cattle, and a cart has been given into your possession for use and enjoyment. The reason thereof is that you have undertaken to pay ₹450 found due on an adjustment of khata from my father to G. I am unable to pay off this debt, and so you have been put into possession of this property. I shall pass to you a sale-deed in respect of this property and shall transfer the fields to your name from the year 1888 89." Held that the karinama required registration. It did not fall within the exception provided for by cl. (f) of s 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It was not a document which merely created a right to demand another document. It created as between the parties to it a charge in the nature of a mortgage. The document of itself declares a right and the mention of an intention to execute a deed of sale made no difference. An unregistered mortgage bond for one hundred rupees and upwards may be admissible in evidence to prove the simple debt or a personal obligation, but it is inadmissible in evidence to prove any right to the property affected by it. *VANI v. 30. ———— Mortgage—Suit on unregistered bond charging immovable property.—

The obligor of a bond bearing date the 20th January 1873 agreed to pay the obligee Rs. 50, together with interest on that amount at the rate of 2 per cent. per month, between the 2nd April 1871 and the 1st May 1874, and hypothecated immovable property as collateral security for such payment. On the 15th February 1879 the obligee sued the obligor on the bond to recover Rs. 50, being the principal amount and interest, from the hypothecated property. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (STUART, C.J., dissenting) that, for the purpose of registration, the value of the right assigned by the bond to the obligee in the property should be estimated by the amount secured for certain by the hypothecation, and that amount exceeding Rs. 100, the bond should have been registered. Per STUART, C.J.—That, for that purpose, the value of that right should be estimated by the principal amount of the bond, and, that amount being under Rs. 100, the bond did not require to be registered. *Nana bin Lakshman v. 31. ———— and s. 49—Occupancy tenancy—“Immoveable property”—Mortgage—Act I of 1868 (General Clauses Act), s. 2 (5).—The obligee of a bond, dated the 29th October 1869, sued to recover the amount due thereunder from the property hypothecated therein. By the terms of the bond the obligor agreed to pay the sum of Rs. 75, with interest at 2 per cent. per mensem, on the 12th May 1873. The amount thus secured exceeded Rs. 200. The property mortgaged was the tenant holding of the obligor. Held that the interest of a tenant in his holding was right or interest to or in immoveable property; that consequently such bond, which affirmed as a security a right of which the value, estimated by the amount secured, exceeded Rs. 100, ought to have been registered; that being unregistered it could not affect the “immoveable property comprised therein” or “be received in evidence of any transaction affecting” the same:

32. ———— Bond charging immovable property—Interest.—The obligors of a bond for the payment of money charging land agreed to pay the principal amount, Rs. 99, within six months after the execution of the bond, and to pay interest every month on the principal amount at the rate of 2 per cent., and that, in the event of default of payment of the interest in any month, the whole amount mentioned in the bond should become due at once. There was no stipulation preventing the obligors from repaying the loan at any time within the six months after which it was reclaimable. Held that the only amount certainly secured by the bond was the principal, and the bond did not therefore need to be registered. *AUMAD BAKSHI v. 33. ———— Bond—Mortgage.—

The immovable property charged by a bond payable by instalments, dated the 17th December 1866, was charged for both principal and interest, and the first instalment was payable within three years from the date of the bond with the accumulated interest, and the amount then becoming due exceeded Rs. 100. Held in a suit on the bond, that it was an instrument creating an interest in immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 and upwards, and under s. 17 of Act XX of 1866 required registration. *Rajpali Kuar v. 34. ———— Mortgage of immovable property—Registered and unregistered documents.—

Held by the majority of the Full Bench (STRAIGHT and OLDFIELD, JJ., dissenting) that the principal sum secured by a mortgage of immovable property is alone to be considered for the purpose of deciding whether the registration of the instrument of mortgage is optional or compulsory under the Registration Act, 1877. The ruling of the Full Bench in Himmat Singh v. Sewa Ram, I. L. R., 3 All., 157, overruled. Held therefore, where an instrument of mortgage by way of conditional sale, dated the 2nd July 1871, secured the payment of a principal sum of Rs. 72, with interest at Rs. 2 per cent. per mensem, on the 12th May 1873, the whole amount thus secured exceeding Rs. 100, that the registration of such instrument was optional and not compulsory. *HABIBULLAH v. 35. ———— Mortgage for sum just under Rs. 100 with interest.—

Where the plaintiff sued upon a mortgage to secure Rs. 98 with interest at Rs. 2 per month, it was objected that the mortgage was inoperative as being unregistered. Held that the mortgage was one to secure a sum under Rs. 100, and did not require registration. *PANCHI DASSI v. 48. ————— Assignment of mortgage—Extrinsic evidence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 91—Title to sue—Amendment of plaint.—An equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds was created on 15th August 1882. In March 1873 the mortgagee, P. D., executed an assignment of all his property and of all debts due to him, and all the securities therefor, to the plaintiff. The assignment also contained a power-of-attorney from the mortgagee to the plaintiff, "in the name of the said P. D., his executors, etc., but for the sole use and benefit of the said A. D. (the plaintiff), to ask demand, sue for, recover, and receive of and from all and every person or persons liable in that behalf all and every (inter alia) the sum and sums of money and debts hereby assigned or intended so to be or any of them or any part of them, to hold the same unto and to the use and behoof of the said A. mortgagee, were handed to the plaintiff, in accordance with the terms of an agreement to that effect contained in the assignment. The deed of assignment was not registered. On 13th August 1874 the plaintiff, as the assignee of the equitable mortgage, sued for foreclosure. The Court of first instance held that, as an assignment, the deed required registration, and that, not being registered, it could not be received in evidence; that under s. 91 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) no evidence, other than that contained in the document itself, could be given to prove the fact of the assignment; and that therefore the plaintiff had failed to show a title to sue as assignee of the equitable mortgage. The Court, however, permitted an amendment of the plaint, by which the plaintiff was described as suing "in his own name" and as the constituted attorney of P. D., and then allowed the deed of assignment to be put in as evidence of the power thereby conferred on the plaintiff to sue for and recover all debts due to P. D., and therefore to maintain the present suit in respect of the equitable mortgage. On appeal.—Held that, if the suit were regarded as the suit of P. D., the power-of-attorney contained in the deed did not enable the plaintiff to maintain the suit for P. D., inasmuch as it purported to enable the plaintiff to recover the debts mentioned in the deed on his own account only and not on account of P. D.; and on the other hand, if the suit were regarded as that of the plaintiff, the Court, by treating the power in the deed as enabling him to recover on his own account, virtually gave to that power the full effect of an assignment, and for that purpose such an assignment, whether legal or equitable, should be registered under ss. 17 and 49 of Act VIII of 1871. The Court, however, being of opinion that there had not been any deliberate intention on the part of the parties to the deed, to evade the law of registration, granted the plaintiff an assignment of the case, in order to complete his title as an equitable mortgagee, by obtaining registration, and putting in evidence a fresh assignment to himself from P. 49. ————— Debt of assignment covering payment of rent as interest—Limitation Act (IX of 1877), s. 20—Payment of interest as such—Mortgage—Payment of rents to mortgagee in lieu of interest on debt.—By a bond, dated the 15th July 1872, A assigned to B the "rebut of assessment" of certain lands belonging to him as security for a loan of Rs10,000. The bond provided that B should receive the assessment, and after making certain payments should retain the balance in lieu of interest until the principal debt should be repaid. The bond was not registered. The assessment was duly received by B until April 1887. In February 1877, B filed this suit to recover the principal sum from A personally, relinquishing his claim against the land, as the bond was not registered. A pleaded limitation. B contended that the receipt of the assessment in lieu of interest was a payment of "interest as such" within the meaning of s. 20 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1877) and that the last of such payment having been made within three years before suit, his claim was not barred. Held that the assignment of the

In support of this plea, the defendant produced from his possession the original sanad bearing the following endorsement by K: "You have passed me a receipt for the sanad. I have accordingly given you the ownership of the sanad. Therefore over the said sanad I have no right or title." The defendant offered to put in this endorsement, and also tendered the evidence of K's brother. This evidence was rejected by the Court, on the ground that the endorsement, which had the effect of extinguishing the grant, was not registered. Held that the endorsement did not require registration. It did not itself rescind the grant to K, nor constitute a re-grant to the defendant. It was simply an endorsement returning the sanad to the defendant, and therefore passed no interest in any property. HERAMBDEV DHARNIDHARDEV v. KASHINATH BHASKER. I. L. R., 14 Bom., 472

59. — Letters containing contract—Acknowledgment of receipt of consideration—Evidence Act, s. 91—Oral evidence, Admissibility of—"Instruments."—An advertisement appeared in the Bombay Gazette newspaper of the 9th March 1874, advertising for sale certain moveable and immovable property situate in the village of Angur, near Junnar, in the district of Poona. On reading that advertisement, plaintiff entered into a negotiation with the solicitors of the widow and administratrix of the owner of the said property for the purchase of a certain portion of it. On the 26th May 1874 the plaintiff wrote a letter to the solicitors, offering to purchase the said property for Rs 14,000 on certain conditions, and proposing to pay a deposit of Rs 1,000 as earnest-money if the offer was accepted. On the following day the solicitors informed plaintiff, in writing, that the widow accepted his offer, and requested him to deposit the earnest-money offered by him in his letter. Plaintiff accordingly deposited the earnest-money (Rs 1,000) with the solicitors on the same day, and obtained from them a receipt, bearing a one-anna receipt stamp. The receipt mentioned the money as being in part payment of the sum of Rs 14,000, the amount for which the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the property. Instead of completing the contract of sale with the plaintiff, and putting him in possession of the property, the widow sold it to other persons. In a suit of the nature of a suit for specific performance brought by the plaintiff, as first purchaser, against the widow and the other purchasers to set aside the subsequent sale of the property, and to compel the widow to execute a conveyance thereof to the plaintiff, the following documents were produced and tendered in evidence, viz., the advertisement of the 9th March, the plaintiff's letter of the 26th May (exhibit No. 3), the solicitors' reply (exhibit No. 4), and their receipt of the 27th May 1874 (exhibit No. 5), and it was contended that three of the four documents—viz., exhibits Nos. 3, 4, and 5—required registration under the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), s. 17. Held that the plaintiff's letter (exhibit 3) offering to purchase the property in question, and the letter of acceptance (exhibit 4) written on behalf of the vendor (defendant No. 1) by her attorneys, did not fall within cl. (b) of the 17th section of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), and were admissible in evidence to prove the contract of sale, although not registered. The acceptance of the plaintiff's offer was conditional on his payment of the Rs 1,000 as earnest-money, and therefore, until that sum was paid, no estate, legal or equitable, in the property passed to the plaintiff. Quere—Whether the letters between the parties (exhibits Nos. 3 and 4), even if they did constitute a complete contract for sale unincumbered by the necessity for the payment of the deposit by way of earnest, could be regarded as

Act—By two mortgage-bonds, dated respectively 25th July 1866 and 19th September 1870, certain lands were mortgaged to a firm of money lenders at Khadkala, carrying on business under the style of G and M. There were four partners in the firm, viz., G, M, P, and S. In 1874 G retired from the firm, and wrote three letters the effect of which was to transfer his share in the partnership to P and S. These lands were afterwards attached in execution of a money decree against one of the mortgagors (defendant 1). The plaintiff obplaintiff had no interest in the mortgage, and was not entitled to sue. The plaintiff relied (inter alia) in support of his title upon the letters (A, B, and C) whereby G had transferred his share in the assets of the firm to his (the plaintiff's) father S. These letters were objected to as inadmissible in evidence, not having been registered. Held that, indepen-

If we or they should prefer any claim, then the same is to be null. This release paper we have duly passed in writing jointly and severally and in sound mind. This document had not been registered, and was therefore inadmissible as evidence of the alleged partition. In cross examination of the plaintiff R, he was interrogated as to the circumstances under which the mortgage was made by M on the 13th January 1877. He said "I was present when the mortgage was made, but I was ill in bed. . . . This was on the 13th January 1877. . . . I did not say on that day that I had no claim to the property." He was then shown the above document, and admitted his signature. The document was then tendered in evidence, not as a release, but to contradict the witness. Held that the document was admissible for that purpose, as it was not a document which itself declared a right in immoveable property in the sense intended by s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It was an acknowledgment that there had, in time past, been a partition between the brothers who signed it and the defendant A, but it was not itself the instrument of partition. That an acknowledgment of a partition is distinct from the instrument of partition, is to be gathered from cl. (c) of s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). Had the terms of cl. (b) of that section been satisfied by a mere acknowledgment, cl. (c) would have been superfluous. Its operation is to require an acknowledgment in the form of a receipt to be registered, but not an acknowledgment in any other shape as distinguished from the instrument of the transaction. The word "declare" in s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) is to be taken in the same sense as the words "create, assign, etc." used in the same section, viz., as implying a definite change of legal relation to the property by an expression of will embodied in the document referred to. It implies a declaration of will, not a mere statement of a fact, and thus a deed of partition which causes a change of legal relation to the property divided amongst all the parties to it is a declaration in the intended sense; but a letter containing an admission, direct or inferential, that a partition once took place, does not "declare" a right within the meaning of the section. It is not the expression or declaration of will by which the right is constituted. Quære—Whether, if the above document were itself a release operating or intended to operate as a declared volition constituting or severing ownership, it could be received even for the purpose of contradicting a witness who had denied that he had previously made a statement inconsistent with his evidence. *SAKHARAM KRISHNAJI v. 65. ————— Release.—In June 1875 L executed a bond in favour of S, in which he mortgaged, amongst other property, a village called Chand Khara, as security for the payment of certain moneys. He subsequently sold such village to A, concealing the fact that it had been mortgaged to S. On this fact coming to the knowledge of A, he threatened L with a criminal prosecution, whereupon L proposed to S in writing that the security of a share in a village called Kelsa, which he alleged was his property, should be substituted for the security of Chand Khara. S accepted this proposal by a letter in which he referred to L's proposal in terms. It subsequently appeared that the share in Kelsa did not belong to L, but to another person. S having sued upon his bond, claiming to enforce thereunder a lien upon Chand Khara, A set up as a defence to the suit that S had agreed to substitute Kelsa for Chand Khara in the bond, producing S's letter as evidence of the agreement. Held that such letter operated as

This agreement was not in writing and registered. The mortgagee subsequently sought to enforce the hypothecation against the whole of the mortgaged property. Held that the agreement, being a new contract for a fresh consideration between persons who were not parties to the mortgage, was not, as between the parties to the mortgage, a release which the law required to be in writing and registered. *GURDIAL MAL v. In June 1885 he executed a document which recited that he and K had not been on amicable terms, and that his adoption had consequently been cancelled, and that she had adopted another son (defendant No. 1) to whom she had given all rights of heirship and declared that in consideration of R200 paid by K, he delivered back to her the rights which he had obtained by virtue of his adoption and heirship. This document was not registered under the General Registration Act (III of 1877), but was registered under s. 56 of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), which section applied to the district in which the transaction took place. K died in October 1885, and the plaintiff brought this suit, as adopted son, to recover the property of G. The first defendant, who had been adopted by K subsequently to the plaintiff's adoption, contended that he had been validly adopted, and that he was entitled to the property. He relied (inter alia) upon the release executed by plaintiff in June 1885. It was contended that the release in question was not admissible in evidence, not having been registered under the General Registration Act (III of

Defendants contended that the balance had been duly paid, and in support of that contention produced a receipt which, however, was held to be inadmissible in evidence for want of registration. —Lease exceeding one year—Option of renewal.—A lease for one year, containing an option of renewal for a further period of one year, is not a lease for a term exceeding one year within the meaning of cl. (d), s. 17 of the Registration Act, so as to render registration thereof compulsory. Certain correspondence passed between the plaintiff and the defendant relating to a lease of a flat in premises in occupation of the plaintiff which admittedly contained an agreement for a lease for one year with an option of renewal for another year. The terms in which the option was given were as follows: The defendant in one letter wrote, “So I expect you will give me the option of renewal for another year, respectively five months, on same terms.” To which the plaintiff replied, “You may have the option of retaining it (the flat) for another year on the same terms, but not for a shorter period.” In pursuance of an arrangement, the defendant had a draft lease prepared embodying the terms agreed on, which he sent to the plaintiff for approval, and which was in due course returned by him “approved.” The defendant then had the lease engrossed and properly stamped, but the plaintiff eventually refused to execute it, and it was never signed by the defendant. The option of renewal was given in the unexecuted lease in the following terms: “Also with option to renew for another twelve months certain.” The defendant having entered into possession and disputes having arisen, the plaintiff gave him notice to quit and sued to eject him, alleging that at the most he was a mere monthly tenant. The defendant pleaded that under the lease he was entitled to hold for a year. The year expired before the suit came on to be heard, and the defendant, not having exercised the option to renew, vacated the premises. At the hearing the defendant, in support of his case, tendered the correspondence and the stamped unexecuted lease. It was objected that the correspondence was inadmissible in evidence, because the option to renew made the period for which the lease was to run exceed one year, and therefore rendered registration compulsory. On behalf of the defendant it was urged that registration was unnecessary, as the option did not make the lease one for a longer period than one year, and that the stamped unexecuted lease must be treated as part of the correspondence. Held, following Hand v. Hall, L. R., 2 Ex. D., 355, that the existence of the option did not create a lease for a term exceeding one year within the meaning of cl. Lease from year to year—In a suit for possession of a piece of land and for rent of the same, the plaintiff produced in support of his claim two sarkhats or kabulats purporting to be executed in his favour by the defendants and dated respectively in January 1875 and June 1876. These documents were not registered. The first after reciting that the executant had taken the land from the plaintiff on a specified yearly rent and promised to pay the same yearly, proceeded as follows: "If the owner of the land wishes to have it vacated, he shall give me fifteen days' notice and I will vacate without making objection if I delay in vacating the land the owner can realize by recourse to law rent from me at the rate of Rs per annum." creating a right to obtain another document—Pleading admission Effect of admission in pleading of execution of contract—Evidence to prove an admitted document not necessary Evidence—By an agreement dated 2nd August 1880 the defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff a certain piece of land with a dwelling house for Rs 900. At the time of the execution of this agreement the plaintiff gave to the defendant Rs 1000 namely one hundred as earnest (i.e.) at time of the execution of this bargain paper. And as to the remaining Rs 900 namely one thousand and eight hundred the same are duly to be paid to me within one month from this day when you will get the deed (or) document made in your favour. And all the expenditure in respect of the deed (or) documents and transferring (the property) to your name you are duly to make on your account. On these terms this informal bargain paper, having been written is agreed to and delivered. The plaintiff sued for specific performance and tendered the agreement in evidence although unregistered. Held that the document although unregistered was admissible in evidence under cl (h) of s 17 of the Registration Act III of 1877. Being unregistered it could not create or assign the interest intended by the parties to be transferred and being thus incapable of carrying out the primary intention of the parties the agreement became one "merely creating a right to obtain another document which would when executed" effect the desired purpose if the execution were accompanied with registration. ARU BUDGAYDA v. NARHARI ANNAJEE. [I. L. R., 3 Bom., 21]

3. ———— Lease for one year—Lease exceeding one year.—A kabuliati dated the 6th May 1880, and executed by the lessee of a house in favour of the lessors, set forth that the house was let to the former at an annual rent of R3 for a term of one year. It also contained this stipulation: "I (the lessee) do declare that I shall continue to pay the annual rent every year, and that, if I should fail to pay the rent in any year, the owners of the house shall be at liberty to recover the rent through the Court." The lease was not registered. In a suit by the lessors against the lessee for possession of the house and for R7-8 arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that, according to the right construction of the lease, he was entitled to occupy the house and the lessors were not entitled to eject him therefrom, so long as he paid the annual rent of R3; that, under had duly paid rent at the agreed rate from the 6th May 1880 to the 6th May 1884; and that, under these circumstances, the plaintiffs were not entitled to either of the reliefs claimed. Held that the lease was for one year only, and thus falling under s. 18 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), it was admissible in evidence without registration; that the defendant had been a mere tenant-at-will since the expiry of the year 1880-81; and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to possession of the house. lessor against the lessee for arrears of rent, the lessee did not deny that he was a tenant of the lessor, but disputed the extent of his holding and the rate of rent. Held that the entry in the book of the lessor did not, although signed by the lessee, amount to a lease or to an agreement for a lease, but to an admission only, and could therefore be used as evidence against the lessee, although neither stamped nor registered. 7. ———— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 8 and 54—Assignment of secured on land—Unregistered instrument of assignment.—In 1879 the defendants executed a hypothecation-deed, which was registered to secure the repayment with interest of a loan of R87. In 1884, the obligee transferred his rights to the plaintiff, in consideration of R70, under an instrument which was not registered. At the date of transfer the debt amounted with interest to R129, but the plaintiff now sued to recover R129, principal and interest due on the hypothecation-deed of transfer was not compulsory, and the plaintiff was not precluded from proving the instrument of transfer and establishing his rights thereon of its not having been registered. There is in law no limitation for the actual fact of registration, provided that the requirements of the Act have been complied with in the matters for which a limitation of time is provided. Mukhun Lall Panday v. The document having been subsequently put in evidence it was contended that it was inadmissible on the ground that under s 85 of the Registration Act the donor being dead the execution of the document must be admitted by the representative of the deceased and that an admission by one out of three representatives is not an admission within the meaning of the Act. Held that assuming that the three sons of the deceased donor ought to have joined in admitting the execution of the document and that the registering officer was in error in considering one of them the due representative of the deceased such error was a defect in procedure in the course of registration and the registration was not rendered invalid by reason thereof. PAKHAN & KUNHAMMED I L R., 23 Mad, 580

10 ———— and ss 74 and 77—Denial of execution—What is—Non appearance—Specific Relief Act I of 1877, s 45—A by an indenture of mortgage, dated 15th March 1887, mortgaged certain property to S to secure the repayment of Rs 1500 within two months. The deed was duly lodged for registration, but A (the mortgagor) neglected to appear at the registration office to admit execution. A summons was accordingly issued against him under s 36 of the Registration Act III of 1877 to enforce his attendance, and was duly served upon him as required by s 39. He however, did not obey the summons, and neglected to attend the Sub Registrar's office on the day appointed. He subsequently went away to Arabia without admitting execution and was not expected to return to Bombay. S (the mortgagee) then applied to the Sub Registrar to treat A's neglect to attend and admit execution as equivalent to a denial of execution and to “refuse to register” the deed under the provisions of s 35 (last clause), in order that an application might be made to the Registrar, under s 73, for the purpose of establishing the right of S (the mortgagee) to have the deed registered. The Sub Registrar, however, considered that he could not treat A's non appearance as a denial of execution. The father and the major son executed a mortgage of the joint family property, the father describing himself in the bond as acting for himself and as guardian and next friend of the minor son. The bond was registered on the admission of the father and the major son. Held, in a suit by the mortgagees for sale, that there being no dispute as to the fact of the debt for which the mortgage was executed, and it not being alleged that such debt was incurred for any purpose which would exempt the son from the pious obligation of paying it, that there was no defect in the registration of the bond in suit which would prevent its affecting the share of the minor son. *Shankar Das v. ——— s. 47—Priority—Possession—Notice.—The plaintiff purchased certain land by a deed dated the 8th April 1879. The deed was registered on the 26th August of the same year. The defendant purchased the same land by a deed dated the 14th June 1879. It was registered on the same day. That deed recited that the land was in the possession of the plaintiff as tenant. Both the deeds were optionally registrable. The Subordinate Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim, and awarded the land to the defendant. His decree was affirmed, on appeal, by the District Judge on the ground that the defendant's deed was registered before the plaintiff's deed. On appeal to the High Court, —Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the land. Both the deeds having been registered according to law, they operated from their respective dates of execution as provided by s. 47 of the Registration Act III of 1877. Held also that the defendant had notice of the plaintiff's equitable title to the land. *SANTAYA MANGARSAYA v. —Verbal contract between Hindus—Subsequent registered deed.—Where a lien by verbal contract and deposit of title-deeds of immoveable property in the Island of Bombay by a Hindu in favour of a Hindu was created before the 1st of January 1865, when the first general Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into force, and a Gujarati document (unregistered) was subsequently (on the 13th of June 1865) executed by the giver of the lien which set out its particulars, and acknowledged the receipt of the loan on account of which the lien was given, it was held that the original oral contract of lien, being in itself a perfected transaction, was not merged in or invalidated by the subsequent document, and that therefore the fact of the latter not being registered did not affect the validity of the prior transaction. S. 48 of Act XX of 1866, which enacted that all instruments duly registered under that Act and relating to moveable or immoveable property should take effect against any oral agreement relating to the same property, did not apply to oral agreements completed before Act XVI of 1864 came into force. *JIVANDAS KESHAVJI v. the Registration Act (VIII of 1871) and therefore the registration of a document of title which has been procured in fraud of a party possessing a prior equitable title or with actual notice of his prior equitable title does not deprive such party of his priority. Registrar cannot confer validity upon an instrument which is ultra vires or illegal or fraudulent. The reason for the exception made by s 48 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871) in favour of an oral agreement accompanied by possession is that by such possession on the part of who rely on a subsequent registered deed had or might if they had been reasonably vigilant have had previously to their entering into their contract with the vendor and to their taking a conveyance notice by the fact of such possession that there was some prior claim to the property. Therefore where there is actual notice of a prior oral agreement although unaccompanied by possession the object of the Legislature is fully attained. Hicks v Powell 4 Ch 741. Futlehand Sahoo v Leelunber Singh Dase 14 Moore's I A 129 9 B L R 433 and Valaji Inaji v Thomas I L R 1 Bom 194 distinguished. The assignment to the plaintiff was executed after the Registration Act (XX of 1866) became law. Held per BITTLESTON, INNES, and COLLETT, JJ., that the assignment, being an instrument operating to create an interest in immoveable property, and as such requiring to be registered under s. 17 of Act XX of 1866, was not admissible in evidence in a suit to enforce the personal obligation only. Per SCOTLAND, C.J.—That an instrument which has the two-fold operation of a simple contract or bond to pay a debt and a collateral mortgage security for the debt is admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the simple contract debt. *ACHOO BAXAHAM v. 37. — Admissibility in evidence—Suit for damages for breach of covenants in unregistered deed—Document containing covenants for title—Act III of 1877, s. 17—Estoppel.—S L, by a deed of gift of 16th February 1847, granted and assured to S, his daughter, certain immoveable property. By a subsequent unregistered deed of gift of 5th July 1865, S L purported, in consideration of natural love and affection, to grant and convey the same property, the value of which exceeded Rs 100, to B R, the husband of S, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. The last-mentioned deed contained covenants, on the part of S L, his heirs, executors, and administrators, with B R, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, for title to "the hereditaments and premises hereinbefore expressed to be hereby granted and assured unto and to the use of the said B R, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns." S died in the lifetime of B R, who in 1867 mortgaged the premises comprised in the deed of 15th July 1865, and died in 1868. In 1870 the mortgagee sold the premises by auction, under the power of sale contained in the mortgage-deed; the plaintiff became the purchaser; and the mortgagee, on 24th March 1871, executed to him a conveyance of the premises, which were then in the possession of the surviving members of the family of B R and S. The plaintiff, having failed in a suit for ejectment against the parties in possession, who relied on the prior gift to S, sued the representatives of S L for damages for breach of the covenants for title contained in the unregistered deed of the 15th July 1865. Held that though, as in Tukaram v. Khandaji, 6 Bom., O. C., 134, and Sangappa v. Basappa, 7 Bom., A. C., 1, an unregistered document requiring registration may be admitted in evidence for certain purposes, yet it cannot be looked at so far as it affects the immoveable property comprised therein, nor so far as it is evidence of any transaction affecting such property, and that, excluding the part of the document of 15th July 1865 which purported to be the conveyance to B R, the covenant for title sued on in the present suit was itself ambiguous and uncertain; and there being nothing to connect the premises, to which the covenant related, with the premises conveyed to the plaintiff, no breach of the covenant sued upon had been proved. The Court being precluded by the operation of the Registration Act (III of 1877) from looking at the deed of 15th July 1865 so far as it was a conveyance, the defendants were not estopped from contending that, nothing having passed under it to B R, nothing had

There is nothing in that section which says that no contract purporting to create or transfer any right title or interest in land shall be recognised by the Civil Court unless reduced to writing. Held also that there was no reason why plaintiff should not be permitted to show that non registration was owing, not to any fault of his own but to the fraudulent conduct of his adversary. HEMALOODDEY v CHOWDERY ABDOOL SUTTAH 8 W. 53. ————— Unregistered document—Admissibility of other evidence where document is not admissible—Admission.—The plaintiff sued to recover certain immoveable property sold to him by the first defendant by a registered deed of sale executed on the 23rd of July 1868. The second, third, and fourth defendants pleaded a sale to them by the same party, the first defendant, on the 23rd March 1867, and that the first defendant, after receiving consideration in full, had improperly refused to have their deed of sale registered. The provisions of s. 49 of the Registration Act of 1866 precluded the reception in evidence of the prior unregistered instrument of conveyance, but the lower Courts held that certain admissions made by first defendant in an inquiry held before the registration officer were admissible in evidence to prove the sale to third and fourth defendants. The suit was therefore dismissed with costs. Upon special appeal, —Held by INNES and KINDERSLEY, JJ., that the admissions made by first defendant were evidence against plaintiff, as made by one from whom plaintiff derived his title, but that the provisions of the Registration Act precluded any effect being given to the sale evidenced by such admissions; there being a writing, the sale could not be proved by mere oral evidence. By INNES, J.—The term "instrument," in s. 49 of Act XX of 1866, is used on the understanding that the writing is not merely evidence of the transaction, but is the transaction itself. *SOMU GURUKHAL v. Subsequently to the making of the agreement, viz., on the 17th January 1884, the plaintiff caused a writing to be prepared, which, as he alleged, contained the terms of the lease agreed on, and, having signed it, handed it over to the defendants. The defendants did not sign it, and the document remained with them. No certificate of sale was filed with it; but plaintiff subsequently produced one, dated the 8th July 1873, and the Court admitted it in evidence. Defendant submitted that the suit should be dismissed, as no certificate was produced by the plaintiff with the plaint. The first Court made a decree in the plaintiff's favour. The Court of Appeal reversed that decree, and dismissed the suit, holding that the certificate ought not to have been received in evidence by the lower Court. The widow set up a will made by the deceased in her favour; the brother sued the widow for a declaration that the will was a forgery, but the Court held that it was genuine. He now sued the widow and daughter on the above instrument to recover his agreed share of the moveable property of the deceased. The defendants, however, alleged that at the date of attachment the property did not belong to S and P, as they had sold it to them (the defendants) on the 22nd January 1891, under a contract of sale of that date. Their contract had not been registered. Held that by cl. (b) of s. 17 of the Indian Registration Act (III of 1877) the contract needed registration if it was intended that it should affect the land (s. 49). Not being registered, it did not operate to transfer the ownership, and could not be received in evidence of any transaction affecting the land, i.e., it could not be used to show that the ownership had passed from the vendor to the purchaser. The property in question was therefore, at the date of attachment, the property of S and P, and under the attachment and sale in execution it passed to the plaintiff. HORMASJI MANEKJI DADACHANJI v. The lease was not registered. After the lessee had held the land under the lease for two years, a suit for possession was brought against him, and the lessor and he were dispossessed and obliged to pay mesne profits. He then brought this suit against the lessor under the above clause in the lease. Held that the lease, being unregistered, was not admissible in evidence, and could not be looked at. A sold the same land to the plaintiff by a deed of sale, dated 1st February 1872. The deed was registered, its registration being compulsory. It was unaccompanied with possession. In 1882 B obtained possession of the land from A's sons, and sold it to the defendant by a sale-deed dated 14th October 1882. This deed was registered and accompanied with possession. In 1883 the plaintiff sued for possession of the land in dispute, relying on his registered deed of sale of 1st February 1872. The defendant relied on his vendor's sale-deed on the 15th July 1871. Held that under Act VIII of 1871, which governed the present case, there could be no competition between the sale-deeds of 1871 and 1872, the registration of the one being optional, whilst that of the other was compulsory. The registration of the plaintiff's deed therefore did not give it priority over the earlier deed under which the defendant claimed. Held also that the defendant's vendor by merely omitting to take possession of the land on his purchase was not guilty of any positive fraud or of any concealment or negligence so gross as to amount to fraud that would entitle the plaintiff to relief against him. a usufructuary mortgage. In 1887 defendant 2 obtained a decree on his mortgage, and in execution brought to sale and himself became the purchaser of the mortgaged premises. The plaintiff, who was in possession under the mortgage of 1885, prayed in this suit that the prior mortgage be declared fraudulent and void, and the sale in execution be set aside, and in the alternative that she be declared entitled to redeem the prior mortgage. The plaint was stamped as in a redemption suit, and the Court of first appeal passed a decree for redemption. Held that the suit should be dismissed, since after the sale of the mortgaged premises in execution of the decree obtained by defendant 2, the only right which remained to the puisne mortgagee was the right to retain possession until her mortgage should be redeemed. Seemle—Per BEST, J.—It is open to a plaintiff who is not a party to the transaction in respect of which allegations are made to come into Court seeking relief in the alternative, dependent upon what may be found by the Court to be the true facts of the case. Quare—Whether the Court can pass a decree for redemption when the plaint seeks only a declaration of the right to redeem. *PERUMAL v. 21. ——— Alternative reliefs—Suit for possession alleging partition, but failing to prove it—Variance between pleading and proof.—The plaintiff sued to recover possession of the northern half of a certain plot of land, alleging that it had fallen to his share at a partition made in 1887, and that he was illegally dispossessed thereof by the defendant in 1893. He also prayed in the alternative that, if the alleged partition were not proved, the land should be partitioned, and his share awarded to him. The suit was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that the alleged partition was not proved, and that no order for partition could be made in the face of the plaintiff's distinct allegation that it had already taken place. Held that the plaintiff's allegation of partition did not preclude him from seeking the alternative relief on the strength of his general title. *NINGAPPA v. 1. ——— Disturbing religious assembly—Penal Code, s. 296—Mahomedan law—Hanifa and Shafia schools—Right to say "Amin" loudly during worship—Bengal Civil Courts Act (VI of 1871), s. 24—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 57 (1)—Mahomedan Ecclesiastical law—Judicial notice.—A masjid was used by the members of a sect of Mahomedans called the Hanifis, according to whose tenets the word "Amin" should be spoken in a low tone of voice. While the Hanifis were at prayers, R, a Mahomedan of another sect, entered the masjid, and in the course of the prayers, according to the tenets of his sect, called out "Amin" in a loud tone of voice. For this act he was convicted of voluntarily disturbing an assembly engaged in religious worship, an offence punishable under s. 296 of the Penal Code. The Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) ordered the case to be re-tried, and that, in re-trying it, the Magistrate should have regard to the following questions, namely:—(1) Was there an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship? (2) Was such assembly, in fact, disturbed by the accused? (3) Was such disturbance caused by acts and conduct on the part of the accused by which he intended to cause such disturbance, or which acts and conduct, at the time of such acts and conduct, he knew or believed to be likely to cause such disturbance? Held by MAHMOOD, J., that the discussion occasioned by the act of the accused having presumably taken place during the interval when the prayers were not going on, the assembly was not at that time "engaged in the performance of religious worship," and was not "disturbed" within the meaning of s. 296 of the Penal Code; that in reference to the terms of s. 39 of the Code, the accused did not disturb the assembly "voluntarily;" that he was justified by the Mahomedan ecclesiastical law in entering the mosque, and joining the congregation in saying the word "Amin" loudly if he thought fit, and his conduct fell within the purview of s. 59 of the Penal Code, and was therefore not an offence under s. 296. Beatty v. Gillbanks, L. R., 9 Q. B. D., 308, referred to. Also per MAHMOOD, J., that having regard to the guarantee given by the Legislature in s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 (Bengal Civil Courts Act) that the Mahomedan law shall be administered in all questions regarding "any religious usage or institution," the Court was bound by s. 57 of Act I of 1872 (Evidence Act) to take judicial notice of the Mahomedan ecclesiastical law, and the rules of that

2. ———— Jews — Beni-Israelite community in Bombay—Dismissal of officers of the community by resolutions passed at a meeting—Such officers to be given opportunity of defending themselves—Domestic tribunal—Jurisdiction of Court.—The plaintiffs and the defendants were members of the Beni-Israelite community worshipping at a certain synagogue in Bombay. The administration of the synagogue and of the funds was vested in a mukadam or headman and four managers, a treasurer, and a crier. The mukadam succeeded to the office by family right according to the custom of the community, but in matters of management he was bound to keep within his powers, which were co-ordinate with those of his colleagues. The first defendant was the mukadam, the second defendant was the hazan or headle, and the third defendant was the samost or crier. The first defendant had succeeded to the office of mukadam as the nearest lineal descendant of the founder of the synagogue. The second defendant was appointed by the community, and it did not appear on what terms he held office. The third defendant was merely a paid official of a subordinate character. Disputes arose in the community, which became divided into two parties, to one of which the three defendants belonged. At a meeting of the community held on the 28th October 1884, which was attended by a majority of the community, resolutions were passed, dismissing all three defendants from office; and their dismissal was formally communicated to them by a letter, dated the 30th October. It did not appear that they had been given any notice that the question of their dismissal was to be discussed at the meeting. They had received only the ordinary notice that a meeting was to be held. The defendants refused to recognize the authority of the resolutions passed at the meeting of the 28th October, and the plaintiffs accordingly filed this suit, praying for a declaration that the defendants did not occupy any official position in the synagogue and for the recovery of certain property in their hands. Held that the first defendant had not been duly dismissed. He held the office of mukadam not merely at the will of the community, but as long as he duly performed the duties of his office. He could not be dismissed without an opportunity of making his defence and explaining his conduct, and he had been given no notice that his conduct and his dismissal were to be discussed at the meeting of the 28th October. Held also that the second defendant had not been duly dismissed. No evidence was given as to the exact terms on which he held office; but he was entitled to notice, and to an opportunity of defending himself before dismissal. Held, as to the third defendant, that he had been duly dismissed. He was merely a subordinate officer, and the managers had the power of dismissing him. All the managers, save the first and second defendants, concurred in dismissing him, and in doing so they were within their right. RELINQUISHMENT OF, OR OMISSION TO SUE FOR, PORTION OF CLAIM.

1. ————— Splitting cause of action—Accidental or involuntary omission—Mistake—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—The words “if a plaintiff relinquish or omit to sue for any portion of his claim, a suit for the portion so relinquished or omitted shall not afterwards be entertained,” in s. 7, Act VIII of 1859, plainly include accidental or involuntary omission, as well as acts of deliberate relinquishment. The correct test when a second suit is brought for something omitted to be sued for in a previous suit is whether the claim in the new suit is in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit. Where a suit was brought for a large amount of property, consisting partly of Government paper which, it was alleged, had been fraudulently appropriated by the defendant and the plaintiff obtained a decree,—Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that the plaintiff was precluded by s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 from afterwards bringing a fresh suit on a piece of Government paper which might have been, but by mistake was not, included in the previous suit. BUZLOOR RUHEEM v. 2. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Statement of intention not to relinquish.—The words of s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code were imperative against the splitting of a claim into parts. The words “in bar of suit” referred to any subsequent suit brought for the portion of the claim omitted in the previous suit, and not to such previous suit itself. A plaintiff who omits to sue for a portion of his claim stating that he does not relinquish it, but means to sue again for it, can gain nothing by such a statement. Neither can such a statement furnish a reason for holding the first suit to be barred. SOONDER BEBEE v. KHILLOO MULL alias RAM LALL 2 N. W., 90

3. ————— Suit for arrears of rent for successive years—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—S. 7, Act VIII of 1859, did not require a plaintiff having several distinct causes of action against one defendant to comprise them all in one suit subject to the hazard of forfeiting all those not included in the first suit. If a plaintiff, from negligence or other cause, omits to prefer a portion of his claim which seeks to charge the land, or, having preferred it, is content to accept an imperfect adjudication, or one which awards him only a portion of the relief claimed, he cannot afterwards bring forward in a fresh suit matter which might well have been then disposed of. MULUK FUQUEER BUKSH v. their judgment creditors. At this attachment one of the plaintiffs filed objections under s 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in consequence of which the property was released from attachment. The plaintiffs thereupon brought two suits under s 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, one in respect of the mortgage interest and the other in respect of the house. Held by the Full Bench (AICKMAN, J, dissentiente) that the first essential of the plaintiffs' cause of action was the order made under s 283 of the Code of Civil

Procedure, and that, until that order was made, they had no cause of action. The cause of action was the order under s. 280, which had been obtained by M, and the right and title of the plaintiffs' to bring the subjects of attachment to sale in execution of their decree. The title or titles which the defendant might prove formed no part of the plaintiffs' cause of action, nor would the defendant's allegation of different titles in herself to different portions of the property split up the plaintiffs' cause of action into different and distinct causes of action. Similarly the fact that the plaintiffs' judgment-debtors held or were alleged to hold portions of the property under different titles would not split up the plaintiffs' cause of action into different causes of action. S. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure has nothing to do with the evidence which may be necessary or may be produced to support or defend a cause of action or with the desire of a plaintiff to bring more suit than one, or with the devolution of title where the cause of action relates to land or other kind of property. In the above case consequently s. 43 of the Code barred the later of the plaintiff's two suits. Held also that, where two suits are filed on the same day, it must be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that they were presented and admitted in the order in which their numbers appear in the register of civil suits prescribed by s. 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Kaleskar Prasad v. They gave to plaintiff an order on their agents to pay Rs. 2,500 from the profits of certain land, and promised to pay the balance within a month. Plaintiff filed two suits, one for Rs. 2,500 and the other for the balance of the debt. Defendants pleaded that both suits should be dismissed, as brought in contravention of the requirements of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The lower Courts held that there were two distinct causes of action, and decreed both claims. Held, on second appeal, that plaintiff had only one cause of action, and that the decree in one of the suits must be reversed. *APPASAMI v. On the 30th September the defendants extorted a release from the plaintiff whereby the plaintiff's claims against them arising out of the two transactions mentioned and all other transactions between them were released. On the 23rd November the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants, and, in the plaint, after stating the fact of the settlement of 1st July 1878, the balance found due therein to the plaintiff, the extortion of the release, and the misappropriation of the sums due to the plaintiff by the defendants as the cause of action, prayed for cancellation of the release and for recovery of the amount due to the plaintiff by the defendants under the settlement of 1st July 1878. Held, in a suit to wind up the partnership of July and August 1878, that the plaintiff was not bound by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have included in his former suit his claim arising out of that partnership and that the former suit being in substance a suit upon the account stated on 1st July 1878, and not as to the logs, that a claim for their value might have been included in the former suit, since their conversion was effected when the plaintiff was dispossessed of the land upon which they lay, and that, under s. 43, no claim could now be made in respect of them. Held (1) that the proceeds obtained from cutting and removing saleable timber on the land were in the nature of mesne profits, and these having been taken since the institution of the previous suit, plaintiff could recover; (2) that a trespass on a piece of land is by itself no proof of any conversion of movables lying upon the land at the time that the trespass takes place; that, notwithstanding plaintiff's eviction from the land, possession of the timber lying stored upon it should be presumed to have continued in him in the absence of proof of any act on the part of the defendant with special reference to such timber and showing unequivocally that the plaintiff was entirely deprived of the use of them; and that conversion of the logs was not effected by the trespass, but only by their removal subsequently to the institution of the previous suit; and (3) that the causes of action now relied on were therefore different from those relied on before, and the previous suit did not operate as a bar to the present claim under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *MOXI v. This suit was dismissed on the ground that no dispossession had taken place, the plaintiff being referred to a Small Cause Court for his damages. No appeal was made against this decision. In March 1887 the plaintiff sued these defendants in the Munsif's Court for possession of 5 bighas 6 cottahs of land and for mesne profits, and obtained a decree for possession of 3 bighas 6 cottahs of land with mesne profits; possession of the 1 bigha, the subject of the suit of 1886, being included in the 3 bighas 6 cottahs decreed. In the meantime, A had committed default, and the patni was again sold for arrears of rent. The zamindar drew out from the Collectorate the amount due to him. C, who had bought B's right, title, and interest in his decree, now sued A for recovery of the surplus proceeds of sale in the hands of the Collector, and obtained a decree. The plaintiffs on the 22nd Cheyt 1277 (3rd April 1871) instituted a suit for the recovery of the value of fish taken by the defendants on the 27th Bysack 1276 (8th May 1869), the day of dispossession; but the suit was compromised. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendants for the value of the fruit upon such trees, alleging that on the 19th June 1879 the defendants had wrongfully taken such fruit. Held that, as the cause of action—i.e., the taking of such fruit—was in both suits identical, and the plaintiffs not having claimed the value of such fruit as mesne profits in the first suit, the second suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877. DEVI DIAT SINGH v. S sold the half share held by her to M; some portion of the mouzah being in the possession of the other defendants, S and D sued them to recover it and also for mesne profits, and obtained a decree. The defendants appealed, whereupon S filed a solehnamah. The decree was upheld, however, by the lower Appellate Court. In special appeal the Sudder Court refused to give the renouncing plaintiff any decree for mesne profits of a share. The plaintiff, who had then come of age, was not represented in the litigation in the Court. Shortly afterwards he sued S and M to set aside the sale to M, and obtained a decree. On D's death, M obtained possession of the land which had been the subject of the suit by S and D. The plaintiff now sued to recover a half share of the land sued for by S and D, and of the mesne profits recovered or recoverable by M under the decrees of the Sudder Court and the lower Courts, and to set aside the solehnamah. Held that as to M the suit was not

The mortgagor refused to deliver possession of the property, and the mortgagee sued him to enforce specific performance of the contract to deliver possession, and obtained a decree. At the time this suit was brought, the mortgagee had been kept out of possession of the property for two years, during which time the mortgagor had taken the mesne profits. The mortgagee subsequently sued the mortgagor to recover the mesne profits of the mortgaged property for those two years. Held that, as the mortgagee might in the former suit, in addition to seeking the specific performance of the mortgage-contract, have asked for such mesne profits by way of compensation for the breach of it; and as the claim for possession and mesne profits were in respect of the same cause of action,—i.e., the breach of the contract to give possession,—the second suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877. LALJI MAL v. He obtained a decree declaring his title to the share claimed. L, one of the sons of M, had fraudulently concealed from and kept S in ignorance of the fact that previously to the suit he had realized Rs. 624 under the mortgage. On this fact coming to S's knowledge, he sued the sons of M to recover his share of that sum. Held that the second suit was not barred by s 7 of Act VIII of 1859. *Bulwant Singh v. Accordingly, where a plaintiff had sued to obtain his share of an estate in land, in consequence of having been wrongfully dispossessed by the defendant, whom he afterwards in the present suit sued for his share of personal property, being entitled to both under a will, it was held that the subsequent suit was not barred by reason of the non-claim in the prior one. S. 7, Civil Procedure Code, requires that every suit should include the whole of the claim arising from the same cause of action; but although the Civil Procedure Code allows of claims arising from different causes of action being included in the same plaint, there is no provision of law which makes it obligatory on the plaintiff to do so. *PRAGJI RUDARJI v. Having attained his majority plaintiff now sued for similar arrears alleged to be due in respect of the previous Fasls 1287, 1288, and 1289 contending that the relinquishment of a portion of a claim in a suit by a guardian could not preclude a suit for the portion relinquished from being subsequently brought, on the attainment of his majority, by the person on whose behalf the guardian had acted. 67. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 43—Act VIII of 1859, s. 7—Suit for partition of portion of property.—If a person intentionally omit to sue for any portion of his claim, the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877, as well as the provisions of s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859, bar the institution of a second suit for the portion so omitted, so that, where a family property consisted of lands as well as debts, and the plaintiff at first sued for a partition of debts only, and then compromised and withdrew the suit without the permission of the Court, it was held that his second suit to demand a partition of the whole property was not maintainable. *UKHA v. 68. ———— Different cause of action—Suit for share of undivided property—Subsequent suit for partition of whole of the property.—In applying the provisions of s. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, the first thing to be considered is whether the cause of action in the second suit is the same as the cause of action in the first. If the cause of action be the same, the second suit is barred in respect of any portion of the claim omitted from the first suit, but not otherwise. Accordingly where the plaintiff, as a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued for a share of a particular portion of the family property leaving the rest undivided, and his suit was rejected, as it had not been brought for his whole share, it was held that the suit was no bar to a second suit to have the whole property divided, as the causes of action in the two suits were entirely distinct. *KAKAJI BIN RANOJI v. The cause of action was stated to have arisen in 1881 when partition was demanded by the Zamorin and refused by the defendant. In some instances the tenants in occupation represented the family, a member of which was at one time admitted by the Zamorin under a demise or kanom, and had attorned to the defendant; in other instances they were shown to have been admitted by the defendant on paying off the former tenant who had been admitted by the Zamorin. It appeared that the Zamorin had previously brought suits and obtained decrees for partition of certain parcels of land as belonging equally to the two stanoms, the defendant in each suit being the present defendant and the tenant in occupation of the land then in question.

The defendants subsequently redeemed the mortgaged lands. The plaintiffs then filed a suit to recover their share of the lands so redeemed. Held that they were entitled to maintain such suit, as the mortgaged lands had not been available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit. BALKRISHNA VITHAL v. HARI SHANKAR 8 Bom., A. C., 64

72. ———— Omission of mortgaged field in suit for partition—Subsequent suit.—In 1861 the plaintiff brought a general partition suit (No. 1363) to recover his share of the family property in the possession of the first defendant, and did not include in that claim a field then in the possession of a mortgagee. The field was subsequently redeemed by the first defendant, who again mortgaged it to the second defendant. The plaintiff then filed the present suit to recover his share in the field. The first Court allowed the plaintiff's claim, but the District Judge on appeal threw it out, on the ground that it was barred both by s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, and by the "law of limitation." The Judge based the latter finding on certain allegations made by the plaintiff in suit No. 1363, and in another suit brought by him against the first defendant and the then mortgagee of the field, from which allegations the Judge inferred a separation between the plaintiff and the first defendant. Held in special appeal that the claim was not barred by s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the mortgaged field was not available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit, No. 1363 of 1861. The true question for consideration in cases of this kind is whether the former suit was one in which the plaintiff might have recovered precisely that which he seeks to recover in the second, and where the former suit is one for an actual division of property, the plaintiff is not bound in it to ask for a

On the 19th September 1872 A mortgaged a 1 anna 4 pies share of E to H. On the 20th September 1872 A, B, C, and D mortgaged their shares in E and F, together with property in the district of Tirhoot, to the plaintiff. On the 24th March 1873 A mortgaged his share in E and F to J. On the 13th November 1874 A and B mortgaged their shares in E to K. On the 25th March 1874 J obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the interests of A and B were purchased on the 5th January 1875 by L. On the 17th April 1874 M, to whom the first mortgage had been assigned, obtained a decree and attached the property mortgaged. L objected that he had already purchased the interest, of A, and, on the objection being allowed, M instituted a suit against L for a declaration of priority, and obtained a decree on the 9th August 1876. In execution of this decree, the property first mortgaged was sold on the 4th March 1878, and after satisfying the mortgage a surplus of Rs. 7,664 remained. After the institution of the first suit and before L's purchase, the plaintiff instituted a suit upon his mortgage in the Tirhoot Court without having obtained leave to include that portion of the mortgaged property situate in the Bhagulpore district. On the 17th July 1874 a decree was made in this suit. On the 17th January 1877 K obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the shares of A and B in E were sold, and purchased on the 3rd September 1877 by N. The plaintiff had his decree transferred for execution to the Bhagulpore Court, and he attached the surplus sale-proceeds and a 1 anna 9 gundas share in E. This attachment was withdrawn on the objection of L, who drew out the surplus sale-proceeds. The share purchased by N was also released from attachment. The plaintiff now sued L, N, and the mortgagors for a declaration that his decree of the 17th July 1874 affected the E property, to recover the surplus sale-proceeds from L and, in case the decree should not be valid to the extent mentioned, for a decree declaring his prior lien on the property in E. Code, 1877, s. 43—Suit on mortgage of property in different districts—Former suit on one portion only.—A, B, C, and D were the proprietors of a 2 annas 13 gundas share in mouzah E, and also of a 2 annas 13 gundas share in mouzah F, both in the district of Bhagulpore. On the 19th September 1872 A mortgaged a 1 anna 4 pies share of E to H. On the 20th September 1872 A, B, C, and D mortgaged their shares in E and F, together with property in the district of Tirhoot, to the plaintiff. On the 24th March 1873 A mortgaged his share in E and F to J. On the 13th November 1874 A and B mortgaged their shares in E to K. On the 25th March 1874 J obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the interests of A and B were purchased on the 5th January 1875 by L. On the 17th April 1874 M, to whom the first mortgage had been assigned, obtained a decree and attached the property mortgaged. L objected that he had already purchased the interest, of A, and, on the objection being allowed, M instituted a suit against L for a declaration of priority, and obtained a decree on the 9th August 1876. In execution of this decree, the property first mortgaged was sold on the 4th March 1878, and after satisfying the mortgage a surplus of Rs. 7,664 remained. After the institution of the first suit and before L's purchase, the plaintiff instituted a suit upon his mortgage in the Tirhoot Court without having obtained leave to include that portion of the mortgaged property situate in the Bhagulpore district. On the 17th July 1874 a decree was made in this suit. On the 17th January 1877 K obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the shares of A and B in E were sold, and purchased on the 3rd September 1877 by N. The plaintiff had his decree transferred for execution to the Bhagulpore Court, and he attached the surplus sale-proceeds and a 1 anna 9 gundas share in E. This attachment was withdrawn on the objection of L, who drew out the surplus sale-proceeds. The share purchased by N was also released from attachment. The plaintiff now sued L, N, and the mortgagors for a declaration that his decree of the 17th July 1874 affected the E property, to recover the surplus sale-proceeds from L and, in case the decree should not be valid to the extent mentioned, for a decree declaring his prior lien on the property in E. He obtained a decree, and at a sale held in execution of that decree himself purchased the property comprised in that mortgage. In the meantime, on the 27th January 1882 and on the 6th December 1883, V and N respectively mortgaged with possession to the defendant M portions of the land comprised in the first mortgage of the 24th January 1878. In 1883 the plaintiff filed the present suit upon his first mortgage of the 24th January 1878, claiming to recover Rs 16-14-0 from S and V personally. He also prayed that the defendant M, who had been in possession of the property in dispute, should be prevented from obstructing him in selling the property. S and V did not appear. The third defendant M alone appeared and contended (inter alia) that the plaintiff, having sued upon his second mortgage without including the earlier one, was now barred from suing on the latter by ss 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882). He also contended that the plaintiff, having purchased part of the lands comprised in the mortgage now sued upon in execution of the decree obtained by him upon his second mortgage, could not now seek to burden the remaining lands included in the mortgage with the whole of the mortgage-debt, but that a proportionate part of that debt must be satisfied. Held that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by his previous suit on the second mortgage under the provisions of ss. 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. MORO RAGHUNATH v. BALAJI TRIMBAK. I. L. 122. Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 43—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85—Rights inter se of two mortgagees of the same property from the same mortgagor.—Two persons each held a mortgage over the same property from the same mortgagor. The mortgages were both executed on the same day. The mortgagees each instituted a suit for sale on the same day and obtained decrees, in execution of which they had the mortgaged property put up for sale, and each purchased it at the sale under his decree respectively. Neither mortgagee made the other a party to the suit on his mortgage. The representative (S) of one of the mortgagee decree holders got possession of the mortgaged property and held it as against the other mortgagee decree-holder or his representatives. Thereupon the representatives of the other mortgagee brought their suit for possession of a moiety of the property, or in the alternative for redemption of the other mortgage. Held that such suit was not barred either by the provisions of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or by reason of those of s. 85 of the

123. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13 and 43—Act XII of 1879, s. 6—Act VIII of 1859, s. 7—Inclusion of whole claim in suit.—The present suit was preceded by others in which the plaintiff sought to establish a right in the same part of the talukhdari estate that he now claimed to redeem from mortgage. The first suit in which he with another claimed as under-proprietors was dismissed in 1866 on the ground that they had not shown themselves to have held such right under the talukhdars within the period since 1841. Proceedings not to be regarded as judicial, subsequently taken under circular 4 of 1867, resulted in a finding that the dismissal was right upon the merits, the property having been transferred to the talukhdar by a conditional sale which had become absolute. Another suit was then brought to recover the talukhdari right, under the terms of circular 106 of 1869, it being alleged that arrears of revenue paid by the talukhdar had been paid on the plaintiff's account. That suit was also dismissed. Held that the present suit to redeem the same property under a mortgage was not barred. The claim to redeem did not arise out of the former cause of action within the meaning of the sections of Act VIII of 1859 relating to the inclusion of the whole claim in a suit. The plaintiff not then being aware of his right when he sued before, it could not be regarded as a "portion of his claim," and he was not precluded, by having omitted it, from bringing it forward. AMANAT-BIBI v. IMDAD HUSAIN. [I. L. R., 15 Cal., 800 I. R., 15 I. A., 106]

124. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—First suit to redeem—Second suit to eject—Causes of action not identical.—A filed a suit against B to redeem the land in dispute, alleging that it had been mortgaged to B, and that the mortgage-debt had been more than paid off. He therefore prayed for an account and restoration of the land on payment of the sum that might be found due. The Court found that the alleged mortgage was not proved, and dismissed the suit. Thereupon A filed a suit in ejectment against B. Held that the ejectment suit was not barred under s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Failure in a redemption-suit does not bar a subsequent suit in ejectment, the causes of action in the two suits being essentially different. *Shridhas Vinayak v. The objection was disallowed and the land was sold. She then sued the execution-purchaser to set aside the Court-sale, and obtained a tion of R30 provided that the term of the mort-should have possession, that the profits should be appropriated first in lieu of yearly interest and any balance appropriated in payment of the principal debt, and that the mortgagor should be entitled to redeem if the principal and interest were paid at the expiration of the four years. The mortgagee never obtained possession, and in 1882 he brought a suit against the mortgagor to recover the unpaid interest then due and obtained a decree, which was satisfied by the sale of property belonging to the judgment debtor. In 188 he brought another suit for recovery of the principal together with the residue of interest up to the date of suit. Held that the cause of action in the suit of 1882 was the mortgagor's non delivery of possession of the mortgaged property, by reason of which the mortgagee had been unable to realize his interest from the usufruct, that the cause of action accrued to the mortgagee from the moment the instrument came into operation and possession was not delivered, that the cause of action to recover the principal accrued at the same time and was the same cause of action, that the plaintiff was therefore bound in the suit of 1883 to sue for the principal, and that the present suit was consequently barred by s. 43 of the

131. ————— Civil Procedure Code, s. 43.—In 1889 the plaintiff sued the defendant for possession of a piece of land which the defendant had included in her homestead by building walls. In that suit the plaintiff alleged that on that land there were two palm-trees which belonged to him, and that the defendant had wrongfully prevented the pasis from going to those trees to tap them, but he asked in his plaint in that suit for the relief in respect of the trees, only stating that he would bring a separate suit for them. The Munsif dismissed that suit on the ground that the land was within the defendant's tenure, and his decision was affirmed on appeal. In a suit brought in 1890 against the same defendant for declaration of title to and possession of the two palm-trees and for an injunction restraining the defendant from disturbing his possession of them,—Held that the claim arose out of the same cause of action as that in the former suit, and that the suit was therefore barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. MAKSUD ALI v. 135. ————— Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 43—Suit for money by mortgagee against sons of a deceased judgment-debtor—Former suit on mortgage against father.—A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on the 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons. The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews for the payment out of the family property of all the unpaid instalments. Held that the plaintiff was not precluded from maintaining the suit against the sons of the mortgagor by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 43. RAMAYYA v. The plaintiff had claimed the value of standing crops or damages for the same. The Court found that the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money, but had not got possession, and ordered defendant to execute a deed of sale. On failure of the defendant to do so, the Court executed a deed of sale in plaintiff's favour under s. 262 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit to recover possession on the strength of the deed of sale. Defendant pleaded that this second suit was barred under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that s. 43 was not applicable and did not bar the present suit, because the alleged cause of action was not the breach of the contract, but a new and distinct one arising from the deed of sale which the defendant had contracted to pass. NATHU PANDU v. special appeal, the High Court was of opinion that the secondary evidence had been improperly admitted, and therefore the decree in the plaintiff's favour could not stand. Upon this it was contended that the suit should be dismissed, as the Court hearing a circumstances, either to remand the case or to call for additional evidence. Held that, although the powers conferred by ss. 351, 354, and 455 of Act VIII of 1859 on the Court of regular appeal are not directly given to the Court of special appeal, yet the Court, when it found the order of a lower Appellate

High Court, it was held that, though there was no section of the Code of Civil Procedure strictly applicable to the circumstances of the case, the Court was, notwithstanding s. 554 of the Code, warranted ex debito justitiæ in setting aside all proceedings of both Courts below and in directing the Court of first instance to re-try the case, admitting all admissible evidence which had previously been tendered to the Court of first instance and which that Court had refused to record. *DURGA DIHAL DAS v. 19. ———— Civil Procedure Code (1852), s. 566 Issue not disposed of by the lower Appellate Court—Procedure.—In a suit for money due under a bond, the plaintiff tendered three witnesses in the Court of first instance to prove execution of the bond. That Court, having examined one of such witnesses, declined to examine the others, being satisfied on his evidence of the genuineness of the bond, and passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by the defendant the lower Appellate Court disposed of the sole issue in the appeal, viz., execution or non-execution, in the following words: "I do not think the claim made out by the plaintiff on his own evidence." Held that, under the circumstances above described, it was competent to the High Court in second appeal to act under s. 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure and refer an issue as to the execution or non-execution of the bond in suit to the lower Appellate Court, that issue having practically not been tried at all by the said Court. *Kanhai Lal v. The District Munsif, after hearing witnesses for the plaintiffs, passed a decree in their favour as prayed. The absent defendant applied unsuccessfully, under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the decree might be set aside, and then appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who reversed the decree and remanded the suit for decision after taking such further evidence as the said defendants or other parties might produce. On its being contended that, under ss. 562 and 564 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Subordinate Judge had no power to remand the suit for re-trial,—Held that, notwithstanding ss. 562 and 564, an Appellate Court has inherent power, in such a case, not only to reverse a decree passed on evidence given by the plaintiff only, the defendant being ex-parte, but also to direct a re-trial of the case. *PERUMBRA NAYAR v. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed the decree and remanded the suit for re-trial, on the ground that certain documentary evidence which had been tendered by a defendant had been excluded, and plaintiff's witnesses who had been cited in the list had not been examined. Held that s. 562 was not applicable to such a case: that the proper course for the Subordinate Judge to take was to act either under s. 568 or 569 by himself taking the evidence which he considered had been wrongly excluded, or to direct the Munsif to take it. *Perumbra Nayar v. The Court of first appeal was of opinion that these questions had not been properly considered, and set aside the decree for the plaintiffs, and directed that a fresh trial be held, certain fresh parties being brought on the record. Held (1) that the order of remand was illegal, there being no proper ground for it under ss. 562 and 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (2) that the lower Appellate Court should have joined the persons necessary for the suit, and should have so altered or added to the issues as to raise all questions properly arising, and should have referred them for trial to the Court of first instance. KELU MULACHERI NAYAB v. excluding evidence on any point. On appeal, the High Court reversed the first Court's finding on the issue with reference to which the suit had been dismissed below. Held by EDGE C J and MAHMOOD J (STRAIGHT J dissenting) that s 562 of the Civil Procedure Code applied not only to cases where the first Court had expressly excluded evidence, but also to cases where the parties were or might have been misled by the act of the Court as to the issues or the evidence necessary, and where in consequence of the Court erroneously considering one issue only the parties did not tender or bring forward their evidence, and that as in the present case evidence had been excluded in this broad sense s 562 (the operation of which in such cases should be rather expanded than limited) was applicable and the case should be remanded for trial of the remaining issues. Held by STRAIGHT J contra that with reference to ss 562 563 and 564 the case could not be remanded under s 562 because it had not been disposed of upon a preliminary point so as to exclude evidence of fact and the Court should therefore proceed to dispose of it upon the evidence on the record if any and that an issue should be remitted to the lower Court under s 566

Held (by JACKSON, J.) that the issue of possession being one which clearly arose on the statements of the parties, the Zillah Judge was not in error in trying it. *PUREE JAN KHATOON v. 134. — Findings to which no objection is preferred—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 566—Appellate Court, Powers of—Error or irregularity.—Held that an Appellate Court is not bound to accept a finding returned to it by a Court of first instance, under s. 563 of Act X of 1877, merely because no objections to such finding are preferred, but is competent to examine the evidence on which such finding is founded, and to satisfy itself that it is correct and fit to be accepted. Noorun v. Khoda Baksh, 1 Agra, 50, dissented from. Ratan Singh v. Wazir, I. L. R., 1 All., 165, followed. Held also that, assuming that an Appellate Court, in deciding a case in a manner inconsistent with and opposed to the finding returned to it by the Court of first instance under that section, in the absence of objections, acted irregularly, its decree could not be reversed, or the case remanded on account of such irregularity, such irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. AKBARI BEGAM v. Wilayat Ali, I. L. R., 2 All., 508, followed. or not, but the question whether the decision of the Appellate Court on the preliminary point is correct or not may also be raised and determined in such an appeal. BADAM v. IMRAT

138. — Power of Appellate Court to deal with whole appeal after return of findings—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 561, 566.—In a second appeal by the defendant, in which the plaintiff filed objections to the decree under s. 531 of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court, without giving judgment on the appeal, stated (giving reasons) the opinion that the appellant would be entitled to succeed, and at the same time remitted an issue under s. 566 of the Code with reference to the plaintiff's objections. At that time the appeal was apparently not argued out, and the true meaning of the facts as found was obviously not present to the mind of the Court. Held that, upon the return of the findings on remand, the Court could not treat the appeal as already decided and the objections the sole matter for consideration, but must consider both appeal and objections and decide the whole case. Held, however, that where Judges have heard arguments on some of the issues and have expressed their views thereon and have remitted another issue or issues under s. 566, they are not bound, on the return of findings, to hear the case de novo, but may confine counsel to argument upon the findings. *LACHMAN PRASAD v. [I. L. R., 10 All., 162]

139. — Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 562—Power of the High Court to go into the merits on appeal from a remand order.—The Court of first instance dismissed a suit as barred by limitation. In appeal that decision was reversed, and the case was remanded under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Against the order of remand the defendant appealed to the High Court under cl. 28 of s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code. It was contended by the plaintiff that the High Court had no power to decide the point of limitation, but could only consider whether the order of remand satisfied the requirements of s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by the Full Bench that in an appeal against such an order of remand the power of the High Court is not confined to the question whether that order satisfies the requirements of s. 562; but may also determine the correctness of the lower Appellate Court's decision on the preliminary point on which the Court of first instance disposed of the case. *BADAM v. point. On appeal by the plaintiff from the decree of such Court the then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr. B, reversed the decree upon such preliminary point and remanded the suit under s 562 of Act X of 1877 for the trial of a certain issue. The Court of first instance tried such issue and made a decree in accordance with its finding thereon. On appeal against the decree of the Court of first instance, the defendant again raised such preliminary point. The then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr. A, dismissed the suit upon such preliminary point. Held that, as although Mr. B had irregularly remanded the suit under s 562 of Act X of 1877, his decision disposed of such preliminary point, and only left open for trial the issue which he had directed to be tried, Mr. A was not competent to re-try and decide such preliminary point. SURAJ DIN v CHATTAR

14. ————— Enhancement of rent of a dwelling-house in village.—A suit for enhancement of rent of a dwelling-house in a village is cognizable under the Rent Act. ABDOOL HAMID v. DONAGRAM DEY . . . 3 B. L. R., Ap., 133

16. ————— Suit for rent of land with buildings—Jurisdiction.—The Revenue Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for rent of land with buildings upon it, when the rent included the rent of the buildings as well as of the land. DHIRAJ MAHATAB CHAND BAHADUR v. MAKUND BALLABH BOSE

17. ————— Suit for house-rent including ground-rent.—Where house-rent includes the rent of the ground upon which the house stands, and the ground-rent can be separated from the other items forming the aggregate of the house-rent, the claim to the extent of the ground-rent may be cognizable by the Revenue Court under Act X of 1859. RAM CHURN SINGH KETTREE v. MEADHUN DURJEE . . . 8 W. R., 90

18. ————— Liquidated damages under agreement with respect to house.—The defendant bought a house belonging to the plaintiff and standing on his own land, on the condition that, as long as the house was not removed, he would pay the plaintiff a certain sum per month. The house not having been removed, the plaintiff sued for the stipulated sum from date of purchase. Held that this was not an action for rent, but a suit for liquidated damages, and as such cognizable in the Civil Court. DEBNATH ROY CHOWDHRY v. KALLY KISTO ROY CHOWDHRY . . . 1 W. R., 2

19. ————— Jurisdiction under Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Suit for rent of houses.—The rulings applicable to suits for rent of houses or of portions of land covered with houses or markets have no reference to suits in which rent is claimed in respect of a mouzah or of an entire estate, or the aliquot part of an estate. Hence a suit for rent of 8 annas of a mouzah which was part of the plaintiff's zamindari held in farm as a whole by the defendant may be properly brought in a Civil Court under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. *GANEEMUT HOSSEIN v. 22. ————— Suit for rent of bastu lands.—Where the rent for bastu lands was paid by the raiyats to their landlord separately from the rent paid for the cultivated lands, but the tenure of the bastu lands was a raiyatwari tenure, it was held that, as a matter of law, the distinction in the mode of paying the rent did not exclude those lands from the operation of Act X of 1859 or Bengal Act VIII of 1859. POGOSE v. RAJOO DHORRE

23. ————— Suit for rent of garden attached to a house.—Held that a suit by a lessee against a sub-lessee to obtain rent of a garden which was attached to a house, and was ancillary to the enjoyment of the house, was not cognizable by the Revenue Court, but by the Civil Court. SHYAM SINGH v. PUNCHUM MAJEE . . . 2 Agra, 243

24. ————— Suit for rent of lands appurtenant to dwelling-house.—The defendant had been declared entitled, under s. 9, Bengal Regulation XIX of 1814, to hold certain lands as attached to his dwelling-house, at an equitable rent payable to the landlord. The landlord subsequently sued under the Rent Act for enhancement of rent of these lands. Held that a suit for the rent of such lands could not be maintained under that Act. KHAIRUDDIN AHMED v. ABDUL BAKI

25. ————— Suit for house and ground.—If a house and two parcels of ground were held and enjoyed together, forming, as it were, one compound or set of premises, the suit as to the whole was not cognizable under the Rent Act. If one of the parcels of land lies at a distance, or is wholly separate and distinct from the other, the suit as to the former was cognizable under that Act. BIPRODOSS DEY v. WOLLEN . . . 1 W. 35. ——— Suit for rent of stone quarries—Act X of 1859, s 23, cl 4—In a suit for rent under a lease of 8 annas of a certain hill and of 1½ bighas of land by which the lessee reserved a yearly rent of Rs200 for the land, and the right of levying a yearly tax on the parties who were employed in quarrying the stone,—Held that this was not a suit cognizable under Act X of 1859. Khalut Chunder Ghose v. Ainto, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 426, considered and approved. SHALGRAM v. KUBIRUN [3 B. L. R., A. C. 61; 11 W. R., 400]

36. ——— Suit to recover payment for use of land for stacking timber—In a suit to recover money due, or payment in kind for the use of the plaintiff's land by stacking timber thereon and keeping it there for a specified time—Held that the claim was of the nature of one for rent and governed by the law of limitation applicable to money claims of that kind. Where there are well known terms upon which the use of land for stacking timber is permitted by its owner, and a party with the knowledge of this custom or practice uses the land in this way, he is bound as by an implied agreement to pay accordingly for such use. JUMNA DASS v. GAWSEE MEAH 21 W. R., 124

37. ——— Usufructuary mortgage—Hugari—Reserved rent—The plaintiff had borrowed money on security of a usufructuary lease of property which, after some years, he sued to would not alter the essential character of the arrangement, which was one of usufructuary mortgage. Held that the words of s 25, Act X of 1859, imply that a suit by a zamindar to recover a rent reserved could where he could obtain satisfaction therefrom, although the remedy sought by him involved in its details different jurisdictions. SHEO GOLAH SINGH v. ROY DINKUR DEAL 12 W. R., 215

38. ——— Deposit as security for rent—Hugari zamindari—The fact that a sum of money was deposited by the lessee with the lessor as security for the payment of the rent did not remove a suit for rent from the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts. A claim for hugari zamindari was not cognizable under Act X of 1859. JOWAHUR LALL v. SULTAN ALI 12 W. R., 214

39. ——— Suit for zamindari ddk charges—A suit by a zamindar against a patidar for zamindari ddk charges, under Bengal Act X of 1859, is not a suit for rent. AGORRE 10 W. R., Act X, 31

Nuzzerana.—A certain sum was paid to Government as nuzzerana during the existence of the maafee grant through a lambardar. After the maafee was resumed and a Government jumma assessed upon it, the nuzzerana continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafee was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation, the Government allowed the amount to the lambardar by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held that, under the circumstances, the payment of nuzzerana being a present in acknowledgment of proprietary title in the nature of a rent-charge, the suit was cognizable under cl. (4), s. 1, Act XIV of 1863. ZAHOOR HOSSEIN v. ASSUD ALI 2 Agra, Pt. II, 178

41. ———— Suit to recover cesses in excess of rent—Jurisdiction.—Act X of 1859 gives no jurisdiction in suits to recover cesses over and above the rent. ORJON SAHOO v. ANUND SINGH 10 W. R., 257

42. ———— Suit for arrears of cess.—A suit for arrears of a cess, which is not in the nature of rent, could not be brought under Act X of 1859. KASIM ALI v. SHADEE [3 N. W., 21]

43. ———— Suit to recover lambardari right—Act XIV of 1863.—Held that a suit to recover lambardari right, or 10 per cent. allowance provided for in the administration paper, being other than a commission on actual collection, was not cognizable under Act XIV of 1863. KHOOT-BEE v. AKBAR 2 Agra, 322

44. ———— Suit for price of trees—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4.—A suit for half the price of trees cut down by the tenant, and claimed by the landlord by right of usage, was not cognizable under cl. 4, s. 23, Act X of 1859. TOHUL ROY v. MAHADEO DUTT W. R., 1864, 327

45. ———— Suit for rent of zeraif lands.—A suit for rent from a party holding lands as zeraif in his own possession was one for rent as between landlord and tenant, and cognizable under Act X of 1859. CROWDY v. SREE MISSEER [12 W. R., 4]

46. ———— Suit for rent of land covered by buildings.—L having claimed certain lands as lessee from the zamindar, and A having pleaded that he held them under a mirasi tenure from the same zamindar, the Court held that the two leases could co-exist, and that L was entitled to recover actual possession and to pay to A, as an intermediate holder, the rent due to the zamindar. In execution of the decree, L was put in possession of all the land except a portion covered by factory buildings in the possession of A, which buildings the Court held did not go with the land. Unable to get possession, L brought a suit to recover rent for the land covered by the building. Held that no suit for rent could lie, A's representative being a trespasser, and his mere statement of willingness to pay rent being insufficient to constitute the relation of landlord and tenant. LYONS v. BETTS [13 W. R., 94]

47. ———— Payment by one co-sharer to others—Beng. Act VIII of 1869.—A co-sharer in an estate who cultivates a portion belonging to himself and the other shareholders should pro tanto be considered their tenant, and payment by such co-sharer for land so cultivated, by whatever name it be called, is substantially rent, and a suit for such rent comes properly under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. ALLADINEE DOSSEE v. SREENATH CHUNDER BOSE 20 W. R., 258

48. ———— Suits for rent by goandahs against under-tenants.—Suits for rent between "goandahs" and those cultivating under them were cognizable under the Rent Act. LIKHUN PATHUK v. ROOF LAL 3 N. W., 48

49. ———— Suit against co-sharer for share of rent—Act X of 1859, s. 23.—S. 23, Act X of 1859, was not applicable to a suit in which the plaintiff claimed as entitled to a moiety of the rent of certain land in the possession of his co-sharer. MITTUNLAL SAHOO v. NADUE [1 W. R., 53]

51. ———— Suit for rent and damages against co-sharers for sub-lease.—Suits against co-sharers and dar-ijaradar for rent and damages in respect of a mehal of which a sub-lease was granted by the defendant co-sharers. As plaintiff did not get possession of his share until after the expiry of the sub-lease, and then only by the aid of the Civil Court, and as his title during the subsistence of the lease was merely nominal, and as he exercised no rights of a landlord during this period, and could not have sustained against the dar-ijaradar an action for rent under Act X of 1859,—Held that his suit was properly brought in the Civil Court. RADHAJEEBUN MUSTAFEE v. DENONATH BANERJEE [W. R., 1864, Act X, 49]

52. ———— Suit by patnidar for his share of rent.—A suit by one of a body of patnidars against his co-patnidars for his share of the rents collected by them was cognizable under the Rent Act. SOOBHUL SINGH v. MEETO SINGH [W. R., 1864, Act X, 12]

89. ———— Suit for arrears

of rent—Benami lease—Landlord and tenant—Act X of 1859.—A brought a suit in the Collector's Court against B, C, D, and E for arrears of rent in respect of land demised under a pottah to F. He joined G and H as defendants. According to the terms of the pottah, they were sureties for F. It was admitted that F's name was used benami in the pottah, and that he took no interest. A sued B, C, D, and E as the parties interested and in possession. C objected that a new settlement had been made and a new pottah granted; that he held a moiety only of the lands, and was not liable for more; and that D was his raiyat, and ought not therefore to have been made a defendant. D and E contended that they were liable in respect of the lot comprised under the pottah, and had already paid rent for it to A under a decree, but objected that they ought to have been sued separately from B, and B did not appear. The lower Court held that C had failed to make out his case, and that D and E were liable in this suit, and passed a decree ordering them to pay the amount admitted by them to be due from them, and the other defendants to pay the remainder of the claim. C appealed. On the appeal, PEACOCK, C.J. (MITTER, J., contra), held that the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed, the lease being to H and not to the defendants; that the Court below had founded its decision on matters extraneous to the lease, which it had no jurisdiction to inquire into. Held per MITTER, J., that the suit was properly brought against the actual tenants and not against the benamidar, and that the Collector had jurisdiction. Held by both Judges that the suit should be dismissed as against the sureties, who could not as such be sued under Act X of 1859. ROY PRIYANATH CHOWDHURY v. S. C. PREONATH CHOWDHURY v. BEEPIN BEHARIE CHUCKERBUTTY 11 W. R., 120

C appealed under s. 15 of the Letters Patent. Held by KEMP and JACKSON, JJ., that the Collector had full jurisdiction to entertain the suit which was properly brought against those who were in the actual possession of the land, and that these persons were really the tenants; that the form of the decree passed by the Collector was correct, the plaintiff having consented to the decree being given in that form; that the sureties had really made themselves responsible for those who were really interested under the lease, and not for F. Prosunno Coomar Pal Chowdhury v. Koylash Chunder Pal Chowdhury, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 759, distinguished. Held by NORMAN, J. (dissenting), that the terms of the lease under which F was alone interested could not be contradicted by oral evidence; that F alone was bound to the lessor under the lease; that the defendant could not be sued as tenant, unless subsequent to the pottah and kabuliati something had occurred creating the relation of landlord and tenant between them and the lessor; that no such relation or any contract creating such relation between the parties could be implied from the circumstances of the case, and the suit should be dismissed. The Revenue Court had therefore no jurisdiction. But whether in the Revenue or Civil Court, D and E could not be sued jointly with B and C, nor could G and H. BIPINDERHARI CHOWDHURY v. RAM CHANDRA ROY . 5 B. L. R., 234; 14 W. R., 12 of rent—Question relating to rent.—In execution of a decree of the Revenue Court in a suit brought by K for arrears of rent of a certain patni, the patni was put up for sale and purchased in the name of G. The rent having again fallen into arrear, K took proceedings against G, under Regulation VIII of 1819, for the sale of the patni; but the arrears having been paid, the patni was not sold. In a suit for arrears of rent of the same patni subsequently brought by K against G, P, and B (the wife of P) jointly, on the allegation that the patni had been purchased by G benami for P and B,—Held that the Collector had no jurisdiction to try questions relating to rent depending upon equitable rights and liabilities arising from circumstances other than those of the relationship of landlord and tenant. PROSONNO COOMAR PAL CHOWDHURY v. Beneficiary interest.—In a suit for arrears of rent on a lease granted to one of two defendants in the name of the other, where the former admitted benami execution of the agreement, but the latter denied that any relation of landlord and tenant existed between himself and the landlord,—Held that the question whether the latter defendant was the party beneficially interested in the lease was not one which was intended by the Legislature to be tried by the Revenue Court. KISHEN BUTTEE MISRAIN v. of rent—Title.—A died, leaving four sons, B, C, D, and E, by a wife deceased, and a widow, K, and three other sons, F, G, and H, by her. K brought a suit against B, C, D, and E, and against her three sons, F, G, and H, to establish her title to a certain talukh which she alleged had been conveyed to her by A under a deed of gift. B, C, D, and E set up a prior deed of partition, whereby the property of the deceased, including this talukh, was divided between all his sons in the proportion of ten annas to B, C, D, and E, and six annas to F, G, and H. The High Court, on appeal, held that the deed of partition was genuine, and rendered the subsequent deed of gift inoperative. Afterwards B C D, and F instituted a suit in the Collector's Court for arrears of rent in respect of another talukh also included in the deed of partition against the rayats and F, G, and H. The rayats admitted that they held at the rent claimed, but stated that they had not paid their rent on account of a dispute between the brothers as to the shares in which they were entitled to the same. F, G, and H raised the defence that this suit could not be maintained in the Collector's Court, a suit in the Civil Court should be brought for the determination of their shares, and the decision in their prior suit was no evidence against them. Held that the question was really one of title between the brothers, and such suit could not be maintained in the Revenue Courts. GIRISH CHANDRA ROY CHOWDERY v RAJ CHANDRA ROY CHOWDERY

93 — Suit for arrears of rent—Question of joint title—In a suit for arrears of rent under Act V of 1859 where defendant admitting plaintiff's interests in the land alleged that it was the joint property of himself and the plaintiff the Revenue Court dismissed the suit on the ground that it had no jurisdiction. The Judge on appeal reversed the decision and gave plaintiff a decree. Held that even if the Judge had gone simply into the question of title and decided whether the estate was joint or separate and on that decision based a decree, he would not have been wrong. MOHESH DUTT v BEG NARAIN SINGH 18 W R, 83

94 — Suit for arrears of rent and for possession—Where a claim for arrears of rent was joined to a claim for recovery of possession the suit could not be brought under the Rent Act. 20. ——— Denial of assets—Decree against estate—Costs.—In a suit brought against the representatives of a deceased Mahomedan, alleged to be in possession of his estate for recovery of the amounts of a bond-debt due by the deceased, the plaintiff should first be allowed to establish his right of suit against the estate, although the defendants plead that they possess no property belonging to the deceased to satisfy the claim. Such a plea, if established, is one to be regarded in framing the decree. The decree in such a case should be for payment out of the property of the deceased. If the suit had simply been against the defendants as heirs or personal representatives of the deceased, and if they had alleged that no assets had come to their hands, the plaintiff would have been entitled to a decree against them as representatives of the deceased (if he had prayed for such a decree), without going to a trial on the question whether or not the defendants had assets; and in that case he might have proceeded, in enforcement of his decree, under the provisions of s. 203, Act VIII of 1859. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HIBALAL MOOKERJEE

He subsequently died without having filed his schedule, and no schedule had ever been filed. After his death, a suit was brought by a creditor against the defendant as the "widow, heiress, and legal representative" of the deceased insolvent, in which suit a decree was made against her, "the amount to be levied out of the assets of the deceased in her hands." In an application by the defendant to have the decree set aside on the grounds that the Official Assignee was a necessary party to the suit, and that the decree should have been against him as her husband's representative, as his estate was in his lifetime, and since had continued to be, vested in the Official Assignee, — Held that on the death of the insolvent his widow, the defendant, became his legal representative within the meaning of s. 252 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the existence of the vesting order in no way affected her position as such representative. *Green-der Chunder Ghose v. An order under s. 329 should be the result of the fact that the defendant in the suit, who is precluded by the decree from disputing plaintiff's right, unjustly instigates a third party, who has no real interest in the property, to prevent the plaintiff from getting the benefit of his execution. A Court has no power under this section to determine, as between the judgment-creditor and a third party obstructing the execution of the decree, important questions on the merits which are wholly unconnected with, and cannot be affected by, the fact that the obstruction is made at the instigation of the defendant. GOVINDA NAIR v. should be proclaimed that D claimed a patni right, and this was accordingly done. Before M was put into actual possession, she was required to find security. Delaying to do this, the lands were attached and sold under a judgment obtained by others who purchased and entered into possession. M, having furnished security, petitioned to be put into possession, but her petition was rejected. She then brought a suit to cancel the order refusing her possession. In her plaint she claimed khas possession; but did not refer to the patni claimed by D. Her plaint was decreed, the decree was appealed, and it was finally upheld by the Privy Council; but throughout the litigation no issue was raised as to the patni. In the proceeding to execute the decree M claimed actual possession. Before process had been issued, D objected to khas possession being given of his patni mouzah. The Judge ruled that the objection fell within the spirit of s. 269, Act VIII of 1859, and that he had therefore jurisdiction to entertain it. Held that s. 269 did not apply, inasmuch as no attempt had been made to deliver possession. Held also that the only intention of the decree was to confirm the plaintiff in the position which she occupied when the property was sold in execution of her original decree, after proclamation of D's claim, and that she was not entitled to khas possession. SHARODA PERSHAD MULLICK v. M pleaded that S had never been put into possession, and again set up his title as purchaser from R and possession under such title. The Munsif found that S had been put into formal or constructive possession of the land, but not of the house, and decreed the claim. On appeal, the District Judge held that S was bound to proceed according to the provisions of s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover possession, and could not bring a separate suit. Held that, whether there had been legal delivery or not, the suit was not barred. *SETH v. 60. ————— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 234, 332, 588—Death of judgment-debtor between order for possession in execution of decree and delivery of possession—Appeal against appellate order reversing an order under s. 332.—A decree-holder in a District Munsif's Court obtained an order for possession of land in execution of his decree on 20th August, on which day the judgment-debtor died. Possession was delivered on 28th August. The person dispossessed presented a petition under s. 332 of the Code of Civil Procedure disputing his right to be put into possession, on the ground, inter alia, that the judgment-debtor was not represented on the record. On appeal against the appellate order of the District Judge, ————— Held, assuming that the order for possession was made prior to the death of the judgment-debtor, there was no necessity for the decree-holder to bring any other person on to the record between the date of that order and the date on which the order was executed. *Ramasami v. 61. ————— Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 335—Joint managers—Mortgage by one of such managers—Sale by mortgagee in execution of decree on mortgage and dispossession of the other manager—Application for restoration of possession by other joint manager.—K, the owner of certain property, gave the management of it to his three nephews, G, A, and N. A mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee sued on the mortgage and got a decree. In execution of the decree, the property was sold and purchased by L, who was put in possession by the Court. G, one of the managers, then applied for possession under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), alleging that he had been wrongfully dispossessed. Held that the mortgagee got no title to the property by his mortgage from A against the real owner K; and G, who was in actual possession as his manager (whether or not there were others equally entitled to share in the management), was entitled to prevent the purchaser L taking possession, and having been dispossessed had a claim to be restored to possession under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code. *GOBIND BALYANT SHIVNEKAR v. A usufructuary mortgagee of the property who had been a party to the suit, and in whose favour the decree was, in so far that it declared his right to continue in possession, applied to be restored to possession, and obtained an order in his favour. Thereupon the assignee, auction-purchaser, applied in revision to have the order restoring the usufructuary mortgagee to possession set aside. Held that the order in question was an order which could properly be made under s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, being unappealable, an application for revision thereof might lie. The auction-purchaser, though he happened also to be the assignee of the decree, was not a representative of a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244, nor was the usufructuary mortgagee a judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 334 or s. 335, but he was a person other than a judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 335. *SABHAJIT v. 5. ———— Judgment not inter partes—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 11, 13, 40, 41, 43—Admissibility in evidence of judgments not "inter partes."—Per GARTH, C.J., JACKSON, PONTIFEX, and MORRIS, J.J. (MITTER, J., dissenting).—A former judgment, which is not a judgment in rem, nor one relating to matters of a public nature, is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit, either as a res judicata, or as proof of the particular point which it decides, unless between the same parties or those claiming under them. In a suit between A and B the question was whether C or D was the heir of H. If C was the heir of H, then A was entitled to succeed; otherwise not. The same question had been raised in a former suit brought by X against A and decided against A: and this former judgment was admitted in evidence in the suit between A and B, and dealt with by the Courts below as conclusive evidence against A upon the point so decided. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting) that the former judgment was not admissible as evidence in the suit between A and B either as "a transaction" under s. 13, or as "a fact" under s. 11, or under any other section of the Evidence Act. *GUJJU LALL v. 6. ———— Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 11, 13, 40, 41, 42, and 43—Onus probandi.—Judgments and decrees recognizing rights between parties to a suit or between persons whom they represent, although they are not conclusive under the Evidence Act (I of 1872), as they were before that Act came into operation, are yet admissible in evidence under s. 13 of the Act, even if the parties in the former suit be entire strangers. Where the parties are the same, or representatives of those in the former suit, such judgments and decrees may be evidence so nearly conclusive as, when produced by the party in whose favour they are, to shift the burden of proof from him to his opponent. Semble—Under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), the law is now the same as it was under Act VIII of 1859, prior to the passing of the Evidence Act. *NARANJJI BHIKABHAI v. 7. ———— Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 11 and 13—Admissibility in evidence of judgment in former case—The subject-matter of the former suit not being identical with that of the latter suit.—The rule laid down in the cases of Guju Lall v. Fattah Lall, I. L. R., 6 Calc., 171, and of Surender Nath Paul Choudhry v. Brajo Nath Paul Choudhry, I. L. R., 13 Calc., 352, has been materially qualified by the decisions of the Privy Council in the cases of Ram Ranjan Chakraborty v. Ram Narain Singh, I. L. R., 22 Oalc., 533: L. R., 22 I. 9. ———— Suit for arrears of rent—Onus probandi.—In a suit for arrears of rent of a half-share of land, the plaintiffs relied upon an ex-parte decree for rent at a certain rate, which they had obtained in 1869 against the tenants of this share. The defendants relied upon a subsequent decree in a contested suit by the plaintiffs against the tenants of the other half share, in which a lower rate of rent had been given. No other evidence than the decrees was produced on either side. It did not appear whether the ex-parte decree had ever been executed. Held that it was open to the defendants to dispute the rate of rent claimed, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove that they were entitled to recover it. *Nilmoney Singh v. 11. ———— Decrees in rent suits—Suit for arrears of rent—Subsequent suit for enhancement.—The plaintiff sued the defendant in the year 1873 for arrears of rent at a certain rate per bigha. The defendant pleaded that the land had been held by him at an uniform rent for more than twenty years, and this contention was supported by the Court. The plaintiff then gave the defendant notice of enhancement, and sued to recover rent for two years at the rate stated by the defendant, and for one year at an increased rate. To this suit the defendant raised substantially the same defence. Held that the decision in the previous suit was not a bar to the present suit, there being two questions for consideration: one, whether there had been an uniform payment of rent for twenty years; and if so, whether the presumptions which the law directs to be drawn from an uniform payment of rent for twenty years had been rebutted by the plaintiff; neither of which amount of rent—Subsequent suit for abatement of rent—The plaintiff obtained a patta lease of certain villages from the defendant in 1861 at an annual rent, and in 1865 was evicted from a portion of the property. She took no steps to obtain an abatement, but inasmuch as she did not pay any rent for the year 1871 the defendant brought a suit against her for the rent of that year. The plaintiff set up the defence that she was entitled to an abatement of R155 from her rent the R155 representing the annual value of the property which she had lost in consequence of the eviction. In that suit it was decided that the amount of abatement she was entitled to was R42. No appeal was made against that decision. In a suit brought by the plaintiff for the purpose of obtaining a permanent abatement of her rent she claimed the precise measure of abatement

The defendants denied being in possession as alleged. Another co-sharer in the same estate had previously brought a suit against the same defendants for the rent of the same tenures, and in that suit the present plaintiffs and other co-sharers of the estate were made co-defendants, and the decision in that suit was that the present defendants were in possession and were liable to pay to the then plaintiff his share of the rent. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting) that the decree in the former suit was not a res judicata or even admissible as evidence in the present suit. *SURENDER NATH PAL CHOWDHRY v. It should be inquired into (the decree being so construed) whether the acceptance of a fixed payment was on forfeiture of all rights to the property, and whether it extended only so far as the widow's right is concerned or whether it affected the son's right likewise. MAN HOONWEI v. Before that purchase, though after the attachment, another holder of a decree against the zamindar brought the right, title, and interest in the zamindari to sale in execution of his decree, and himself became the purchaser. He then, claiming to have obtained the zamindari estate, sued the patnidar for rent due under the lease. This suit was dismissed, save as to rent due for the time intervening between the two sales in execution, on the ground that the relation of zamindar to leasee had ceased on the purchase by the latter. The present suit was brought by the purchaser from the zamindar stating his title, acquired at the prior of the two sales, and claiming to redeem the mortgage. Held that the dismissal of the rent-suit, which involved the title, barred the present one; and the opinion was expressed that the plaintiff had been rightly adjudged in the rent-suit to be bound by the proceedings taken by the mortgagee, pending which the purchase relied upon had been made. RADHAMADHUB HOLLAR v. 35. ———— Identity of cause of action with that of prior suit, to which the plaintiff in a subsequent suit had been a party—Effect of judgment, that a will had been revoked to bar, between the parties, any claim founded solely on the will.—The widow of a talukhdar, acting under his supposed will, appointed the present appellant to succeed to the talukhdar and other estate which had belonged to the deceased. The heir of the deceased, under the Oudh Estates' Act I of 1869, obtained the judgment of the Judicial Committee, declaring that he was entitled to the talukhs as against the present appellant whose title was under the will, which had been revoked, as the Committee found. Another suit brought by the present appellant for a decree declaring that, in virtue of his appointment by the widow under the will, he was entitled to the whole of the estate of the deceased, talukhdari and non-talukhdari, was dismissed by the Judicial Committee on the ground that he had no such title to the whole or any part of the estate. Held that this prior judgment was conclusive to bar the present suit, which, being founded entirely upon the appellant's appointment in pursuance of the will, was brought for possession of all the estate of the deceased as well as a declaration of right thereto. Although the heir was not entitled to possession of the estate of the deceased other than talukhdari, inasmuch as the widow took her estate therein, nevertheless, the claim of the present appellant being only founded upon her appointment under the will, as if unrevoked, and not being a claim for property as descending to the

36. ———— and s. 43—Act XII of 1879, s. 6.—The present suit was preceded by others in which the plaintiff sought to establish a right in the same part of the talukhdari estate that he now claimed to redeem from mortgage. The first suit, in which he with another claimed as under-proprietors, was dismissed in 1866 on the ground that they had not shown themselves to have held such right under the talukhdars within the period since 1841. Proceedings not to be regarded as judicial, subsequently taken under Circular 4 of 1867, resulted in a finding that the dismissal was right upon the merits, the property having been transferred to the talukhdar by a conditional sale which had become absolute. Another suit was then brought to recover the talukhdari right under the terms of Circular 106 of 1869, it being alleged that arrears of revenue paid by the talukhdar had been paid on the plaintiff's account. That suit was also dismissed. Held that the present suit to redeem the same property under a mortgage was not barred under s. 13 of Act X of 1877, as amended by s. 6 of Act XII of 1879. AMANAT BIBI v. 37. ———— Clause of conditional sale in mortgage—Suit by mortgagee for declaration of title—Decree ordering delivery of property to mortgagee in default of payment of mortgage-debt by mortgagors within one month—Default of payment by mortgagors—Effect of such default—Mortgaged property taken by mortgagee in execution of such decree not as mortgagee, but absolutely—Subsequent suit for redemption.—In 1863 B and C mortgaged certain land to one G under a mortgage-deed, which provided that, if the mortgage-debt was not paid at the stipulated time, the land should become the absolute property of G, the mortgagee. In 1871 G filed an ejectment suit against B and C and one H alleging that he had become owner of the land by operation of the above clause, and that he had subsequently let it to H, who now, in collusion with the other two defendants (the mortgagors), denied his title. The ejectment suit was subsequently converted into one for a declaration of G's title as owner as against the mortgagors, B and C, who claimed a right to redeem. A decree was passed in 1872 ordering B and C to pay Rs 100 to G within one month, or, in default, to deliver up to him possession of the land. The money was not paid, and F, as purchaser from G, got possession in execution of the above decree in August 1873. In September 1885 the plaintiff, as B's heir and legal representative, filed a suit against G and F to redeem the property. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree passed in 1872, and that the right to redeem was lost. On appeal, the Court reversed this decision and passed a decree for redemption on payment of ₹100 by the plaintiff within six months. The defendant V then applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction. Held that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata. In the suit brought by G (the mortgagee) in 1871, he had claimed the land as owner through the forfeiture clause in the mortgage deed and the mortgagors insisting in that suit on a right still to redeem, the decree plainly meant to give them by way of indulgence one month within which to regain the land by payment of ₹100 to G. It renewed the mortgage, but with a condition, which was a material part of the decree. They having failed to pay, the mortgage was extinguished. After the lapse of the month G could not have recovered the ₹100. Had he sought to recover that money, he would have been met by the terms of the decree. He was entitled to the land, and nothing else. So, too, was V as his vendee. As then there was no debt that could be recovered, there was and could be no subsisting mortgage that could be redeemed. VISHNU CHINTAMAN v BALAJI BIN LAGHURI

The defendants opposed their application, and on appeal the High Court rejected it, holding that on the evidence the execution of the will was not proved. The plaintiffs thereupon filed the present suit, as the persons beneficially entitled under the will, for a declaration that the property of the deceased belonged to them, and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from obstructing them in the enjoyment of it. The defendant contended that the suit was barred as res judicata. Held that the suit was not barred by the order refusing probate of the will. adjudication, and cannot operate as res judicata during the interval preceding the appeal or the interval preceding the decision of the appeal. Explanation IV of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code commented on. Kakarlapudi Suriyanarayana Rao v. Chellamkuri Chellama, 5 Mad., 176, and Nilvaru v. Nilvaru, I. L. R., 6 Bom., 116, referred to. The rule of res judicata contained in s. 13 of the Code applies equally to appeals and miscellaneous proceedings as to original suits. Having regard to its main object, so far as it relates to the re-trial of an issue, it refers not to the date of the commencement of the litigation, but to the date when the Judge is called upon to decide the issue. Where, after the commencement of the trial of an issue, a final judgment upon the same issue in another case is pronounced by a competent Court (the identity of parties and other conditions of s. 13 being fulfilled), such judgment operates as res judicata upon the decision, original or appellate, of the issue in the later litigation. On the 17th August 1885 a suit was instituted for recovery of an annual malikana allowance for the years 1290, 1291, and 1292 Fasli. On the 5th October 1885 the Munsif dismissed the suit. On the 10th March 1886 the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's decree and decreed the suit. On the 21st June 1886 the defendant appealed to the High Court, which on the 4th July 1887 reversed the Subordinate Judge's decree and restored that of the Munsif, on the ground that the plaintiff had never received and was not entitled to malikana. Meanwhile, on the 8th June 1886, the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant for recovery of malikana for the year 1293 Fasli, which accrued after the institution of the former suit. By judgments dated respectively the 21st August and 27th November 1886, the lower Courts decreed this suit, holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886 in the former suit operated as res judicata, and was conclusive in favour of the plaintiff's title to the malikana. On the 17th May 1887 the defendant appealed to the High Court, and on the 16th May 1888 (the High Court having, in the interval, dismissed the former suit by its judgment of the 4th July 1887) the appeal came on for hearing. Held that the lower Courts were wrong in holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886 in the former suit, which, at the date of the institution of the present suit on the 8th June 1886, was liable to appeal, and, at the dates of the decisions of those Courts in August and November 1886, was the subject of a second appeal pending in the High Court, could operate as res judicata in favour of the plaintiff's title to malikana. (1) That the High Court's judgment dismissing the former suit on the 4th July 1887, though passed after the decisions of the lower Courts in the present suit and after the institution of the second appeal in the present suit, was nevertheless binding on the High Court in deciding such second appeal, and, being final, was conclusive as res judicata against the plaintiff's title to malikana. (2) That the effect of the High Court's judgment dismissing the former suit on the 4th July 1887 was not affected by the circumstance that the second suit was brought for recovery of malikana for a different year inasmuch as that judgment went to the root of the plaintiff's title to malikana and its scope was not limited to the particular item then claimed. *BALKISHAN v. could not be made. In 1888 the same plaintiffs having purchased the interest of the parties not joined in the previous suit brought the present suit with the same object against the same defendant when the Subordinate Judge (not the same officer that disposed of the former suit) now found not to have been the son of the said daughter. A Bench of the High Court (composed of Judges other than those that heard the former appeal) having examined the record of the former suit reversed the subordinate Judge's decision. They declined however to decide whether or not the latter suit was barred on the ground of res judicata. But intimating that they would have affirmed the judgment of the lower Court in the former suit had it on the merits come before them they preferred that judgment to the one before them and gave effect to this opinion by reversing the latter. Held that the question of parentage had not been heard and finally decided in the suit of 1885. The appeal in that suit had put an end to any finality in the decision of the first Court and had not led to a decision on the merits. There was therefore no res judicata but unless treated as such the judgment in the former suit had little or no bearing on the question as afterwards put in issue in this. That issue had been rightly decided by the Subordinate Judge on the merits. Ingly maintain SINGH

The plaintiff's case was that the defendant's ancestor the younger of two brothers had fraudulently caused the sanad to be made out in his own name whereas it was intended to be a dought to have been a grant to the elder brother who was the plaintiff's lineal ancestor. 61. ——— Circumstances and evidence to establish existence of trust—A claim made for a share of property by inheritance from a deceased relation who had been in joint possession of it with the defendant was met by the defence that the estate had been jointly held for religious and charitable purposes under a will the deceased having had no beneficial or heritable interest. The defendant alleged that the original owner of the property had bequeathed the property in trust for these purposes. The claimant alleged a revocation of the will and denied that there was such a trust. One of the contentions upon this appeal was that

62. ——— Judgment obtained by fraud—Failure to appear and resist order granting certificate.—P died in 1889, leaving a daughter B. P, it was alleged, had made a will appointing certain persons his executors. The executors applied for a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889) to recover a debt due to the deceased's estate from one N. B opposed this application, and claimed the certificate for herself by a separate application. The District Judge rejected B's application, and issued a certificate to the executors on the 14th September 1892. In the meantime, one M obtained a decree against B as legal representative of P, and in execution bought P's right, title, and interest in the debt due from N. On the 12th September 1892 M applied for a certificate under Act VII of 1889 to recover this debt. The District Judge rejected this application. M appealed to the High Court. To this appeal the executors were made parties at their own request. The High Court reversed the District Judge's order, and remanded the case for disposal on the merits. Upon the remand the executors did not appear before the District Judge to contest M's application, and the District Judge granted him a certificate. Thereupon he applied for revocation of the certificate previously granted to the executors; and the executors in their turn applied for revocation of the certificate granted to him. The District Judge revoked M's certificate on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed from the Court the previous grant of a certificate to the executors. Against this order M appealed to the High Court, contending (inter alia) that the executors, not having resisted his application for a certificate after the case had been remanded by the High Court, were estopped, on the principle of res judicata, from applying for a revocation of the certificate granted to him. Held that the executors were not estopped. The executors, having applied to be made parties to the appeal proceedings, were bound to appear in the Court below, and their failure to do so disabled them from pleading objections such as the collusive character of the decree and B's want of title, but it did not operate as res judicata, especially when there was reason to suspect fraud on the part of M. The order obtained by him could not have the effect of res judicata, unless the executors, being called on to dispute it, had failed to do so. A party to a proceeding is never disabled from showing that a judgment or order has been obtained by the adverse party by fraud.

His order was based on proof of adultery by the wife before the date of the order of the former Magistrate. Held, on the general principle of the rule of res judicata, that the second Magistrate was wrong in law in re-opening matters already adjudicated upon, and his order directing the discontinuance of the allowance on the ground of facts antecedent to the former Magistrate's order must be held to be illegal. *LARAITH v. In 1875 A, being still a minor, relinquished by deed his claim to the estates for Rs. 12,000, but now alleged that he thought he was relinquishing it only in favour of the defendant's predecessor in title, who died in 1883, having been in possession of the estates since 1867. The plaintiff attained his majority in 1878. Held that the claim was res judicata, the plaintiff having failed to prove fraud on the part of his next friend, and that, whether the cause of action arose in 1865 or 1867, it was equally barred from 1879. Per Cur.—The plea of res judicata ordinarily presupposes an adjudication on the merits; but s. 148 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859) contains a statutory direction that, in case the plaintiff neglects to produce evidence and to prove his claim as he is bound to do, the Court do proceed to decide the suit on such material as is actually before it, and that the decision so pronounced shall have the force of a decree on the merits, notwithstanding the default on the part of the plaintiff. *VENKATACHALAM v. Having regard to its main object, so far as it relates to the re-trial of an issue, it refers not to the date of the commencement of the litigation, but to the date when the Judge is called upon to decide the issue. Where, after the commencement of the trial of an issue, a final judgment upon the same issue in another case is pronounced by a competent Court (the identity of parties and other conditions of s. 13 being fulfilled), such judgment operates as res judicata upon the decision, original or appellate, of the issue in the later litigation. *BALKISHAN v. Separable claims, viz., (a) to share property by right of inheritance, and (b) for the office of lambardar, had been disposed of, on the reference of the present parties, without the intervention of a Court by an arbitrator's award between them. An application under s. 525 had been rejected, for the reason, among others, that (b) was not a matter of civil jurisdiction. Held, however, that the present suit, which was grounded on (a), was barred by the award made. *MUHAMMED NEWAZ KHAN v. On the 7th November 1850 E and her husband filed a bill of complaint in the Supreme Court Calcutta against the trustees of the settlement of 1839 and against A S and G S who was then an infant in which she claimed to be entitled to the properties absolutely. 97. — Order of Mamlatdar dismissing suit—Mamlatdar's Courts Act (Bom Act III of 1876), s 13—Limitation Act (V of 1877), s 20 and sch II, art 47—In 1891 the plaintiff brought this suit to eject the defendant from certain land. In 1893 the defendant's predecessor and vendor S had sued the plaintiff's tenant A in the Mamlatdar's Court alleging that A had disturbed his possession by putting sweepings upon the land and asking to be protected in his enjoyment. He did not appear on the day fixed for hearing, and his suit was dismissed under s 13 of Bombay Act III of 1876. He did not file a suit to set aside this order of dismissal. It was contended in the present suit now brought by the plaintiff that after three years by the combined operation of art 47 and s 28 of the Limitation Act (V of 1877), the defendant's vendor S had lost his title to the land which thus became vested in the plaintiff. Held that, except as evidence of the plaintiff's title to the land, the proceedings in the Mamlatdar's Court in

101. — Dismissal for undervaluation—A suit was brought in the Civil Court of a Munsif, who gave judgment for the plaintiffs but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the claim was improperly valued. A second suit, on the same cause of action was then brought in the Court of the Munsif, who again decided for the plaintiffs, but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the suit was prohibited by Bombay Regulation II of 1827, s 91. The High Court on special appeal reof the value of the action had already been heard and determined. In a second special appeal against this decision, Held that the plaintiffs were not precluded from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action and that the case came within the spirit of s 36 of Act VIII of 1859 as there being no express power given by the Code to reject a plaint after it had been registered by reason of the claim being improperly valued, the doing so ought to have only the same effect as if the plaint had been originally rejected. DULLABJI JOGI v NARAYAN LAKHJI

The second and third defendants in that suit (the defendants in the present suit), who were inhabitants of Surat, pleaded that as against them the Court had no jurisdiction. The suit was accordingly dismissed as against them for want of jurisdiction, but as against the first defendant, who resided in Bombay, the Court passed a decree for the plaintiff. The plaintiff then brought the present suit against the defendants in the Surat Court to enforce their liability under the mortgage. The defendants pleaded that the claim against them was barred by the dismissal of the former suit. Held that the suit was not barred. In the former suit there had been as against these defendants no decision on the merits, and the proceedings against them were a nullity. BHUKANDAS VIJBHUKANDAS v. LALJUBHAI KASHIDAS I. L. Issues of fact arising on the merits were inquired into; but a certificate of the Collector under s. 6 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), which was necessary to give jurisdiction to the Court, not having been obtained, the claim was rejected on that ground. Held that, the Court not having legally pronounced on the merits of the former case, the opinions expressed on the issues were

A claim of this kind may be admitted even after proclamation of sale, provided it has not been designedly and unnecessarily to obstruct the ends of justice. *MAHOMED MUBSON v. After the dismissal of the suit, the plaintiff brought the present suit for recovery of his share of the land, on the allegation that his tenant had relinquished the land within three months, in consequence of his having been dispossessed by the Municipal Commissioners. Held that the suit was not barred by s. 2, Act VIII of 1859. *PRICE v. A previous suit on the same cause of action had been heard and dismissed on the ground of limitation. Held that the present suit was not barred (as res judicata) under s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 (corresponding with Act X of 1877, s. 13), inasmuch as, the first suit having been brought after the period allowed by law, the Court in which it was instituted was not competent to hear and determine it. *BRINDABUN CHUNDER SIRKAR v. 381—The plaintiff sued the defendants on a promissory note. The defendants filed a written statement, alleging that the note had been obtained by the plaintiff by fraud and false representation. Previously to the filing of the present suit by the plaintiff, the defendants had brought a suit against the plaintiff, in which they prayed that the said promissory note might be delivered up to be cancelled. Their plea in that suit contained allegations of fraud and want of consideration identical with those contained in their written statement in the present suit. The plaintiffs in the former suit (the present defendants) having failed to give security for costs the suit was dismissed under s. 381 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). It was now contended that the defendants were estopped from pleading a defence to the present suit the fraud and want of consideration which had been alleged by them as plaintiffs in the former suit which had been dismissed. Held that the defence might be pleaded, and that the question of fraud and want of consideration was not res judicata within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. The previous suit had been dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was estopped from pleading a defence matter which is res judicata. Quere—Whether a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed under s. 381 can again litigate the subject matter of the dismissed suit. RUNGEY RAOJI v SIBTI MAHOMED EBRAHIM

K subsequently brought a fresh suit. Held that the dismissal of the former suit "in the form it was brought" did not amount to permission to sue again contemplated by s. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code, and such dismissal must be regarded as a "decision" thereof in the sense of s. 13 explanation III, and therefore as a bar to the fresh suit. GANESH RAO v KALKA PRASAD

The suit was dismissed "in its present form" (bahasyat maujudat) upon two grounds: first, with reference to s. 10 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) that the suit was undervalued and the plaintiff had failed to pay, within the time fixed, additional court fees required by the Court; and, secondly, for misjoinder. The purchaser subsequently brought a second suit

Held that the dismissal of the former suit was not under the circumstances, a decision within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code such as could bar the second suit by way of res judicata. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The object of s. 10 and indeed of the whole of the Court Fees Act is to lay down rules for the collection of one form of taxation, and the rule that statutes which impose pecuniary burdens or encroach upon, or qualify the rights of, the subject must be strictly construed, applies with special force to such provisions of the Act as provide a penalty, whatever its nature may be. S. 10 is simply a penal clause to enforce the collection of the Court-fees, and dismissal of a suit under its provisions cannot operate as res judicata. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The condition in s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the former suit must have been “heard and finally decided,” means that a former judgment proceeding wholly on a technical defect or irregularity, and not upon the merits, is not a bar to a subsequent suit for the same cause of action. It is not every decree or judgment which will operate as res judicata, and every dismissal of a suit does not necessarily bar a fresh action. It is necessary also to show that there was a decision finally granting or withholding the relief sought. Ram Nath Roy Chowdhry v. Bhagbut Mohaputter, 3 W. R., Act X, 140; Shokhee Bewah v. Mehdee Mundul, 9 W. R., 327; Dullub Jogi v. Narayan Lakhtu, 4 Bom. A. C., 110; Rung-rav Rarji v. Sidhi Mahomed Ebrahim, I. L. R., 6 Bom., 482; Fatfeh Singh v. Lachmi Koer, 13 B. L. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The words bahaisiyat mayjuda must be taken as amounting to a permission to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit within the meaning of s. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code, and could only mean that the Judge using them in his decree had no intention to decide the case finally, so as to bar the adjudication upon the merits of the rights of the parties in a future litigation between them. The procedure provided by Ch. XXII of the Code is not the only manner in which a plaintiff can come into Court for the second time to ask for adjudication upon the merits of his rights, which were not adjudicated upon on the former occasion owing to some technical defect which proved fatal to the former suit. *Ganesh Rai v. claim, as brought, be dismissed with costs.” The plaintiffs did not appeal from this decision, but subsequently brought a suit against the same defendants, claiming joint possession of the same property. Held that the suit was barred by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court in the former suit not having reserved to the plaintiffs the right to bring a fresh action. *Ganesh v. 137. ——— Order refusing to execute decree—Attachment without sale—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 67.—The plaintiff, a judgment-creditor, had in the High Court obtained a decree against the defendant, whereby it was ordered that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 1,68,123, and that the said sum should be a charge on certain immovable properties situated in the mofussil and specified in a schedule to the decree. In August 1894 the plaintiff obtained an order for transfer of the decree to a mofussil Court and sent a copy of the decree for execution there. He obtained in that Court an order for attachment and sale of the property, but that order was reversed on appeal in May 1895, the High Court holding that the properties could not be sold in execution of the decree, but that a separate suit must be brought under s. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. The plaintiff then applied to the Court that passed the decree for an order for transmission of the decree to the mofussil Court with a view to execution. That application was refused by SALE, J., who held that the decision of May 1895 was conclusive as to the plaintiff's right attachment was raised on the intervention of a third person. The plaintiff then brought a suit to establish his right to attach the houses and obtained a decree on the 28th February 1871. An appeal was made and the suit was finally decided in the plaintiff's favour in April 1873. After the plaintiff had obtained his original decree and while the appeal was pending he applied for the sale of the houses in execution on the 30th November 1871 and subsequently made three other applications within three years of each other the last of which was dated the 30th October 1876. The Court rejected this last application on the 28th November 1876 on the ground that the execution of the decree was barred as more than three years had elapsed between the first and second applications (i.e. the applications of the 15th April 1868 and 30th November 1871). mention of the 51½ bighas being made in the decree. In execution of the decree, wasilat in respect of a moiety of the 51½ bighas was allowed, an objection by the defendant to such wasilat being charged having been overruled. In 1878 B sued to recover possession of the moiety of the 51½ bighas which had been taken by A under his decree. Held that, in rejecting the objection raised by B and allowing wasilat in respect of the 51½ bighas, the Court had interpreted the decree passed, and declared that under it possession of a moiety of the 51½ bighas had been decreed and given to A, and that the suit instituted in 1878 was therefore barred. Held also that this matter, having been decided under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, between the parties in execution of a decree, could not be made the subject of a suit. KALI MUNDUL v. 143. — Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 230—Limitation—Vatandars (Bombay) Act, III of 1874, s. 10—Collector's certificate.—A decree of a District Court, dated 5th October 1863, declared the plaintiff to be a hereditary deputy vatandar of a certain deshpande vatan vested in the ancestors of the defendant as hereditary vatandars, and that the plaintiff, as such deputy, was entitled to receive a certain sum annually out of the income of the vatan. The decree did not explicitly deal with the claim to future payments then set up by the plaintiff as hereditary deputy vatandar. The plaintiff received moneys from time to time under the decree until 1875, but he neglected to have himself registered as a representative vatandar under Bombay Act III of 1874, s. 56. In 1875 he made a claim for certain arrears of the allowance which he alleged to be due under the decree, and he attached certain moneys out of the income of the defendant's vatan. The Collector issued a certificate under s. 10 of the Vatandars Act (III of 1874) for the removal of the attachment, and the attachment was accordingly removed by the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff appealed from the order of removal, but the Appellate Court confirmed that order. On second appeal to the High Court, it was held on 23rd June 1879 that the lower Courts were right in raising the attachment; that the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to register the plaintiff as a representative vatandar, and that the Collector was the proper authority to be referred to. Thereupon the plaintiff applied to the Collector to cancel the certificate which had removed the attachment, and to register him as a representative vatandar. The Collector rejected the plaintiff's application on 31st March 1881. In 1881 the plaintiff presented a fresh darkhast to attach the same vatan property in virtue of the said decree of 1863, but the application was rejected as res judicata by both the lower Courts. They held that the certificate of the Collector, which remained uncancelled, operated as a bar. On second appeal to the High Court, Held, reversing the order of the lower Courts, that the decree was one capable of execution. Held, as regards the Collector's certificate, that under s. 10 of the Vatandars

146. — Orders disallowing objection to party representative—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13 and 244.—G brought a suit against I for the establishment of her rights as purchaser of certain immovable properties sold in execution of a decree obtained against I and for possession of the same. After the settlement of issues, but before the suit was finally disposed of, I died, and his brother J was made defendant as his legal representative. J consented to the suit being tried on the defence raised by I and upon the issues already settled. The suit was decreed, it being held that G was the purchaser. In execution of this decree, in which G sought to obtain possession, J objected that he was entitled to a half share of some and to the entire sixteen annas of the other properties, and that his brother I had no right whatever in the same. This objection was disallowed by the Court executing the decree on the ground that it had not been raised in the original suit, and that, as the decree had been passed in the presence of the party then objecting, he was not entitled to urge it. Thereupon J brought a suit against G to establish his rights. The defence was that the order passed in the execution-proceedings, disallowing the plaintiff's objection,

In 1884 in execution of a decree against G, plot A was attached and sold as his property and purchased by the defendant. The plaintiff did not intervene and at that time took no steps to establish his alleged right to this land. In 1885 the defendant obtained another decree against G, and in execution attached plot B. The plaintiff intervened and claimed the property attached as his own under the sale deed of 30th December 1875. The defendant disputed the sale, but the Court found in favour of the validity of the sale deed and allowed the plaintiff's claim. The defendant did not file a suit to set aside this order. The plaintiff then filed a suit to establish his title to plot A, relying on his sale deed of the 30th December 1875. The defendant

154. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882—Suit for land based on plaintiff's title—Previous suit as lessor—Omission to make title a ground of attack in previous suit—No denial of plaintiff's title as landlord—Maintainability of suit.—In a previous suit, brought in 1890, plaintiff had sued for the recovery of certain land which he alleged to have been let verbally to the defendants in 1886. Defendants denied the verbal letting, and pleaded that they held the land from plaintiff's predecessor under a written agreement of 1876. The Court passed a decree in plaintiff's favour, holding that the lease under the written agreement had expired prior to 1886, and that the subsequent enjoyment of the land was under a verbal agreement. No steps were taken to execute that decree. Plaintiff now sued defendants for the recovery of the same land, together with arrears of rent basing his claim on the same written agreement of 1876, and also on his title as owner thereof. The District Court held the claim on the written agreement to be res judicata, and that plaintiff could not now sue upon his title, as that should have been made a ground of attack in the former suit. On appeal to the High Court, — Held that, inasmuch as plaintiff's title as landlord was recognized in the suit of 1890, the defendants could not have acquired a prescriptive title as against him in 1898, when the present suit was filed; and that plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover the land upon his title independently of any letting by him to the defendants. That the claim for arrears of rent under the old written agreement was res judicata by reason of the former suit, but that plaintiff's omission to sue on the strength of his general title in the former suit was no bar to the present suit, inasmuch as his title as landlord had never been disputed. Zamorin of Calicut v. ground that the demise of 1856 was not proved. Plaintiff then sued to recover the same land on the demise of 1835 and on title. Held that the decree in the former suit was no bar to this suit. KANDUNNI v. KATIAMMA . I. L. R., 9 Mad., 251

157. ————— Suit for land based on plaintiff's title—Prior suit alleging that defendants held on lease from plaintiff.—In a previous suit in which plaintiff had been a party, it had been attempted to assert plaintiff's title to a piece of land occupied by the defendants by proving that they held the same by virtue of an alleged specific lease. The Court had held that no such lease had been executed. Plaintiff now claimed the land as belonging to his devasom, and sued to recover it on the strength of his title; he also set up the alleged lease once more. Held that, though the question of the validity of the lease was res judicata, plaintiff was at liberty to sue also on the strength of his title, independently of the lease, and he was not estopped from so suing by the fact that the former suit had been based on the lease alone. If the relation of landlord and tenant were shown to have existed prior to the specific lease sued upon, it was for the tenant to prove that such relation had ceased to exist. In the absence of such proof, the relation would be presumed to continue, and the tenant's possession in that case could not be adverse. ZAMORIN OF CALICUT v. NARAYANAN MUSSAD [I. L. action.—M brought a suit to obtain her share of the entire property of A, her deceased father. It was pleaded, with respect to a certain portion of the property, that A had made it over by parol gift to his minor son. The case came before the High Court on special appeal, when it was contended on behalf of M, the appellant, that the gift was not proved, and that some portion of the property was "mush'a" (undivided), and the gift in regard to it invalid. The High Court refused to allow the last plea, which had not been taken in the Court of first instance, to be taken in appeal, the point raised being one of fact, and, as the gift had been established by evidence, dismissed the appeal. E, the purchaser of the rights and interests in A's estate of W, a defendant in the suit, brought a suit against his vendor, M, and the guardian of the minor, to obtain possession of the property conveyed by the sale in which property affected by the gift was included, and claimed the setting aside of the gift because a portion of the property conveyed by it was undivided. Held that his suit was not barred by s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859. *IMAMAN v. In 1886 plaintiff sued to cancel the document, alleging that defendant on 11th May 1881 had agreed to execute a release, but had not done so; that suit was dismissed for non-payment of duty due under the Court Fees Act. The plaintiff now sued in 1887 for a declaration that the document "was executed for nominal purposes and was not intended to take effect." Held that, since the cause of action in the suits of 1886 and 1887 were not the same, the claim in the latter suit was not res judicata. NAGATHAL v. PONNUSAMI . L. L. R., 13 Mad., 44

169. — — — — — Suit for same object on different cause of action—Decision in former suit.—Plaintiff, claiming as grandson of one S M, the only undivided brother of S, sought to recover half of the village sold by S to first defendant's father in 1855; the village having been (as alleged) family property, and sold without the consent of plaintiff's father, who succeeded his father, S M, and not for family purposes. In a former suit (No. 3 of 1855), brought by the plaintiff's father against S and R, the father of the present first defendant, and the present second defendant, the paternal nephew of the first defendant, for possession of the whole of the family property belonging to him and S as co-parceners, and to rescind the sale to R, the plaintiff stated, amongst other things, that S was imbecile; and that the sale-deed was obtained by taking a fraudulent advantage of his imbecility, and that it was invalid as being made without plaintiff's consent. The Court decided that S was "both physically and mentally qualified to manage and legally competent to deal with the estate, supposing it to be undivided, to the extent of his own share," and dismissed the suit. In 1862 the plaintiff again sued the present defendant for the whole of the village on the same ground of imbecility and fraud. The Civil Court decided that the suit was barred by the decree in the first suit, and on appeal the decree was affirmed. Held that the present cause of action—namely, the plaintiff's right as co-parcener to a moiety of the property and the invalidity of the instrument of sale to pass that right to the defendant—was not res judicata. CHINNAYA MUDALI v. VENKATACHILLA PILLAI . 3 Mad., 320

170. — — — — — Former suit on same cause of action—Suits stating different grounds for right to succeed to estate.—Plaintiff sued to recover a zamindari from his step-brother, alleging that the zamindari was hereditary property belonging to the family, the succession thereto being governed by the law of primogeniture; that his father died in 1859, leaving the plaintiff, defendant, and another, his sons, the former by the first wife, and the latter two by the second wife; and that the defendant (respondent) unlawfully enjoyed the estate, while plaintiff, as the eldest son, had a legal claim thereto. In defence it was pleaded that the claim was res judicata by the decree in a suit which was brought by plaintiff to obtain declaration of his status as the son of his father's pattaba stri, or royal wife, in which suit the plaintiff's father was first defendant, and defendant's mother was second defendant, and wherein they both denied that plaintiff was son of the pattaba stri and affirmed that second defendant was first defendant's first wife, and that her sons were preferential heirs to the zamindari. Among the points recorded was for "plaintiff to prove his status and right as alleged," and that issue was set down for defendants to rebut. The Judge disbelieved that plaintiff was the son of his father's first wife, and added, "Plaintiff further pleads that he is the eldest son, a position not denied, but one which cannot confer on him the status he now claims." The Judge decided that plaintiff had failed to prove that his mother was the pattaba stri, and that he was heir to the exclusion of second defendant's sons. On appeal to the Sudder Adawlat, the decree below was confirmed and the Court made the following observation: "It has been attempted at the hearing of the appeal to maintain the plaintiff's right to succeed as being the eldest son. This, however, was not the position taken in the Court below, where the succession was allowed to depend on another circumstance, —namely, the mother being the pattaba stri; and the Court therefore held the argument to be an inadmissible one." Held on appeal that the present suit was barred by res judicata, a different causa to the former not having been adduced. To the judgment in Chinnaya Mudali v. Venkata Pillai, 3 Mad., 326, after the words in page 334, "in favour of the defendant all the objective grounds of the decision which have led to the dismissal of the suit," the following ought to be added: "and without the establishment of which the suit could not have been logically or legally dismissed." *MUTHUMADEVA NAIK v. Under the terms of the mortgage to R, interest on the principal amount was payable annually and its payment was charged on the property as well as the payment of the principal amount. The mortgagors having failed to pay the interest annually, R in 1875 sued them and N and H to recover the interest due. It was decided in that suit that N was primarily and personally liable for the interest then due on the mortgage, as he had received the sale-proceeds of the property, and that the property was only liable in case he failed to satisfy the claim. N subsequently paid into Court the sale-proceeds he had received, and R was paid the same. 1878 R again sued the same persons for interest, and again N was declared primarily and personally liable, on the ground that he had not at once made over the sale-proceeds to R. In 1880 R sued the same persons to recover the principal amount and interest due on the mortgage, by the sale of the mortgaged property. Held that, whatever might have been the rights and relations of the parties so long as any portion of the sale-proceeds remained with N, their position towards him assumed an entirely different character when once he had discharged himself of those moneys, and with this change in the situation the ratio decidendi of the suits of 1875 and 1878 no longer existed, and therefore the decisions in those suits did not preclude R from bringing a suit to recover the principal and interest due on his mortgage from the mortgaged property. RATAN RAI v. 205. ———— Suit for declaratory decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—Dismissal of suit for declaratory decree and to have deed set aside—Subsequent suit for possession with respect to same property and to set aside same deed.—In December 1878 H, a Hindu widow, in possession by way of maintenance of a certain estate, of which R owned one-third, and P, B, and S one-third jointly, made a gift thereof to N. H died in January 1879. In February 1879 R and P, B, and S joined in suing N for a declaration of their proprietary right to two-thirds of the estate and to have the deed of gift set aside. The Court trying this suit treated it as one for a mere declaration of right and dismissed it with reference to the provisions of s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, on the ground that the plaintiffs had omitted to sue for possession, although they were not in possession and were able to sue for it. In November 1879 R and P, B, and S again joined in suing N. In this suit they claimed possession of two-thirds of the estate and to have the deed of gift set aside. Held by the Full Bench (reversing the judgment of PEARSON, J., and affirming that of OLDFIELD, J.) that the decision in the former suit was no bar to the determination in the second suit of the question as to the validity of the deed of gift. *RAM SEWAK SINGH v. 208. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—Instalment-bond—Hypothecation—Declaratory decree.—In 1864 the obligee of an instalment bond, in which certain immoveable property was hypothecated as collateral security for the payment of the instalments, brought a suit upon such bond "against Z and A (the obligors) and the property hypothecated in the bond, defendants," claiming to recover instalments which were due and unpaid, and a declaration of his right to recover instalments which were not due, as they fell due. He obtained a decree in such suit for "the amount claimed" against the "two defendants." It was also provided in such decree that, "until the satisfaction of the entire amount of the bond, the plaintiff can realize the amount of each instalment by executing this decree." The obligee applied in execution of such decree to recover, by the sale of such property, which had passed into the hands of third parties after the passing of such decree, instalments which had become due after the passing of such decree, and had not been paid. Such execution having been refused on the ground that such decree was a money-decree, the obligee brought a second suit upon such bond to recover such instalments by the enforcement of the lien therein created on such property. Held that, although the enforcement of such lien was claimed in the former suit, yet, inasmuch as it was very questionable whether the Court was competent to grant the second relief claimed in that suit, viz., a declaration of right to recover instalments which were not due in execution of a decree for instalments which were due, and the claim in the second suit was not the same as that in the former suit, the plaintiff asking for instalments said to be actually due, and not for a declaratory decree for instalments not due, the second suit was not barred by s. 13 of Act X of 1877. *UMRAO LAL v. 209. ———— Suit for partition—Right of widow—Subsequent suit to get rid of partition.—Where a widow was treated as an equal sharer in her husband's estate with her sons, and in conjunction with one son applied for partition as a sharer, and objections taken to the partition were overruled, and no appeal made to the Civil Court, — Held that a suit to declare the widow only entitled to maintenance was not maintainable. *OODIA v. 210. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 2 and 3—Admission—Revision of judgment.—Plaintiffs, having purchased the rights of a widow in certain properties, sued the defendants for partition of the share purchased; defendants admitted the widow's right to a certain extent, but the suit was dismissed on the ground that plaintiffs, before they could obtain partition, must establish the extent of their right and the validity of the purchase. Held, on plaintiffs' second suit, that it being between the same parties, and for the same property on the same cause of action, was barred by s. 2, Act VIII of 1859; that defendants' admission, which was merely an admission in plaintiffs' favour, gave no new cause of action; and that, if the Courts failed to decide all the matters in dispute which they had before them in the former suit, their judgment could not be revised in a new suit; such revision being contrary to the provisions of s. 3, Act VIII of 1859. *GHASEE KHAN v. 211. ———— Bom. Act V of 1864.—In 1871 the plaintiff sued to establish his sole right to a portion of a field on the ground that it had been allotted to him by partition. The defendant also claimed it as his share obtained by partition.

The Court rejected the plaintiff's claim holding that no partition had taken place and that the field was the joint property of five co-parceners, including the plaintiff and defendant. In 188 the plaintiff brought a second suit for a partition of the field, including the portion for which his former suit had been instituted. Held that the present suit for partition was not barred by the previous suit which was brought to establish the plaintiff's sole right to the lands in question. SHIBRAM v NARAYAN brother after the father's death for a share of the property on the ground that it was ancestral estate. —Held that this suit was not barred under Act VIII of 1859 s 2, the proceedings of 1861 not having amounted to an adjudication between the brothers as to their rights in the estate arising on their father's death. LAKSHMAN DADA NAIK v RAMCHANDRA DADA NAIK I L R, 5 Bom, 48 [L R, 7 I A, 191 7 C L R, 320]

Later on, in 1869, A brought a suit against B for partition, and in 1870 obtained a decree appointing a commissioner of partition and directing the partition. No return was made to this commission, and no actual partition was come to. In 1873 A obtained a decree for an account, and for payment, or in default, for sale of the property. In 1878 B's share was put up for sale, and purchased by C, and C was put into possession. In 1881 C brought a suit against A for partition. Held that the decree obtained by A in 1873 put an end to B's right to redeem, unless he paid the amount found due against him, and therefore at the time of the sale to C, B's right to redeem had ceased to exist, and the property was no longer subject to partition.

so as to include his claim on the award. The Court refused the amendment, on the ground that it would materially alter the character of the suit, and dismissed the suit, as barred under s. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1852). Against this decision plaintiffs' father did not appeal. In 1884 the plaintiffs filed the present suit for partition, relying expressly on their title under the award of 1874. Held that the suit was not barred by the plea of res judicata. THAKORE BECHARJI RANAJI v. He afterwards sued the defendant for wasilat from the date of the alleged dispossession to the date of the plaint. Held that wasilat having been claimed in the previous plaint for that period, and there having been an adjudication upon his claim for wasilat and no evidence that wasilat was withheld for the period for which it was now claimed, through inadvertence or by mistake, the case was within Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, excluding from the jurisdiction of the Court causes of action "which shall have been heard and determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction to a former suit between the same parties." LUTEEFOONISSA BIBEE v. The genuineness of the alleged leases was put in issue in that suit, and was decided by the Subordinate Judge in favour of the plaintiffs, who accordingly obtained a decree. On appeal the District Judge reversed that decree, being of opinion that the alleged leases were not proved. In 1874 the plaintiffs brought the present suit to eject the defendants. In the suit the plaintiffs sued simply as owners and alleged that the defendants were in occupation as tenants paying rent to the plaintiffs and that they (the defendants) had refused to give up possession. Held (MELVILLE J. dissentiente) that the plaintiffs were not barred by the judgment in the former suit. The fact of both the suits being against the defendants as tenants of the plaintiffs did not imply that the suits were on the same cause of action. The term 'tenancy' may be applied to a great many different relations between the occupier and the owner of property agreeing perhaps only in the single circumstance of a holding by the one of the property of the other. The test in each case is not whether a tenancy has in both suits been sued on but whether the particular contract or relation put forward in the first case was the same specific contract sued on in the second. A cause of action reduced to the concrete form in a contest between individuals implied a specific right and a specific

Subsequent suit on different grounds for same property—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11.—On the 30th June 1855 S, a Lingayat priest, died, possessed of moveable and immovable property. The right of succession to it being disputed, the District Judge placed it under the management of the nazir, under Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827, s. 9. In 1869, B, representing himself as the disciple of S and claiming, as such, to be entitled to the whole of the property left by S, brought a suit (No. 962 of 1869) against the defendant to establish his right to the property in question, and to recover possession of it. The suit was compromised by an agreement, upon which the Court passed a decree on the 23rd March 1870, dividing the property of S in certain shares between B and the defendant. When B and the defendant applied for possession of the property in execution of this decree, the nazir, who had it in his charge, resisted them. The execution proceedings dropped in consequence of the death of B. The plaintiff thereupon (as a disciple of B, deceased) and the defendant sued the nazir separately, each claiming the whole property of S. The plaintiff's suit was rejected on the ground that he failed to prove himself the disciple of B. In that suit the plaintiff produced neither the compromise made between B and the defendant, nor the decree passed on it in suit No. 962 of 1869. The defendant succeeded in his suit, and obtained possession of the whole property. The plaintiff then sued, as the disciple of B, to recover from the defendant the portion of the property of S which fell to the share of B according to the compromise on which the decree in suit No. 962 of 1869 was made. Held by WEST, J., that the suit was barred, first, because the plaintiff had been judicially pronounced not to be the disciple of B in his suit against the nazir to which the defendant was a party as the true successor or prima facie successor represented by the nazir in that suit. It was not open to those who had as heirs sued the official representative of an estate, and failed, to sue the owner, when ascertained, a second time on the same right. Secondly, because the plaintiff, in his suit against the nazir, was bound to bring forward every ground on which he could claim the property; and if the compromise effected by B was such a ground, that compromise and the decree founded on it ought to have been brought forward to sustain the claim, as it would have shut out a ground of defence consisting of the defendant's superior right. As the plaintiff omitted to do so, the more recent decree, which pronounced him not entitled to any part of the property of S, superseded the earlier one, which ineffectually awarded B a moiety of that property as against that person not in possession; and while that decree was unreversed, another decree could not be made awarding to the same plaintiff one-half of the same property in the same right as against the defendant whom the nazir represented in the earlier suit. Held by PINNEY, J., that the property claimed in the present suit had been specifically awarded to B by the decree of the 23rd March 1870, and if that decree were not time-barred, B or his legal representative could obtain possession by taking out execution proceedings on that decree. The present suit therefore was barred alike by s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 and s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, and the fact that execution of the decree in suit No. 962 of 1869 was time-barred did not confer on B or any legal heir of his a new right to sue for the estate of S or any part of it. *SHIVALINGAYA v. Suit for same property on different cause of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2.—In 1856 the plaintiff, the zamindar of Tarla (who had attained his majority in 1853), instituted suits for the recovery of the two villages claimed in the present suit on the ground that the villages were jernyati, and had been temporarily alienated, and he claimed a right of resumption. It was decided that the villages had formed a mokasa jaghir from a date prior to that of the permanent settlement, and that, as they did not constitute a portion of the assets of the zamindari at the date of the settlement, there was no right of resumption. Pending those suits, an order was issued by Government which plaintiff construed as a transfer to him of the Government right in the villages, and he founded the present suit upon the lapse of the mokasa to Government, and the order transferring the right to him.—Held that the present suit was not res judicata. *RAMA CHANDRA SURYA ARICHANDRANA DEO v. village, the defendant's brothers would manage his share during his absence, and on his return hand the same over to him on his paying the expenses incurred by them in such management. In 1873 the plaintiffs' undivided brother brought a suit against the defendant and others on an agreement alleged to have been executed between him (plaintiffs' brother) and the defendant and his brothers by which the said brothers had bound themselves to return one-third share to him (the plaintiffs' brother). This suit was dismissed as against the defendant, as he had not been a party to that agreement, and plaintiffs' brother was referred to a separate suit for partition against the defendant. The plaintiffs therefore now brought the present suit claiming their share in the vatan estate. The defendant (inter alia) contended that the suit was barred as res judicata by the former suit, that neither the plaintiffs nor their forefathers had enjoyed the property during the previous 150 years, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiffs' claim. The defendant preferred a second appeal to the High Court. Held, confirming the decree of the lower Court, that the former suit having been brought on an alleged agreement, it did not bar the present suit, which was based on the plaintiffs' hereditary right to sue as members of the family. NILU RAMCHANDRA v. 242. ——— Suit for possession as heiress—Subsequent suit on ground of family custom.—In a suit governed by the Mitakshara, in which A, a Hindu widow, was the plaintiff, and B was one of the defendants, the plaintiff sought and obtained a decree for possession of certain lands to which she claimed to be entitled as mother and heiress of her deceased son. B subsequently brought a suit against A, alleging that he, and not A, had become entitled thereto on the death of A's son, under a kulachar, or family custom, which excluded female heirs, and gave him a preferential right among male heirs, and thereby sought to recover from her possession of the same lands, and alternatively to obtain a declaration that he was, as such heir if then living, entitled to possession of them on her death, and that a deed executed by her alienating a portion of them was valid only for her lifetime. Held that the decision in the former suit, that A was entitled to the lands as mother and heiress of her deceased son, was conclusive against B's claim for possession during her lifetime, on the ground that she was not the heiress; but that

A having died, his widow and B presented in Court another razinama embodying the particulars of an arrangement respecting the property in which she had become interested as widow, and which was comprised in the former razinama; and of this second razinama they subsequently put in an amended copy. Held that a claim arising out of such arrangement could not, within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, be considered to have been a cause of action heard and determined in the former suit. LAKSHMI ANNAL v. The plaintiffs had formerly, after the death of J, sued M for such property, alleging that it was the separate property of R, and that, on the death of R's widow, they were entitled to succeed thereto. Held that the decision in the former suit that such property was the separate property of R to which M was entitled to succeed on the death of his widow was a bar to their present suit. RADHIA v. On the 14th February 1871, D had executed a solehnama and mortgage in favour of G, pledging among other properties, X and Y as security for a loan made to him by G. D having made default in payment, G obtained a decree against him in terms of the solehnama on the 26th February 1871. Subsequently, D granted another mortgage of the same properties in favour of G. G sold his decree and mortgage to the plaintiff, who in execution of the decree attached properties X and Y.

In these execution proceedings R brought forward the fact of his purchase of the same properties in August 1874, and his claim was allowed, and the properties X and Y released from attachment on the 4th March 1876. The plaintiffs had, on the 8th March 1872, obtained a mortgage from D, on which they had obtained a decree on the 28th September 1874, in execution of which they had attached X and Y; but on R claiming them under his purchase in August 1874, an order was made on the 10th April 1876 releasing X and Y from attachment; and in a suit by plaintiff to set aside that order, they failed as to properties X and Y, on the ground that those properties were not included in the mortgage of March 1872. In a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs against R and D to set aside the order of the 4th March 1876, and to have X and Y declared liable to be sold under the decree of the 28th February 1871, — Held that the suit was not barred under s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 by the decree in the previous suit, nor was it barred by s. 7 of the same Act. Held also that the purchase by R in August 1874 was subject to the mortgage to G of the 13th February 1871. RADHANATH KUSHN v. 254. — Attachment, Application to remove—Removal of attachment unknown to applicant—Failure of application—Second attachment—Second application to remove—New cause of action.—The plaintiff, mortgagee in possession of certain property, applied for the removal of an attachment placed on it by the defendant in execution of a decree against a third party. In default of payment of Court-fees by the defendant, the attachment was removed, but in ignorance of this fact the plaintiff's application was proceeded with, and ultimately rejected. The plaintiff then brought a suit for a declaration of his right, but it was dismissed, on the ground that the attachment had already been removed. Subsequently the defendant placed a second attachment on the property, which the plaintiff again applied to remove. The defendant contended that the plaintiff's application was barred by the proceedings on the first attachment. Held that the decision on the plaintiff's first application having no object existing on which to operate, the attachment having then been removed, it could not properly be regarded as res judicata at all, since no one was seriously interested in having it decided in a different way; and that supposing submission to that decision on the part of the plaintiff for a certain time could have given it a final effect, there had, as a matter of fact, been no such submission, the plaintiff having done all that was incumbent on him to get the summary inquiry and orders replaced by a formal trial and judgment; and that there was nothing therefore in these proceedings disentitling the defendant to oppose the second attachment. Held also that the second attachment, after the first had been removed, was a new and distinct act, giving rise to a new cause of action, or complaint, to the plaintiff, on which, in any case, he was entitled

Subsequently the auction-purchaser bought from B the rest of the talukh and sued her for possession. J got himself entered as a defendant under s. 73, Act VIII of 1859. Held that there was no identity between the subjects of the two suits, and J's former suit for all that he was then entitled to sue for on the cause of action that he had on the attachment did not deprive him of his right to a fresh and independent judgment in the present case. Held also that the former judgment did not create an adjudication of the cause in the latter suit, and if evidence, it was not conclusive evidence or binding on the Judge. RAM CHUNDER CHOWDREY v. Objection was raised under s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code by other members, and an order was passed under s. 280 releasing the interest of all members except the lessee. Within one year of the order, the present suit was brought by the decree-holder to bring to sale the whole property, on the ground that all the defendants being members of a joint family were benefited by the lease, and were liable for the decretal money. The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the suit was barred by res judicata, and that the suits decreed having been for rents of the years 1884 to 1887, the present suit brought in 1891 against the additional parties was barred by limitation. Held (per PRINSEP and GHOSE, J.J.) that the suit would lie, and neither the plea of limitation nor the bar of res judicata was applicable to it. Held (per PRINSEP, J.)—Ss. 278 to 283 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplate the liability of the property to sale, because of its being the property of the judgment-debtor or because it is liable to the decree passed against him as sued in a representative capacity; they do not contemplate a suit to establish the liability of third persons. Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry v. M defended this suit on the ground that he was the holder of a prior lien on the property. The Court gave B a decree in 1875, holding that he was entitled to an order for the sale of the property, but that it would be competent to M to sue to enforce his lien, and that, when he did so the purchaser under B's decree would have the option of discharging the first incumbrance. The property was accordingly put up for sale. No doubt, the proceeds of the sale would, after satisfaction of the costs of the decree go pro tanto to the satisfaction of the sums secured by the first incumbrance, but M, by selling in execution the mortgagor's equity of redemption, did not forego his incumbrance. Held also that M could not enforce his lien for the recovery of the costs incurred by him in the Revenue Courts, as the surety bond did not provide for the payment of such costs, that he could enforce his lien for the recovery of interest, as that bond did provide for the payment of interest, and that the moneys realized by the sale of the equity of redemption of the property in the execution of the Revenue Court's decree of 1872 must be applied, in the first place in satisfaction of the costs of the suit in which that decree was made, and then in satisfaction of the arrear sued for in that suit, or the balance of that arrear and of the arrear sued for in the second suit, with interest at the rate agreed upon in the surety bond from the date of the accrual of those arrears until realization. 270 — Suit on judgment in a Native territory—Civil Procedure Code, s 12—Jhansi and Morar Act (XVII of 1866), s 8—Decree made in British India—Cession of territory to British Government pending suit—Prior to the cession of the town of Jhansi to the British Government, plaintiff had instituted a suit in the Subah's Court in the Gwalior State on a judgment of the British Court in Jhansi district. After the cession, the suit was made over for trial to the Court of the Assistant Commissioner of the Jhansi district. The suit was dismissed by the first Court as barred by s 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but remanded by the lower Appellate Court for trial on the merits. Held that the recital in Part II of Act XVII of 1866 shows that it was intended that suits pending in the Courts of the Gwalior State prior to the cession of the town of Jhansi to the British Government should be continued in the Courts of the Jhansi district after the cession thereof, therefore the present suit which, if it had been originally instituted in a Court of British India could not have been maintained, being an action on a judgment of a Court of British India, was a good and maintainable action in the Court where it was instituted, and is to be deemed to

upon a judgment recovered on the original cause of action. SALONI v. HAN LAL

The words in s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, "has been heard and finally decided by such Court," do not apply to an opinion expressed in the judgment on other issues not material for the purpose of the decree, though properly determined under s. 204 of the Code of Civil Procedure by the Court of first instance. *Niamut Khan v. 274. ———— Decree not in conformity with judgment—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Omission to make reservation in decree though in judgment.—It is by the decree and not by the judgment that a question of res judicata must be decided. In 1881 K sued K and others claiming a declaration of his title to certain land and an injunction against interference with his possession. K claimed part of the land by purchase from M. The Munsif decreed for A, and this decree was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge, but in his judgment the District Judge recorded that K's claim was not adjudicated upon, and that he should bring a fresh suit if he had any claim. In 1883 K sued A to recover the land, which he claimed by purchase from M. A pleaded that the claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit. The District Munsif and, on appeal the District Judge held that the claim was not res judicata, and decreed for K. The suit was dismissed on the ground that no notice had been given; but the Munsif stated in his judgment that he considered the rent enhanceable, because he did not believe in the genuineness of the documentary evidence produced by P. The decree merely ordered that the suit should be dismissed, the portion of the judgment as to the enhanceability of the rent not being embodied in the decree. P therefore had no right of appeal against that portion of the judgment. In a subsequent suit by N against P for enhancement of rent of the same tenure,—Held that, on the rule laid down by the Privy Council in *Soorjeemonee Day-e v. Suddanund Mohapatter, 12 B. L. The material findings in each case should be embodied in the decree, and, if they are not, it is incumbent on the parties, to avoid their being bound by decisions against which they have no right of appeal, to apply to amend the decree in accordance with the judgment. *NIAMUT KHAN v. 285. ————— Suit to set aside will—Question as to validity of will—Suit for possession—Cause of action.—C, a Hindu subject to the Mitakshara law, adopted S, and afterwards B, and made a will, whereby, after providing for his widow, the family worship, etc., he made a division of his real and personal property between his two adopted sons. Provision was also made for forfeiture by either of the sons in case they disputed the will, in which event the whole estate was to go to the other son. This will was registered and filed in the Collector's Court. S was subsequently disowned by C and declared to have forfeited his right to anything under the will. In 1859 S brought a suit against C, B, and certain persons who claimed portions of the property under deeds executed by C, to cancel those deeds, to cancel the will, to set aside adoption of B, and for maintenance. In this suit he alleged that C had no power to make any of the devises of real estate contained in the will, inasmuch as the whole estate, consisting of property inherited by C and property acquired by him from the income of such inherited property, was ancestral. The only issue raised in that suit referring to the will was whether it was assented to by S. The first Court found that it had been so assented to; that the adoption of B was valid; and that S's conduct justified C in disimheriting him: the suit was accordingly dismissed. S appealed to the High Court, and in his grounds of appeal raised the same contention as before, viz., that the whole of the real property was ancestral, and therefore C had no power to dispose of it without his consent. The High Court in 1863 varied the decree of the first Court, and held that the will must be set aside so far as it affected the right of S in the ancestral property, but that the ancestral property only included that inherited, and not that acquired by C with the income of the inherited property. In a suit brought by S, after the death of B and C, against B's widow and the parties to the former suit, or their representatives, to obtain possession of the whole estate of C on the ground that both the inherited property and the property acquired from the income thereof were ancestral,—Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that, although the issue as to the assent of S to the will clearly embraced only a portion of the controversy between the parties, the Court had jurisdiction, and indeed was bound, to decide whether or not the will was operative as to all or to any and what portion of the property, and that its decision on that point was binding on the parties. According to the general law relating to res judicata, where a question has been necessarily decided in effect, though not in express terms, among parties to a suit, they cannot

This was reserved by the High Court on appeal, who held that the decree should have been simply a decree of dismissal of the plaintiff's suit. B died, leaving an adopted son, D. C sued D for recovery of possession of the property, the subject-matter of the former suit, on the ground that D was not the adopted son of B, and that C, who came within the class of bandhus, was entitled to succeed to the property left by A and B, there being no nearer heir in existence. Held that s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, did not bar the suit. MORUN LAL BHAYA GYAL v. LACHMAN LAL 5 B. L. R., 663: 14 W. R., 73

291. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Estoppel—Privity in estate.—A competent Court having decided upon an issue directly raised in a suit brought by a person alleging himself to have been adopted that this adoption had not taken place, it was held that the present suit was barred under Act X of 1877, s. 13, as res judicata, having been brought by the son of the defendant in the former suit, claiming through his father, to establish the same adoption; and that the section applied, although the suits related to different properties. The establishment of the adoption alleged in the first suit would have obliged the father of the present plaintiff to share with the adopted son his ancestral estate. That adoption having been negatived, the son, in this suit, ought to be estopped from making title on the ground that the adoption had placed the person, from whom he claimed to inherit, in the relation of father's brother to him. *VENKATA MAHIPATI GANGADHARA RAMA RAU v. 292. ————— Issue in former suit—Former decree in favour of plaintiff, but issue as to adoption found against him—No appeal open to plaintiff against that finding—Subsequent suit to recover property on strength of adoption.—One S died in September 1878, leaving a widow B. The year before his death his only son (Bala), a child eight years old, had left his home and was never heard of again. A few days before his death, S adopted the plaintiff (his nephew) and executed a deed of adoption, which stated that he had no hope that his son Bala was alive, and that he had therefore adopted the plaintiff. The deed further declared the plaintiff to be the owner of all S's property with all the rights of a natural son, but provided that, in the event of the lost son returning, he should have half. In 1892 the plaintiff, as S's adopted son, brought this suit to recover some of S's property, which was in the hands of the defendants, who claimed it as S's heirs. They (inter alia) impeached the plaintiff's adoption. The plaintiff had previously sued one K, the father of the defendants, in another suit (No. 804 of 1885) to recover certain other lands. In that suit it had been held that the plaintiff was not the adopted son of S, but that nevertheless he was entitled to recover the lands sued for on the strength of the above-stated deed of adoption, and a decree was passed for the plaintiff. Held that the issue as to adoption in that suit was not res judicata in the present suit. In the former suit the plaintiff recovered upon the deed. He could not have appealed from the decree which was in his favour, nor could he, under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1862), appeal from the finding upon the adoption issue which was against him. Upon that issue there had not been a final decision. RANGO BALAJI v. MUDIYEPPIA . . . I. L. R., 23 Bom., 296

293. ————— Pending suits—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 12 and 13—Malikana—Different reliefs claimed.—For the purpose of the rule of res judicata, it is not essential that the subject-matters of the present and the former litigations should be identical. Where a recurring liability is the subject of claim, a previous judgment dismissing a suit between the same parties upon findings which do not go to the root of the title on which the claim rests, but relate merely to a particular item or instalment, cannot operate as res judicata. But if such previous judgment negatives the title and main obligation itself, the plaintiff cannot re-agitate the same question of the title by claiming a subsequent item or instalment. Rajah of Pittapur v. Buchi Sittya Garu, L. R., 12 I. A., 16, referred to. The pendency of litigation regarding rent, malikana, or other demand for one year does not, under s. 12 of the Civil Procedure Code, bar a suit between the same parties in which the same demand is made for a subsequent year, inasmuch as the reliefs claimed in the two cases are different. Ss. 12 and 13 of the Code compared. On the 17th August 1835 a suit was instituted for recovery of an annual malikana allowance for the years 1290, 1291, and 1292 Fasli. On the 5th October 1885 the Munsif dismissed the suit. On the 10th March 1886 the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's decree, and decreed the suit. On the 21st June 1886 the defendant appealed to the High Court, which on the 4th July 1887 reversed the Subordinate Judge's decree, and restored that of the Munsif, on the ground that the plaintiff had never received and was not entitled to malikana. Meanwhile, on the 8th June 1886, the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant for recovery of malikana for the year 1293 Fasli, which accrued after the institution of the former suit. By judgments dated respectively the 21st August and 27th November 1886, the lower Courts decreed this suit holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886, in the former suit, operated as res judicata and was conclusive in favour of the plaintiff's title to the malikana. On the 17th May 1887 the defendant appealed to the High Court, and on the 16th May 1888 the High Court having in the interval dismissed the former suit by its judgment of the 4th July 1887) the appeal came on for hearing. Held that the trial of the present suit by either of the lower Courts was not barred by s. 12 of the Civil Procedure Code by reason of the fact that, at the time of such trial in August and November 1886, the previous litigation between the

204. — Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss 12, 48, 244—Proceeding in replevin—A suit according to s 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, must commence with a plaint, and a proceeding which is capable of terminating in a decree or an order having the force of a decree cannot, on that ground alone be deemed to be a suit within the meaning of the Code, if it has not commenced with a plaint. Such a proceeding is, in strictness only a proceeding in a suit. Semble—That a proceeding under s 244 is not a suit within the meaning of s 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure. VENKATA CHANDRAPPA NAYANIVARU v VENKATARAMA REDDI I L R, 22 Mad, 258

206. — Issue as to amount of rent—Suit for rent—Civil Procedure Code 1859, s 2—Held, with reference to Act VIII of 1859, s 2 that where the cause of action is the same in substance in both suits and where the former suit was so constituted that the parties to the present suit were in direct contact with each other and had full opportunity of asserting their rights, the decision in the former suit is res adjudicata, e.g., decrees passed in suits for partition in which the jumma payable is put in issue are decisive as to the amount of such jumma. RAKHAL DOSS SINGH v HEERA MOTEE DOSSER 22 W. An issue was raised and tried whether the taluk belonged to D S or not, and it was expressly decided that it did not, and that the zamindari was liable to be attached and sold in execution of A G's decree as belonging to R R. Held that it was not open to D S or to plaintiff claiming under him in a subsequent suit to come into Court and ask for a declaration of his right to a half share of the taluk as against A G. ABDOOL GUNDEE v KISHANOND DOSS alias KEBUL RAM DOSS [17 W. 208. — Civil Procedure Code, s 13, expts I and II, and s 44—L was the owner of a 4 anna share in a village. On the 1st March 1881, his childless widow R, and his nephew B, who had separated from his two brothers and lived for some years with both L and R, sold to S one third of the 4 anna share. The brothers of B sued the vendors and the vendee to enforce a right of pre-emption alleging that they, as well as B had acquired and entered into exclusive possession of the estate of L as his heirs. In the second appeal in this suit the High Court held that, as it was proved that the 4 anna share was L's separate estate, and R had succeeded to it and was in possession of it, and thus the plaintiffs had not established a title to, or acquired possession of, any part of the share the plaintiffs were not in a position to assert a preferential claim to purchase the property in dispute. The plaintiffs also pleaded that the question of title and title asserted by them was not a res judicata as it had been tried at Court reject had been based merely on the allegation of de facto possession, and that their claim was to obtain by purchase one third share only, and not for any remedy in respect of their right to possession by inheritance of the entire 4 anna estate. Subsequently to this decision, the same plaintiffs alleging equal rights with B as reversionary heirs of L, sued the same defendants for a declaration of the incompetency of R, the widow, to alienate the property and that the sale deed might be declared as against them null and of no effect. The cause of action was stated to be the execution on the 1st March 1841 of the deed of sale. Held that the plea of res judicata failed. The matter now substantially in issue between the parties was, the presumptive title of the plaintiffs to possession of the property, had not been heard and finally decided in the sense of s 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Such title was not alleged and denied by the parties in that suit within expt I, s 13. It was not matter which "might and ought" to have been made the ground of attack in the former suit within expt II. The law does not require a plaintiff at once to assert all his titles to property, or to be thereafter estopped from advancing them. A plaintiff may with the leave of the Court (s 44, Civil Procedure Code) join causes of action, but he is nowhere compelled to do so. The cause of action in the second suit, although the date of its accrual was the same was separate and distinct from the cause of action asserted in the previous suit. SHEO RATAN SINGH v SHEOSAHAI MISHR was not aggrieved by the Munsif's decree. The Division Bench before which the appeal came, on the 10th August 1877, holding that R was not competent to appeal to the Subordinate Judge, set aside the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge. In deciding the case the Division Bench made certain observations to the effect that the account between the parties was not finally settled, but might be taken again in a fresh suit. In November 1877, M instituted a fresh suit against R to recover the bond on payment of R188-7-4, the sum found by the Munsif in the former suit to be due by him to R. Held, on the question whether the finding of the Munsif in the former suit was final and conclusive between the parties or the account might be again taken, that that finding, being a finding on a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, which was heard and finally decided by the Munsif, was final and conclusive between the parties, and the account could not be again taken. Held also that the observations of the Division Bench in the former suit were mere "obiter dicta" which did not bind the Courts disposing of the fresh suit. MOHAN LALL v. RAM DIAL . . . I. L. R., 2 All., 843

300. ——— Issue as to satisfaction of money-bonds—Subsequent suit on bonds—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 45—Matter directly and substantially in issue—Meaning of "suit" in Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13.—S sued K for four bonds, alleging that the same had been satisfied. K had formerly sued S on two of these bonds. S had alleged in defence of that suit that those two bonds, as also the other two, had been satisfied. It was decided in that suit that not one of the bonds had been satisfied. Held by PETHERAM, C.J., and OLDFIELD, BRODHURST, and DUTHOIT, JJ., that the only issue in the former suit which had to be decided being whether the bonds on which that suit was brought had been satisfied or not, the second suit was, under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, res judicata only in respect of those bonds, and not in respect of the other two bonds. The Court which tried the former suit had not jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit. Per MAHMOOD, J.—This being so, if the word "suit" in s. 13 were taken literally, it might, with some plausibility, be contended that there was no res judicata in respect of any of the bonds. The word "suit," however, must be understood to mean such a matter as might have formed the subject of a separate suit independently of the special provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, such as s. 45, which enables this plaintiff to unite several causes of action in one and the same suit. Adopting this interpretation, it was clear that the two bonds which were the subject of the former suit could not be allowed to form the subject of litigation again. As to the other two bonds, which were not the subject-matter of the former suit, they did not, in the former suit, constitute a "matter directly and substantially in issue" within the meaning of s. 13, and, even if they were "directly and substantially in issue," the decision in the former suit would not support the plea of res judicata, because the Court which tried that suit was not a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suit in which the plea was raised. SHEORAJ RAI v. KASHI NATH . . . I. L. R., 7 All., 247

301. ——— Issue as to validity of mortgage—Suit for possession—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13, expls. I and II.—H, the proprietor of a one-third share of a certain undivided estate, made a gift of such share to P. He subsequently, in February 1875, gave a mortgage of such share, in his capacity as P's guardian, to N and S, the two other co-sharers of such estate. In March 1878 P, having attained his age of majority, brought a suit, as a co-sharer of such estate, under such gift, against N and S for possession of certain land appertaining to such estate, on the ground that they were using such land as if they were the sole proprietors thereof. The lower Appellate Court, observing that such land was the property of the three co-sharers, that the mortgage of P's right to N and S did not affect those rights as such, and that N and S were not justified in using such land as if they were the exclusive proprietors thereof, gave P a decree for possession of one-third share of such land. N and S appealed to the High Court on the ground that P should not have been awarded possession, as they were in possession of such land as mortgagees. The High Court remanded the cases for the determination of the issue thus raised by N and S, and the lower Appellate Court found that N and S were in possession of P's share of such estate as mortgagees under the mortgage made by H above referred to and of such land as such. P did not take any objection to this finding; and it was adopted by the High Court and embodied in its final decree. In October 1879 P sued N for possession of his share in such estate, claiming under the gift from H and alleging that the mortgage of such share by H to N was invalid. Held that, inasmuch as such mortgage was matter substantially in issue in the former suit, the matter in issue in the second suit was res judicata under expls. I and II, s. 13 of Act X of 1877. 302. ——— Issue as to interest on instalment bond—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—"Subject-matter" of suit.—The obligee of a bond payable by instalments sued the obligor for four instalments, claiming, with reference to the terms of such bond, interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended in that suit that, on the proper construction of the bond, the interest on such instalments should be calculated from the dates of default. The obligee obtained the decree for interest as claimed. The obligee subsequently again sued the obligor for four instalments, again claiming interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended again in the second suit that interest should only be calculated from the dates of default. Held that the question as to the date from which interest due on the defaulting instalments was exigible under the terms of such bond was res judicata. It is the "matter in issue," not the "subject-matter," had been proved by the tenants. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the pottah tendered was not one which the tenants were bound to accept under Act VIII of 1865 (Madras). 310. — Issue as to transferability of tenure—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13.—Plaintiff having brought a suit to recover damages for the removal by the defendants of certain crops alleging (1) that he was transferee of the jote upon which the crops were, and (2) that he had purchased the crops, it was objected that the transfer to the plaintiff was invalid. It being found that the crops in question had been purchased by the plaintiff as alleged by him, he obtained a decree for damages for their removal. The plaintiff now brought a second suit as transferee of the jote to recover possession of it from the defendants, who again pleaded that the transfer was invalid. Held, reversing the decision of FIELD, J., that the defendants were not estopped, under s. 13, expl. II, of the Civil Procedure Code, from setting up that defence, inasmuch as the question of the transferability of the jote was immaterial in the first suit and had not in fact been determined, and the question of estoppel was not raised by the parties themselves. CHURN MANJEE v. 311. — Issue as to right of pre-emption—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562, 588 (28)—Second appeal—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 565, 566—Determination of case by High Court.—In a suit for pre-emption, based on the wajib-ul-uruz of a village, the Court of first instance dismissed the claim on the ground that no right of pre-emption had been proved to exist in the village. The lower Appellate Court, dissenting from this opinion, reversed the first Court's decree, and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code for a decision on the remaining question of fact, viz., the amount of the consideration for the sale. On appeal from the order of remand, the High Court, on the 3rd January 1884, observed that it was not disposed to interfere with the finding of fact that the plaintiffs had a right of pre-emption, and accordingly dismissed the appeal, but added that the Judge was in error in remanding the case under s. 562 of the Code, that his order must so far be set aside, and that he should proceed under s. 565 or s. 566, as might be applicable. The Judge, on receipt of this order, replaced the case on his file, remitted an issue to the Court of first instance, under s. 566, as to the amount of consideration, and, accepting the first Court's finding upon that issue, decreed the plaintiff's claim. In second appeal by the defendants the High Court was of opinion that the Judge had disposed of the case upon a condition of things which the plaintiffs had never asserted, inasmuch as he had treated the right of pre-emption which was in issue as one arising from custom, and not, as alleged by the plaintiffs, as arising from a contract between the ancestors of the parties. All the evidence necessary to the determination of the case was on the record. Held by the Full Bench that the defendants were not prevented by the operation of the High Court's order of the 3rd January 1884 from disputing the right of pre-emption, inasmuch as that order was a decision of a merely interlocutory character passed in the same suit, and the questions of fact involved therein were decided only so far as was necessary for the purpose of passing the order, and it could not be regarded as determining the main question in the suit which was still open, and must be decided in the final decree in the suit. Per STRAIGHT, J., that the jurisdiction of the High Court in appeal under s. 588 of the Code from the Judge's order of remand was, like the jurisdiction of the Judge in passing the order, limited by the terms of s. 562; and hence the remark made in the High Court's order, dealing with the plaintiffs' right of pre-emption, could only be regarded as an obiter dictum, and not as determining any question as to the pre-emptive right. DEOKISHEN v. claimed. In 1866 the Collector refused to recognize P's right to malikana payable in respect of the share in X which had been the subject of the suit in 1860 in which had been the subject of the suit in 1860 or to register his name in respect thereof, but acknowledged A's right thereto, relying on the decision of the Civil Court in the suit between A and B. Subsequently P's representatives, C and D, in 1876 sought to have their names registered in respect of the same malikana, but they were opposed by E, who alleged that A had been acting throughout as his benamidar. Their application was eventually disallowed on reference by the Collector to the Civil Court. C and D thereupon instituted the present suit against E in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for a declaration of their right to the malikana and for a reversal of the order refusing to allow their names to be registered in respect thereof. Held that the suit was barred as res judicata, on the ground that the right to malikana was substantially the same question as the proprietary right to the share in the dearah, and that this issue had been tried and decided in the suit in 1860 in favour of A, who must be taken to be E. In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed, and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties, a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. *GORI NATH CHONEX v. 321.—Landlord and tenant—Suit for ejectment—Issue previously heard and determined—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13.—In a suit by a landlord against his tenant for ejectment the defences were (1) no notice to quit had been served; and (2) the tenure was a permanent one. The suit was dismissed on the first ground, the Court holding at the same time that the tenure was not a permanent one. In a subsequent suit for ejectment from the same holding brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant the defences were: (1) the tenure was permanent; and (2) the plaintiff was estopped by the conduct of his predecessor in title from asserting against the defendant that the tenure was not a permanent one. The lower Appellate Court found the question of estoppel in favour of the defendant and dismissed the suit. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the decision was right, and must be affirmed. Scoble—That where a former suit between the same parties in respect of the same subject-matter has been dismissed on a preliminary point, a finding in that suit on the merits in the plaintiff's favour will not bar the defendant from putting forward the same defence on the merits in a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the same defendant. Scoble—That the case of *Niamut Khan v. 322.—Suit for ejectment—Plea of right of occupancy—Issue not finally decided.—A as ticcadar brought a suit to eject B from certain lands which he claimed as majhes land or land which is ordinarily cultivated by the landlord himself or by the ticcadar. B pleaded his right of occupancy. The Court found that the land was majhes land, but dismissed the suit on the ground that A had failed to prove notice to quit. Afterwards A brought a suit against B for ejectment from the same land. B again pleaded his right of occupancy. Held that B was not precluded from raising the same plea, inasmuch as the finding in the previous suit upon the issue whether B was an occupancy tenant was not conclusive against him: nor could that issue be said to have been "finally decided" in that suit within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. *Ran Bahadur Singh v. 323.—Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877, s. 13—Matters directly and substantially in issue in a suit.—Where a decree awarding to one of the parties money deposited in a treasury by a third party as the compensation for land taken by the latter for railway purposes, was based upon the right to the land, the question of title having been directly and substantially in issue between the parties,—Held that the contest of title was conclusive between them under s. 13 of Act X of 1877. In a suit brought by a ghatwal to resume, as determinable at will, an under-tenure granted by one of his ancestors of land, part of the ghatwali mahal, it was alleged for the defence that the under-tenure was permanent. A prior judgment upon conflicting claims made by the ghatwal and the under-tenure-holders to receive the above-mentioned compensation-money, which had been paid in respect of lands in part comprised in the under-tenure, determined that the ghatwal was entitled to the money being founded on the under-tenure holders having been in possession of it by the mere sufferance of the ghatwal who could put an end to it

Under such circumstances the defendant is as much bound by the adverse decree as if he had set up the defence and he is equally estopped from setting up that defence, in any future suit under similar circumstances. In a former suit for arrears of previous years in which the defendant pleaded that his tenure was istemrari the plaintiff obtained a decree for ejectment on non payment of rent within fifteen days. In that case the defendant saved his tenure by payment within the time stated. Held that, inasmuch as the defendant might in the former suit, in which the nature of the tenure was put in issue have urged that his tenure was both transferable and istemrari he could not in the present suit be allowed to alter his defence and rely upon the tenure being transferable Woomatara Debia v Unnopoorna Daisee, 11 B. prior suit what then would have been a defence—Accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee.—A mortgage between parties who had accounts together, comprised lands which also were leased by the mortgagors to the mortgagees, who in 1878 obtained a decree upon the mortgage, although at the time they owed to the mortgagors a considerable sum for rents. The mortgagors did not then set up the defence that they were entitled to have a general account taken and to have the mortgagee's decree limited to such balance as might be found to exist in favour of the latter. But the mortgagors alleged a specific agreement, which they failed to prove, that the rents were to be set off against the mortgage-debt; and they also stated their intention to sue separately for the rents due. No deduction was made in the decree upon the mortgage on account of these rents, for which, moreover, afterwards the mortgagors did obtain a decree. But the mortgagees executed their decree upon the mortgage, notwithstanding objections (which were disallowed in 1882, and, having obtained leave to bid at the judicial sale, purchased the property. In the present suit brought by the mortgagors to have the judicial sale set aside, and to have the mortgage-debt extinguished, by having set off against it the rents which had already accrued, or might afterwards accrue, and for possession of the lands on the expiry of the lease,—Held that, although an equity had been raised in favour of the mortgagors, that an account would have been taken, and that the rents payable should have been credited against the sums due by them, yet this equity could not be enforced in this suit. The proper occasion for enforcing it would have been in defence of the suit upon the mortgage; the present claim was within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and the plaintiffs were now barred from insisting on it, exceptione res judicatae. MAHABIR PERSHAD SINGH v. In this suit they impleaded as defendants all the surviving descendants of their deceased father. Held that the claim for dower should have been made a ground of defence in the former suit by the plaintiffs who had been defendants in the suit for partition, and that, as no such defence had been set up in that suit, the claim in respect of the dower debt fell within the purview of expl. 334. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13—Ancestral property—Partition—Omission to insist on property being brought into hotchpot—Property out of the jurisdiction—Subsequent suit for partition.—The three defendants, G, R, and K, and their brother M, the grandfather of the plaintiff, were members of one family possessing undivided ancestral property consisting of the villages of B, P, and S, the two former being situated in the Poona Zillah and the latter in the Satara Zillah. In 1866 the three defendants (each in a separate suit) sued M in the Poona Courts for partition of the villages of B and P. They in their plaints alluded to the village of S, stating that it was their own and not subject to partition. M in his answer contented himself with denying the right to partition of the villages of B and P, and made no claim, in the alternative, to a share in the ownership of S. The plaintiff, the grandson of M, now sued the defendants in the Satara Courts for partition of the village of S, contending that he was not concluded from so doing by the former proceedings in the Poona Courts. Held that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata, and that his suit was concluded under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13, expls. I and II. A member of an undivided family, suing his co-parceners for partition of family property, is bound to bring into hotchpot any undivided property in his own possession, in order that there may be a complete and final partition, and cannot claim to withhold any such property on the ground that it is situated within another jurisdiction. That being so, the plaintiff's grandfather M having neglected in the previous suit to make the exception of the village of S a ground of defence,

Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—S and B jointly sued N for the redemption of a mortgage of an 8 anna share of a village, B suing as the purchaser from the mortgagor of a moiety of such share. N did not in defence of such suit assert a right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, although such right had accrued to him on its sale by the mortgagor to B. S and B obtained a decree in such suit, and the mortgage was redeemed. A subsequently sued B and his vendor to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety. Held that it was immaterial upon A in the former suit to have asserted in defence his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, inasmuch as that right had been established, it must, so far as B was concerned, have proved fatal to his title to redeem, and that, as he had not done so, the suit to enforce his right of pre-emption was barred by the provisions of s. 13 of Act of 1877, *expl. Civil Procedure Code 1877, s. 13—D, who held a decree for money against I, caused certain property to be attached in execution of such decree as the property of his judgment debtor. M, the wife of I, objected to such attachment, claiming such property as her own. Her objection was disallowed, and she consequently brought a suit against B to establish her right to such property. She did while that suit was pending, having by will such property to her sons. That suit proceeded in the names of her sons who claimed such property under such will. The lower Courts decided in that suit that such property belonged to M, and not to I, and it was therefore not liable to be sold in execution of D's decree against the latter. They did not consider the question whether I's sons were entitled to such property under their mother's will. In second appeal in that suit B contended that I, as heir to M, was entitled to a fourth share of such property, and such share was liable to be sold in execution of such decree. M's sons did not contend before the High Court that they were entitled to the whole of such property under their mother's will to the exclusion of I. The High Court allowed B's contention. B brought a fourth share of such property to sale in execution of his decree and purchased it himself. Thereupon M's sons sued him for such share, claiming it under their mother's will. Held that their mother's will was a matter which should have been made a ground of defence by M's sons in the course of the trial of the second appeal in the former suit between them and B, and that, not having been so made, it was res judicata in the sense of s. 13,

Question not decided—Hindu widow, Power of, to bind reversioners—Chur land—Jungleburi tenure—R, a Hindu widow, granted a jungleburi tenure to certain tenants in respect of a chur belonging to her husband's estate. An amulnuma was granted to the tenant signed by a karpirdaz of R in respect of the tenure. R died in January 1851, a d was succeeded by J and P, two daughters, the first of whom died on the 31st December 1850. On her death, the grandson succeeded to the estate. On R's death, J and P got possession of all estate papers, and amongst them a dmi granted by the tenants in return for the amulnuma. In 1865 proceedings were taken by the tenants to obtain habuylats on the footing of those documents, which proceedings came to an end in 1868. In 1873 J and P instituted suits against the tenants, alleging the amulnuma and demanding to be forgiven and seeking to enhance the rents payable to them as well as to have it declared that R's acts did not bind them. In these suits it was found that J and P had all along been aware of the claim made by the tenants that they held a permanent tenure, and the suits were dismissed on the ground that it was too late for J and P, after the lapse of twelve years from R's death, to raise the question. In 1884 D, a reversioner, instituted a suit in the names of the grandsons to eject the tenants on amongst other grounds that the grandsons (reversioners) were not bound

340. ——— Specific performance—

Decree in favour of plaintiff—Rectification of decree on application of defendant—Motion to set aside decree dismissed—Subsequent application to rectify decree.—The plaintiff sued in 1877 for specific performance of an agreement, dated 27th September 1871, by which certain landed properties were to be divided, as specified in the agreement, between them and the defendants. The case came on for hearing on the 13th September 1878. The defendant did not appear, and a decree ex-parte was made, which declared that the plaintiffs were entitled to have the agreement of the 27th September 1871 specifically performed, and referred the suit to the Commissioner for the preparation of conveyances, etc. The decree was sealed on the 9th October 1878. No further steps were taken by any of the parties for six years, and in September 1884 the matter was first brought before the Commissioner. He then directed the defendants to lodge with him all the title-deeds of the properties which by the agreement were to go to the plaintiffs as their share. The defendants thereupon applied that the plaintiffs should be directed to lodge the title-deeds of the properties which by the agreement were to go to them, but the Commissioner refused to make this order, being of opinion that he was not authorized to do so under the decree, which contained no direction to him in respect thereof. The defendants on the 10th November 1884 gave notice to the plaintiffs that they would apply to the Court—(1) "to set aside or vary its order of the 13th September 1878 so far as it related to the lodging of title-deeds, etc.; (2) to appoint a receiver of certain properties mentioned in the agreement; (3) to order the plaintiffs to deliver up to the defendants the properties which belonged to their share under the agreement; (4) to order certain accounts to be taken." This motion was not brought on until the 10th September 1885, on which day it was dismissed with costs, the Judge holding that the defendants had not shown sufficient cause to justify the setting aside of the decree under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiffs having still kept possession of certain of the properties which by the agreement were to go to the defendants, notice was given by the defendants to the plaintiffs on the 28th April 1887 that they would apply to the Court for an order that the plaintiffs should perform their part of the agreement of the 27th September 1871, so far as it remained unperformed by them, by giving up to the defendants possession of certain properties and by accounting for the rents thereof, etc., etc. At the hearing of this motion, counsel for the defendants asked that the decree should be rectified by directing that the agreement should be specifically performed by the plaintiffs and defendants respectively. The defendants contended that the application was barred by lapse of time, and that the question was res judicata by the order of the 10th September 1885. Held also that the motion was not res judicata by reason of the previous order of the 10th September 1885. Although the notice of motion then served by the defendants on the plaintiffs included matters in respect of which the defendants sought relief by their present application, the Judge in making the order dealt with them as ancillary to the first and main point raised in that motion, viz., the defendants' right to set aside the decree under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Having decided that point against them, he did not really consider the other points at all, and did not adjudicate upon them, and therefore the present application in respect of these matters was not res judicata. The plaintiff had claimed the value of the standing crop or damages for the same. The Court found that the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money, but had not got possession, and ordered defendant to execute a deed of sale. On failure of the defendant to do so, the Court executed a deed of sale in plaintiff's favour under s. 262 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit to recover possession on the strength of the deed of sale. Defendant pleaded that this second suit was barred under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the suit was not barred by s. 13, and that expl. 2 of that section was not applicable, because the object of that explanation would seem to be to compel the plaintiff to rely on all grounds which were open to him in support of the claim made by his plaint, which in the first suit was confined to obtaining a regular deed of sale. One or other of the brothers then for some years managed the estate as shebais and the survivor of them was succeeded by his son, one of the defendants in the present suit, which was brought by the testator's only daughter as heiress to his estate claiming that the Court should determine "those provisions which were valid and lawful and those which were invalid and illegal". She claimed possession and an account and also to be the shebait. In a previous suit the present shebait had obtained a decree, to which the daughter now plaintiff was a party defendant affirming the validity of the will and the rights of the members of the family to be maintained under it. Decree for redemption without proviso for foreclosure of payment within a fixed time—Subsequent suit by mortgagee for sale—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) s 13 expl II A decree for redemption which does not provide for payment of the mortgage debt within a fixed time or for foreclosure in case of default operates of itself as a foreclosure decree if not executed within three years. After such a decree is passed it is not open to the mortgagee to file a suit to recover the mortgage money by sale of the mortgaged property his right of sale being barred under s 13, expl II, of the Code of Civil Procedure. suit—Appeal by inferior pre-emptor in his own suit—Appellate Court, Power of, to alter decree so as to affect superior pre-emptor's right.—In two rival suits for pre-emption each pre-emptor was made a defendant in the other's suit. The suits were tried together upon the same evidence, and were disposed of by a single judgment, but by separate decrees. In one of the suits the pre-emptor obtained a decree in the terms of s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. In the other, the pre-emptor obtained a decree, subject to the condition that, in the event of the first pre-emptor failing to execute his decree, the second pre-emptor should be entitled to execute it. The decree in the first suit was not appealed, and became final. The second pre-emptor appealed from the decree in his own suit, upon the grounds that the amount ordered to be paid was excessive, and that the first pre-emptor had lost his right, and the decree in the second suit should not have been made subject to the condition above stated. Held that the appellant, if he desired to get rid of the decision regarding the first pre-emptor's preferential right, should have appealed against the first pre-emptor's decree, but that, that decree having become final, the question between the two pre-emptors could not be re-opened on appeal from the second pre-emptor's decree. *CHAJJU v. 348. ——— Suit in respect of different portions of joint family property—Material issue in former suit.—In 1876 the plaintiffs, alleging a partition of the family estate in 1864, sued their uncle (father of the present defendants) to recover their share of the rent of a certain piece of land which had formed part of the family estate. The plaintiffs relied in that suit upon a memorandum or agreement of partition executed in 1864. The defendant in that suit, however, contended that the family was still joint, and that the plaintiff could not claim a share of any particular piece of land, but must sue for partition of the whole property. At the hearing of that suit an issue was raised as to whether partition had taken place. The Court found in the affirmative and awarded the plaintiff's claim. In the present suit the plaintiffs sued the defendants (the sons of the defendant in the former suit) to recover possession of certain property which they alleged formed part of the share awarded to them at the partition of 1864, but of which they had been dispossessed by the defendants in 1873. The defendants denied that there had been any partition of the family property. Held that the question of partition was res judicata, and could not be raised again by the defendants. The question had been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit. No doubt, the dispute in that suit was as to a different piece of land, but there was no allegation that that land was held on any different tenure to the land now in suit. The plaintiffs there as now alleged that there had been a partition, and that they had a separate share. The defendants there contended, as the defendants now contended, that there was no partition, and that the family estate was joint. The decree in that suit depended on that issue, and where the decree depends on an issue, the finding on that issue is binding as res judicata. The status of the family, having been thus tried and determined in the former suit, was binding on the parties in subsequent suits. ANANTA BALACHARYA v. DAMODHAR MAKUND

The plaintiff had a daughter named M. Both plaintiff and defendant had since H's death filed separate suits, in which they respectively claimed parts of his estate. In 1879 the defendant had filed a suit (No. 616 of 1879, against the executors of her father-in-law's will to recover certain money belonging to her husband. She obtained a decree, and the suit was referred to the Commissioner to make inquiries. In 1882 the present plaintiff F and her daughter M filed a suit (No. 227 of 1882) against the present defendant A, claiming a share of the estate of her deceased husband H. In that suit she alleged that she had been lawfully married to H and ever since cohabited with him, and that her child M was his legitimate daughter; and she prayed (inter alia) for declaration that she was the lawful wife, and that M was the lawful daughter of H. In the written statement filed by A in that suit, she alleged that F was not the lawful wife of H, but only his kept mistress, and she denied that F was entitled to a share in his property. On the 3rd May 1882, an order of reference was made by which both the above suits, viz., No. 616 of 1879 and No. 227 of 1882, "and all matters in difference therein" were by consent of all parties thereto referred to arbitration. The arbitrators were the respective attorneys of the parties. Awards were duly made, and on the 1st October 1883 decrees were passed in both suits in accordance with the said awards. The material part of the decree was as follows: 'This Court doth by consent pass judgment accordingly to the said award * * * and doth order that the said A do pay for the said F to her attorneys Messrs Tyabji and Dhyabhai within seven days after the date of this decree, the sum of Rs5000 in full settlement of all and singular the claims and claim of the said F and M or either of them against or upon the estate of the said H whatsoever and whatsoever * * * and doth declare that upon the payment of the said sum of Rs5000 by the said A to the said F as aforesaid all claims whatsoever of the said F and M or either of them upon the estate of the said H in the hands of any person whatsoever said H persons considered to be and absolutely and doth further absolutely to all the rest of the estate and effects of the said H as her sole property as against the said F and M. The defendant A in 1882 also filed another suit (No 198 of 1882) against her father-in-law's executors and recovered certain ornaments which she alleged to be her stridhan. In October 1886 A married again and in December 1887 F filed the present suit against her alleging that by the law and custom of Cutch Memon A had by reason of such second marriage forfeited all rights and interests to and in the property of her first husband H and also to the ornaments which she had recovered in the last mentioned suit, and she claimed that the said property and ornaments now belonged to her (F) as the surviving widow of the said H. She prayed for a declaration that A had by her second marriage forfeited her right to the said property and ornaments, and that she (the plaintiff) was now entitled thereto, that the defendant might be ordered to deliver, &c., &c. The defendant A filed a written statement in which (inter alia) she contended that the plaintiff was never the wife of H, but had been merely his kept mistress, that in suit No 227 of 1882 she (the defendant) had denied that the plaintiff F was the widow of H, that the award and decree in that suit were not made upon the basis of her (F) being such widow, and she (the defendant) submitted that the said award and decree were a bar to the present suit. It was contended for the defendant (1) that the plaintiff had in the former suit prayed for a declaration that she had been the lawful wife of H, that the decree in that suit contained no such declaration, and that her prayer must therefore be taken to have been refused under s 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that she was consequently not now entitled to sue as his widow—her claim to be his widow being res judicata, (2) that the decree in suit No 227 of 1882 expressly declared that the Rs5000 awarded to the plaintiff by that decree was in full settlement of all her claims; and that she was therefore precluded from claiming against the estate in any possible contingency; and that therefore the defendant's remarriage gave her no right to sue, (3) that at the latter part of the decree amounted to a release and assignment by the plaintiff F to the defendant of all her (the plaintiff's) right to the property in question. Held that the status of the plaintiff as widow of H was not res judicata. The question of the plaintiff's marriage with H had not been controverted before the arbitrators and finally decided in a manner sufficient to establish res judicata. An award can only operate as an estoppel in respect of questions properly brought before and considered by the arbitrators. Expt. award and release contained in the decree constituted a binding agreement by which the plaintiff F for the sum of Rs5000 waived all her rights against A, including the claim made in the present suit which existed at the time of the award as a present right dependent on a contingency, and the suit therefore should be dismissed. *PATMADAI v. (I. L. R. 12 Bom. 454)

Held on appeal affirming the decision of SCOTT, J. that the present suit was not barred under s 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by reason of the former suit No 227 of 1882. Although F litigated in the former suit as widow of H as she did in the present suit the matters 'substantially in issue' in the two suits were quite distinct. In the former suit she claimed her share in the estate of H as one of his lawful heirs entitled to succeed to him on his death. In the present suit her claim was based on a subsequent event by reason of which she contended that A's share was by law and custom forfeited and reverted to the estate of H. Held also (affirming the decision of SCOTT, J.) that the status of plaintiff as widow of H was not res judicata. The plaintiff in suit No 227 of 1882 no doubt, asked for a declaration that she was the widow of the payment by A of F's share of H's estate. Expt. III of s 13 was not intended to apply to such a case. Held overruling the decision of SCOTT, J. that the declaration in the former decree that the Rs5000 were paid to the plaintiff in full settlement of all her claims upon the estate, did not bar the present suit. The words of the award and decree were to be read with reference to the character in which the parties were litigating, as widows of the deceased H claiming to succeed to his property on his death. Such general language was to be controlled by the circumstances of the case. Upon the proper construction of the award there was no such clear intention shown to include in the settlement a contingent claim of the special nature now made as to

A consent decree of 1873 decided that alluvial land belonged to the plaintiff's village Sipah. The area was judicially determined in 1876 on a map of 1874, but actual possession was not obtained from the defendant, who owned villages on the opposite side of the river. The decree-holder in 1877 included a claim for part of the same land in a suit for an accretion to another of his riparian villages, Khasapur, and the latter suit was wholly dismissed. To get possession of the land decreed in 1873, he then brought rent-suits against two tenants upon it, the defendant intervening under s. 111 of the Oudh Rent Act, 1868. Both the rent-suits were dismissed; and according to the right reserved in the latter section the plaintiff, to establish his title in a competent Court, brought the present suit, including in it the land which he had made part of his claim in the dismissed suit of 1877. Held, on the question whether the dismissal of the suit of 1877 precluded a further suit for that part of the land which had been included in it, that it did not, and that s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable. The pleadings and judgment in the suit of 1877 were referred to, showing that what belonged to Sipah had not been in issue, and that nothing respecting it had been heard or decided. Held also, as to the rest of the land claimed in this suit, that there was no bar on account of its omission from the suit of 1877. As to mesne profits, it would have been open to the High Court to direct an enquiry under s. 212 of the Civil Procedure Code. JAGATJIT SINGH v. SARABJIT SINGH I. L. R., 19 Calc., 157 [L. R., 18 I. 351. ——— Suit for land identical with land given in previous decree—Proof of identity where decree did not specify boundaries—Long possession.—The proprietary possession of alluvial land was claimed upon the averment that, having been gained as an accretion to the plaintiff's village, it had been wrongly excluded from settlement with the latter, in consequence of a prior decree, which, however, had not decreed the land to the defendants, as they alleged it to have done. In pursuance of that decree, which was made in 1855, the land had been, according to the evidence, taken by the defendants, in whose possession it was in 1868; from which date till 1883, when the present suit was brought, that land had been treated, alike by the Government authorities and by the defendants, as belonging to the latter. Had the question been one of limitation, the possession of the defendants for a period of twelve years would not have been sufficient to exclude this claim by the plaintiff, the Government, to recover whatever could have been shown to be its property. The question, however, was not one of limitation; and the fact of the possession having been retained for so long a period was used by the defendants, not to make a title, but to define or identify the land which the decree of 1865 had awarded to them. Although the specification of the boundaries (which had been merely by reference to the plaintiff which mentioned adjoining villages) had been ineffectual, the acts of the parties had been such as to fix the meaning of the terms used; and it was established by the evidence that the land now claimed was identical with that which had been made over under the decree of 1865, to which it related. *SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. 352. ——— Transfer of interest—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Appointment of a creditor as agent to collect rents and appropriate part towards the debt.—In a suit to redeem a kanom on certain land, the jum of a devasom in Malabar, it appeared that the plaintiff held a melkanom in respect of the same land executed to him (subsequently to the date of the kanom sought to be redeemed), by defendant 3, the samudayam of the devasom. Defendant 3 represented one C, in whose favour the uralers had in 1741 executed a document appointing him samudayam and stating that they had received from him a kanom of 18,000 fanams on the devasom properties, and providing that he should appropriate part of the rents towards the loan. It appeared that in a suit to eject tenants, the uralers had acted as co-plaintiffs with the samudayam; in subsequent suits, however, two of the uralers had sued other tenants for rent and the samudayam for an account; both of these suits were dismissed on second appeal, and in the judgments of the High Court the samudayam was described as a mortgagee in possession. Held, (1) on its appearing that no opinion was expressed in the former suits as to the construction of the document of 1741, that the former decisions had not the force of res judicata; (2) in view of the conduct of the parties and on the terms of the document of 1741, that the samudayam was not thereby constituted a mortgagee in possession, and that the melkanom set up by the plaintiff was invalid. *KRISHNAN v. 361. ———— Contentions not raised by way of defence in former suit—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 43.—In a suit to recover possession of the impartible zamindari of Sivaganga, it appeared that the istimrar zamindar died in 1829, and that after an interval of wrongful possession by his brother and his descendants, his daughter established her title to succeed him and was placed in possession in 1864. She died in 1877, leaving the present plaintiff, her son, and three daughters her surviving. A suit was then brought by the father of the present defendant, who was the son of her elder sister (deceased), against the present plaintiff and the daughters of the late Rani for possession of the zamindari, to which he claimed to be entitled by right of inheritance. A decree was passed for the plaintiff in that suit, under which he obtained possession of the zamindari and retained it until his death in 1883, when he was succeeded by the present defendant. The plaintiff now sued as above, claiming that the right to the zamindari had devolved on him, and not on the defendant, on the death of the plaintiff in the former suit. Held (1) that the defendant's father had not succeeded to a qualified heritage nor to a mere right of management of joint family property in which the plaintiff had a right of survivorship, but that he had succeeded to the estate as full owner and had therefore become a fresh stock of descent; (2) that accordingly nearness or remoteness of relationship to the istimrar zamindar was immaterial, and the defendant's right of succession

The above allegation was substantiated, and Z's claim on the money in Court was disallowed on appeal. Held (1) that A and B were not precluded from asserting their claim to the money in Court by reason of the above allegation not having been made by way of defence to the suit of Z; (2) that A and B were entitled to enforce any claim, which X might enforce, for the purpose of satisfying their decree, and accordingly that Z's claim on the money in Court was rightly disallowed. *ATCHAYYA v. This suit had been preceded by another one brought by the creditor against both the widow, then alive, and the reversioner, the cause of action against the latter being that in his hands was the property chargeable. That suit was dismissed as against him, but decreed against the widow. In the present suit payment was claimed from him of a balance of the deceased widow's debt, on the ground that he had agreed, on taking the surrender of the estate from her, to become responsible for her debts. Held that this "might and ought to have been made ground of attack" in the former suit within the expl. 2 of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, and must accordingly be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, and therefore that this suit was barred. The Court having found that there was no notice, which in its opinion was a ground sufficient for dismissal of the suit under s. 363 of the Bengal Municipal Act and also upon the merits, having come to the conclusion that the defendant was not bound to remove the offensive matter from the plaintiff's land, dismissed the suit. In a subsequent suit between the same parties, the plaintiff claiming the same relief as in the previous suit, the defence was that the suit was barred as res judicata. Held that, inasmuch as the matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit was directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit, and as it was finally heard and decided between the same parties, notwithstanding the fact that the previous suit failed by reason of the decision of the Court upon some other matter as well, the subsequent suit was barred as res judicata. *Shib Charan Lal v. 368. — Different subject-matter of suits—Code of Civil Procedure (1882), s. 13, expl. 2—Suit for declaration of baradari rights—Subsequent suit for assertion of khadimi rights.—S. 13, expl. 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure, applies only to cases in which the plaintiff, having on a former occasion sued for certain relief on the strength of one title, afterwards claims the same relief on the ground of another title of which he might have availed himself in the former suit. It does not apply to cases where the subject-matters of the two suits are different. The plaintiffs, in the year 1881, instituted a suit for a declaration of private baradari rights in connection with the daily receipts and offerings at a certain Mahomedan place of worship, alleging that the defendants had dispossessed them on the 27th September 1881; but they did not assert any claim as khadims. The suit was decreed, but the decree was reversed on appeal. On the 7th March 1892, the plaintiffs instituted a suit for a declaration that they were the khadims of a certain durga and, as such, entitled to perform the duties attached to that office for 21 days in each month, and during that period to receive the offerings made by worshippers at the durga. They also claimed an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with them in the exercise of that office. The plaintiffs claimed

The plaintiff obtained a decree for the whole rent. In a subsequent suit by B and others against A for declaration of title to land purchased by them in execution of their mortgage decree, the defence was that the former decree for rent operated as res judicata. Held that, as the issue in the rent suit was for what share the plaintiff was entitled to rent, and not to what share of the property was the plaintiff entitled as owner, the question of title could be said to have been in issue in that suit only incidentally and not directly, and it could not have been entertained in the form in which it was now raised; therefore the subsequent suit was not barred as res judicata. *Run Bahadur Singh v. Objections were raised against these suits on the grounds, inter alia, (1) that the suits were barred by the provisions of s. 255 of the Indian Contract Act; (2) that separate suits for the same matter were not maintainable; (3) that the suits would not lie in the Munsif's Court; and (4) that, accounts having been already adjusted, there was no cause of action. The Munsif overruled the first three objections, and held, as regards the fourth, that the adjustment pleaded had been ratified by the plaintiffs; he appointed an Ameen, who examined the accounts and ascertained the respective claims of the partners, and the plaintiffs in those suits obtained decrees on the basis of the Ameen's adjustment of account. The present suits were brought in 1891 by certain other partners, who were defendants in the suits of 1889, on the allegation that the partnership account had been already adjusted by the Ameen appointed in the suits of 1889, and that the debts and dues of all parties had been determined by the Court. The plaintiffs prayed for recovery of the amount due to them under the Ameen's adjustment, and, in the alternative, for such other relief as might be deemed proper by the Court to grant them against any of the defendants. *Held by NUNNIS and BANERJEE, JJ. It appeared that the land had been the subject of a kanom demise in 1865, and that defendant No. 3, the then karnavan, had obtained in 1878 a decree for its redemption, the right to execute which he assigned to a stranger, who executed it, and took possession of the property, taking from the karnavan a new kanom deed. Subsequently defendants Nos. 4 and 5 obtained a decree for possession and the cancellation of both the assignment and the kanom deed; but this decree was attached in execution proceedings in another suit and purchased by defendant No. 1, who executed it, purchased the property, deposited the kanom amount, and took possession on the 8th March 1884. The plaintiffs, who had meanwhile taken abortive proceedings to defeat the first defendant's title, instituted a suit in August 1884, praying for a decree that the sale to him be set aside without praying for possession. It was now found that the plaintiffs at that time were not aware that defendant No. 1 was in possession, and he did not plead that fact as a defence to the suit for a declaration merely. Held that the plaintiffs were not affected by constructive notice of the defendant's possession in 1884 by reason of the fact that their karnavan, with whom they were not acting, was aware of the defendant's previous application for execution, and that the suit was not barred by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 43. Seemle—That apart from the question of the plaintiffs' notice of the first defendant's possession, since he had not pleaded possession in the suit of 1884, he could not fall back upon the fact that his possession dated from March 1884, as a ground of defence to the present action. SANKARAN v. On her husband's death, a Hindu widow obtained possession of his estate as his heir, and, in a suit against her for possession thereof by certain persons claiming to succeed to the estate as rightful heirs, a decree was obtained by them. Held that such decree was a bar to a new suit against those persons by the daughter claiming the estate in succession to the widow, the decree having been fairly and properly obtained against the widow. *NAND KUMAR v. 387. ————— Decree in suit by Hindu widow — Reversioners, Suit by—Alienation by life-tenant—Adverse possession.—A daughter succeeded to a share of her father's estate, and transferred it in full property by a formal instrument or ikarnama, dated March 1849, to her granddaughter, expressly naming her and treating her as her heiress, —the transfer being in the nature of a release, reserving maintenance and other advantages to the donor. Upon the application of the granddaughter before the Collector for the mutation of names according to the terms of the ikarnama, the reversioners (collateral heirs of the father) affected to contest the unauthorized nature of the alienation, but dropped their opposition. In 1857 the diaras, or alluvial lands attached to the estate, were perpetually settled with the granddaughter. The alienor quarrelled with her granddaughter, and in 1857 brought a suit against her to set aside the ikarnama, upon the ground of the non-performance of a condition subsequent. The plaintiff succeeded in the first Court, but the judgment was reversed (October 1858) on appeal to the Zillah Judge. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died (February 1858), and reversioners applied to be, and were, admitted as her heirs to conduct the appeal. The granddaughter remained in possession from the date of transfer until 1866, when she died. In April 1867 the present suit was brought by the surviving reversioner, who claimed to be entitled to recover possession of the property by right of inheritance from the alienor's father. He was one of the reversioners who had been admitted to conduct the appeal in the former suit upon the death of the alienor. Held (on special appeal and review) there had been no adverse possession; the instrument enured as a transfer of the donor's life-interest only; the judgment in the former suit brought to set it aside did not bind or affect the reversioners, who in that suit merely represented the interest of their predecessors, the life-tenant. *RAJ KUNWAR v. 391. ————— Decree in suit by manager of joint family—Manager of joint family as representative of other members—Subsequent suit by another member on same cause of action.—A Hindu family is regarded as a corporation whose interests are necessarily centred in the manager, the presumption being that the manager is acting for the family, unless the contrary is shown. Before the introduction of the Civil Procedure Code, this was so equally with regard to litigation as to other transactions, and it was not then obligatory, or even customary, for a Hindu manager to set forth that he sued in a representative character (as now required by the Code, s. 50), or to add the co-owners as parties to the suit (as required by English law). A suit therefore brought in 1856 by the manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and the plaintiff, and no fraud or collusion being alleged, bound the plaintiff, though then a minor, and he could not afterwards bring a second suit on the same cause of action. *GAN SAVANT BAL SAVANT v. C and D made no allegation in their plaint that they were minors at the time of the former suit, nor did they assign any reason for not asking to have been made co defendants in it. Their allegation of collusion between A and B was not proved. Held that the plaintiff's suit, under those circumstances, was barred by the former suit under s 2 of Act VIII of 1859. *Jogendro Deb Furkut v. confirmed, and C took possession of the property. In 1877 a suit was instituted on behalf of D by the manager appointed by the Collector against C and A to recover possession of the property, on the grounds—(1) that when it was sold it was not the property of A, the judgment-debtor; and (2) that the property of a joint Hindu family could not be sold or alienated by, or taken in execution of, a decree against a single member of that family. Held that the fact that the plaintiff, through his guardian, had actively intervened in the proceedings under s. 256 of Act VIII of 1859, was no bar to the institution of the present suit on his behalf. It was finally decided in that suit that such estate was a share of such undivided property and not the separate property of G, and that such sale was invalid, having been made without the consent of N, a co-sharer of such undivided property. G subsequently redeemed such estate, and, having done so, sold it a second time to K. N thereupon sued K to set aside such sale on the same ground as that on which he had defended the former suit. Held that the issue in such suit whether such estate was a share of undivided property or the separate property of G was res judicata, inasmuch as K, though not in name, yet in fact, was a "party" to the former suit in which such issue was raised and finally decided. In 1867 G brought his suit, as one of the heirs of S, to set aside the will, and made his brother N a co-defendant. The Principal Sudder Ameer dismissed the suit, finding on the evidence that the will was genuine. In 1869 N brought this suit for his share as heir of S against M. The first Court found that the will was a forgery, and gave the plaintiff a decree. On appeal, the Judge held that N's claim was barred by the decision in the former suit brought by his brother, and reversed the decision of the first Court. Held, on special appeal, that it was not barred by the finding of the Court in G's suit, as N was no party to that suit, and he could not in any manner have availed himself of a decree in that suit to enforce a claim to his share. 405. — Decree in suit to establish right—Subsequent suit for possession—Civil Procedure Code, 1858, s. 2—Suit between same parties—The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain houses and grounds as belonging to his zamindari, setting forth that the premises in question had been occupied by his paternal grandmother, on whose death the defendants had taken wrongful possession. The defendants claimed to be legally entitled to the premises in question, and contended that the plaintiff's suit was barred under a 2, Act VIII of 1859, by reason that the plaintiff had already, during his grandmother's lifetime, brought a suit against her and the defendant's father, as co-defendant, to establish his right to the same premises which suit had been dismissed. The defendants also pleaded limitation. It appeared that in the former suit the relief sought by the plaintiff was substantially to restrain his grandmother from acts of waste in alienating property which had belonged to her deceased husband by assigning it to her co-defendant, but that as regards the property now claimed although it was mentioned in the plaint, no charge had been made that she had assigned it, or intended to assign it, to her co-defendant, nor any allegation to show that the co-defendant had any interest in it. Held, reversing the decisions of the lower Court, that under the circumstances the decision in the former suit was not a decision in a suit between the same parties or parties under whom they claimed, and that the cause of action in the present suit was not determined in the former suit. Held also that the defendant's plea of limitation could not be determined without a finding as to whether the plaintiff's grandmother, who died within the period of limitation, had held the premises with the plaintiff's leave, or as a trespasser. ZAMINDAR OF PITTAPURAM v PROPRIETORS OF KOLANKA 1 L R, 2 Mad, 23 L R, 5 I A, 200

In 1878 A and B gave to S a deed of simple mortgage of the 5 biswas which were described in the deed as the widow's "own" property. bound by any of the proceedings taken therein or consequent thereto. On behalf of the daughters it was contended (inter alia) that the decrees obtained by them against A and B in February 1884 were conclusive, by way of res judicata against the plaintiff, who, as mortgagee from A and B, claimed under a title derived from them. Held that there being no evidence to show that the decrees of February and November 1884 were fraudulently and collusively obtained the Court of first instance was right in exempting the shares of the daughters from the lien sought to be enforced by the plaintiff, and that, inasmuch as the deed of 1876 was prior in date to the plaintiff's deed of 1878 and there was no allegation of fraud or collusion in regard to it, the decree and sale in enforcement of the former deed would defeat the rights of the plaintiff under the latter. Khub Chand v Kalan Das 1 L R, 1 All, 230, and Ali Hasan v Dhirja, 1 L R, 4 All 618, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J—The decrees of February and November 1884 did not operate as res judicata against the plaintiff, inasmuch as a mortgagee cannot be bound by a decision relating to the mortgaged property in a suit instituted after his mortgage and to which he was not a party. After a mortgage has been duly created the mortgagee, in whom the equity of redemption is vested no longer possesses any such estate as would entitle him to represent the rights and interests of the mortgagee in a subsequent litigation, so as to render the result of such litigation binding upon and conclusive against such mortgagee. The plaintiff in the present suit could not be treated as a party claiming under his mortgagees within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that section must be interpreted as if, after the words "under whom they or any of them claim" the words "by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the former suit" had been inserted. Duma Sahu v Jeonram Lal, 3 B L R, A C, 407; 12 W. 407. ——— Illegitimacy, Question of —Execution of decree—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. —The questions which, under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, may be determined by a Court executing a decree, must be between parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and must relate to the execution of the decree. A person who was not on the record when the decree was made does not constitute himself a party to the suit by applying for execution, and a question as to his legitimacy is consequently not one which the Court executing the decree is competent to entertain. A declaration by a Court in execution proceedings, that a person not a party to the suit applying for execution is legitimate, since it is made without jurisdiction, cannot, under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, be pleaded as a bar to a regular suit in which it is sought to establish the illegitimacy of the applicant. *ABIDUNNISSA KHATUN v. 408 ——— Suits in right of inheritance.—M, in 1866, brought a suit against A, her son S, B, and C, who, like her, all claimed a right to inherit the estate of K, deceased, for her share by inheritance in K's estate, alleging that she had been lawfully married to him. She only denied A's right to inherit, who claimed as K's adopted son; admitting the right of S, who claimed as her lawful son by K, and that of B and C, who claimed as wife and daughter respectively of K. S supported his mother's claim. A, B, and C denied that M had been lawfully married to K, and alleged that S was the son of M, not by K, but by another person. It was decided in that suit that M had been lawfully married to K; that S was the lawful son of K by M; and that A was not the adopted son of K. In 1880 S sued A for possession of C's share in such estate, C having died, claiming as C's step brother and heir. A set up as a defence that M was not K's wife, nor was S K's son. Held that, inasmuch as, although in the former suit A and S stood together in the same array, they were in fact opposed to each other, S being on the side and supporting the case of his mother, and A being the true defendant, such suit was one between the same parties as the second, and the matter of S's legitimacy, having been raised and finally decided in the former suit by a competent Court, was res judicata, and could not be again raised in the second suit. *SHADAI KHAN v. Pending the mortgage-suit and before decree, A died, but the suit was not revived against his representatives. The usual mortgage-decree was passed in favour of the mortgagee, who, in execution thereof, sold a portion of the mortgaged property to B. In a suit brought by B against the representatives of A for the property purchased and for general relief,—Held that the decree in the mortgage-suit was not binding on the representatives of A; nor, under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, did the failure to revive such mortgage-suit prevent B from bringing a second suit against A's representatives. *B v. That order declared that a will made by the last talukhdar, whereby a power to appoint a successor in the talukhdari had been given to the widow had been revoked, and determined the right to succeed as upon an intestacy. The person whom the widow had appointed by her will now contending that he was not bound by the order, having been when the former suit was instituted, a minor, without any duly appointed guardian, it was held that, whether he had, or had not by acts after attaining full age (having been nominally a party) become estopped from setting up the above he was at all events bound by the order, on the ground that the widow holding an estate at least as large as that of the Hindu widow in her husband's property, was the full representative of the estate in the former suit the appoint-

418. ——— Suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title.—

A brought a suit for a debt against B, obtained a decree, and attached certain land in execution. C intervened, claiming the property as his, but on the 28th March 1868 his claim was disallowed, on the ground that in two suits previously brought against C and others for possession of the same property, on the 30th December 1863, by X and Y, whose interest had, pending the suit, been purchased by B, it had been decreed that the land belonged to B. The decrees in these suits were dated 13th and 19th January 1864; they were in favour of B, and ran in his name alone. C had purchased a moiety of the property at an auction sale on the 7th March 1859; X and Y claimed under a pre-existing mortgage over the same property, the equity of redemption under which had been foreclosed. C now brought a suit against A and B for confirmation of his possession and a declaration of his title to the property. He alleged that B was his servant, and had purchased the interest of X and Y in the property benami for him; that he (C) had made the purchase with his own money in the name of B; that the suits originally brought by X and Y had really been compromised; that while the decrees of the 13th and 19th January 1864 were nominally in favour of B, they were really in his (C's) favour; and that the suit brought by X and Y had been allowed to proceed in B's name, in order that C's title might be strengthened by a decree in his favour, B being only nominally the decree-holder. C also stated that, since his purchase on 7th March 1859, he had always been in possession, and he dated his cause of action from the 28th March 1868, when his claim to the property which had been attached by A in his suit against B was disallowed. The Subordinate Judge gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff C. B alone appealed to the High Court. Held that C, not having been disturbed in his possession, and seeking a declaration of his title only and no relief, should have stated clearly and precisely what that title was; that as against A, who had not appealed, the decision of the Subordinate Judge was final; that as between B and C the matter was res adjudicata; that C could not go behind the decrees of the 13th and 19th January 1864 which had been passed in favour of B, and show that the purchase by B and subsequent decrees were really benami for C and in his favour. "Representative."—A purchaser at an execution-sale is not as such the representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 115 of the Evidence Act. A Hindu, governed by the Mitakshara School of Law, died on the 12th May 1867, leaving him surviving a widow B and a brother R, who was admittedly the next reversioner. In July 1867 B purported to adopt a son D to A, and subsequently in September 1867 obtained a certificate under Act XL of 1858. In 1872 B obtained a loan from the plaintiff M of Rs. 9,000, and to secure its repayment executed a mortgage of seven mouzahs in favour of M as guardian of D. The money was advanced and mortgage executed at the instigation of R and with his consent, and upon his representation that D was the duly adopted son of A, and it was admitted that the money was specifically advanced for, as well as applied towards, the payment of decrees obtained against A in his lifetime and against his estate after his death. B died in 1878. On the 14th August 1880 M instituted a suit against D upon his mortgage, and in that suit he made S a party-defendant as being the purchaser of the mortgagor's interest in one of the mouzahs included in his mortgage. On the 26th June 1882 M obtained a decree declaring that he was entitled to recover the amount due by sale of the mortgaged mouzahs. In the proceedings taken in execution of that decree M was opposed by L, who was afterwards held to be a benamidar for S, who claimed that he had on the 8th November 1880 purchased

424 ——— Suit against de facto man-of such suit as barred by limitation—Subsequent suit against same defendant with sanction of Advocate General—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539—In 1887 certain persons alleging that they had been appointed trustees of a temple and its property by its founder Purshotam, brought a suit to evict Purshotam's son from the premises, alleging that he had been their gumbasta that they had dismissed him, and that he refused to give up the property. The High Court dismissed that suit on the ground that it was barred by limitation. In 1882 the plaintiffs brought the present suit with the consent of the Advocate General, under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, against the same defendant alleging that after Purshotam's death the defendant had entered into possession of the property and for some years had carried out the trusts created by his father Purshotam, but that latterly he had claimed the property as his own and refused to perform the trusts.

They prayed that trustees might be appointed and the property made over to such trustees. The defendant contended that the plaintiffs in both the suits were the same, viz., persons representing the same certus que trustent, i.e. the devotees of the temple or the general public, that they sued in the same right and as the plaintiffs in the former suit were held barred by limitation, the plaintiffs in the present suit were also barred. Held that the present suit was not barred. The plaintiffs in the former suit had no general warrant, such as is conferred on plaintiffs suing under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, to represent the public the objects of the charity. They based their title to sue on their particular appointment by Purshotam, and when it was found that they had by limitation lost their rights to the title derived from that appointment, they ceased to represent the public just as though they had been removed

In a suit brought by the zamindar to recover the land it was contended that the decision of the survey officer was not binding on the zamindar because he was not properly represented by his guardian at the enquiry. Held that the decision of the survey officer was binding on the zamindar, and that the matter in dispute was res judicata, no appeal by way of suit as provided by the Boundary Act, 1860, s. 25, having been brought. KAMARAJU v. 430. — Party for purpose of discovery only—Civil Procedure Code, 1832, ss. 13, 43—Joint wrong-doers, Judgment against one of several—Contract Act, s. 43.—Prior to and in the year 1865 the defendant's brother B carried on an extensive business in Bombay and China. The defendant and another brother A carried on a separate business under the name of A H. In December 1866 B became insolvent, and his property vested in the official assignee. The present suit was brought in 1887 against the defendant by the official assignee to recover certain property which he alleged belonged to the insolvent, and ought to be distributed amongst his creditors. The plaintiff alleged that in 1865 the insolvent was possessed of a very large amount of property, and that, being unwilling to meet his liabilities, he and his son and his two brothers, viz., A and the defendant R, fraudulently concealed his property from his creditors, and in September 1866 he himself went to Damar beyond British jurisdiction. In 1891 the plaintiff, having obtained information that some of the insolvent's property was in the possession of his brother A, filed a suit (473 of 1881) against A to recover it. That suit was referred to arbitration, and the plaintiff obtained a decree for Rs. 3,60,000. The plaintiff now alleged that, shortly before the hearing of that suit, and subsequently, he had obtained information which led him to believe that the defendant had obtained some of the insolvent's property for which he was accountable. The defendant had been made a party to the former suit (473 of 1881) for the purpose of discovery only, and it was in the course of such discovery being given that some of the above information had been obtained. The plaintiff then set forth, in detail, the various items of claim in respect of which the plaintiff sought to make the defendant liable. The defendant pleaded that the said claims had been in issue in the former suit (473 of 1881), and were adjudicated upon, and that this suit was therefore barred by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code; that the plaintiff was barred by s. 43 of the

The defendant was made a party to the former suit for certain limited purposes only. No relief was asked from him, no decree was made against him. He was merely a nominal defendant.

Similarly, in a matter where a judgment against one of several wrong doers in a bar to an action on the same matter against the others. Such of the wrongs therefore alleged in the present suit as were of a joint character, and were adjudicated upon the previous suit, were extinguished by the former judgment. His claim was dismissed in lower Courts, and the case came up on special appeal. Meanwhile plaintiff brought suits against another set of tenants on the same estate, in which defendant again intervened on the same ground as before. Held that the decision in the former set of cases, unless and until set aside in special appeal, was binding on the intervenor, even though the estate was of such value that the Court which passed the decrees in the rent suits would not have jurisdiction to try the title which was in dispute. [2 C. L. R., 33]

439. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Suit for rent.—The plaintiffs brought this suit to establish, as against the defendants, their title to certain land in the occupation of a tenant. In a previous suit instituted by one of the present defendants against the tenant for rent, one of the present plaintiffs (representing the right now claimed by all of them) intervened as a defendant, on the ground that he was the person entitled to the rent, and failed to establish his claim. Held, following the Full Bench case of Hurri Sunker Mookerjee v. Mukhtaram Patro, 13 B. L. R., 238, that the plaintiffs in this suit were barred by the judgment in the former suit. When once it is made clear that the self-same right and title is substantially in issue in two suits, the precise form in which either suit was brought, or the fact that the plaintiff in the one case was the defendant in the other, becomes immaterial. 454. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13.—Two-thirds of a village were sold by T, P, and B. B was the widow of S, her name being recorded in respect of the property formerly recorded in his name, and what she sold was his one-third share in the village, the other one-third being sold by T and P. The vendors having refused to give possession of the property, the purchasers sued them for possession of it and joined as defendants to the suit C, D, and M, to whom belonged the remaining one-third share in the village. These latter persons contended, inter alia, that the family was a joint one, and that B was not competent to alienate her deceased husband's share in the village. The Court decided that the family was joint. After B's death, her daughter K, whose name had been recorded in place of her mother's, made a usufructuary mortgage of another village in which her deceased father had formerly owned a share. A suit was brought by certain persons who had purchased the right in the same village of the representatives in interest of C, D, and M against K, her mortgagee, and their vendors, to set aside the mortgage and recover the interest which they had purchased. They contended that the family was joint, and that the question whether it was joint or divided was res judicata by reason of the decision in the former litigation. Held that the question whether the family was joint or divided had not, in the former suit, been determined among the defendants inter se, but simply as against the plaintiff, and could only be res judicata against him or parties claiming under the same title; and the decree in that suit was therefore not binding against

The suit was dismissed on the ground that the sale had never taken place. Held that the finding as to the alleged sale was one between the plaintiff and the defendants in the suit, and not between the defendant-vendor and the defendant-vendee, who were not litigating, and would not bar adjudication of the matter in issue between them in a suit brought by the latter for the establishment of the sale. *JUMNA SINGH v. The question whether P V was divided or not from N was tried. It was found that the will in writing was valid, that P V was divided, and that B's title was not proved. In a suit by L N against P V to recover certain land granted to her by the will executed by N,—Held that the question whether P V was divided from N was res judicata under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure by reason of the decision in the former suit, although in that suit P V and L N were both defendants. *VENKAYYA v. The tenant was dispossessed by the present karnavan, and in 1883 sued him and the plaintiff to recover possession of part of the land. That suit was dismissed on the ground that the above allegations of the plaintiff were unfounded. It appeared that the property had been acquired in the lifetime of the plaintiff's maternal grandfather, who had died more than thirty years before suit, and that one of his sons had obtained a decree for his share of it in a suit to which, among others, the plaintiff and the father of the present contesting defendants were parties as defendants, and that a plea then raised by the latter to the effect that the property had been acquired by him was overruled. The present claim was sought to be resisted on the same ground, which was the subject of the second issue, and it was held by the lower Courts that the defendants were estopped from raising the plea, but there was no evidence as to whether this matter had been in controversy between the present plaintiff and her uncle in the former suit, which was decided ex-parte as far as she was concerned. Held, on second appeal without finding on the question of res judicata, that in the absence of evidence no finding on the second issue should be called for. ABDUL KADER v ATSHAYMA

The property had previously belonged to the father, since deceased, of the first defendant's wife, and her sister defendant No 2. Shortly after the father's death a suit for maintenance was brought by his sister in law against his widow and two daughters in which the then defendants alleged that the property now in question had been given by him to the wife of the plaintiff's vendor, and the Court recorded a finding that the gift was valid. Defendant No 2 now raised a plea that the gift to her sister had not been accompanied by possession and was invalid and she asserted title in herself under the will of her mother, under which title she had been in possession for ten years. Held that the second defendant was not precluded by the proceedings in the former suit, in which defendant No 2 and the wife of defendant No 1 had been co-defendants, from raising the plea above referred to. RAMANUJA ATTANGAR v NARAYANA ATTANGAR

In a suit for contribution brought by G against S and A the lower Appellate Court found that G, S, and A had conspired in setting up a false defence in the former suit in order to defeat P's claim. The only evidence on which the lower Appellate Court had acted as establishing such collusion was the finding of the Court in the former suit (gathered from the grounds of appeal in that suit). Held that that finding was inadmissible in evidence, as laid down in Surrender Nath Pal Chowdhry v. Braje Nath Pal Chowdhry, I. L. (a) GENERAL CASES.

465. — — — — — Court without jurisdiction.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13.—The decision of a Court, in order to be conclusive in another Court, must have been that of a Court which would have had jurisdiction to decide the question raised in the subsequent suit in which the decision is given in evidence as conclusive. The words "Court of competent jurisdiction," used in s. 13 of the Court of Civil Procedure, include the meaning that the first Court must not have been precluded by the pecuniary limit of its jurisdiction from deciding the question raised in the other. The two Courts must exercise such concurrent jurisdiction in regard to the pecuniary limit of their powers that the subject-matter of the second suit would not have been beyond the powers of the Court which disposed of the prior one. The defence made to a suit on a bond for Rs 12,000 and interest thereon, in a Court having no pecuniary limit of jurisdiction, was that in a prior suit for Rs 1,665, balance of interest, brought in a Court with power to try suits not exceeding Rs 5,000 in value, the principal sum due on that bond had been decided to be Rs 4,790. Held that the issue as to the amount of principal due on the bond had not been heard and finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 13. *Misir RAGHO BARDIAL v. 466. — — — — — Act VIII of 1859, s. 2—Act X of 1877, s. 13—Cross-appeal—Practice.—The decision in a suit in order to be final and conclusive as res judicata upon an issue raised in another suit must be the decision of a Court which would have had jurisdiction to decide the question raised in the subsequent suit, in which the prior decision is given in evidence as conclusive. This proposition, stated in the judgment in Edun v. Bechun, 8 W. R., 175, and affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Misir Raghobardial v. Sheo Bak h Singh, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 439, is applicable equally to cases under Act VIII of 1859, s. 2 (as supplemented by the general law), and to cases under the more complete enactment in Act X of 1877, s. 13, which is not to be construed as having altered the former law. A suit was brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge by a Hindu against the widow of a deceased brother, claiming his property by right of survivorship, the issue being whether, at the death of the latter, the ownership of the brothers was joint or separate. An order under Act XXVII of 1860, granting a certificate to the widow, did not, on the above issue, operate as res judicata in the widow's favour, being a proceeding of representation, and not otherwise of title. Held also that a decision of the same issue in a Munsif's Court in a rent suit brought by the widow, the surviving brother, on his application, having been made a party defendant under s. 73 of Act VIII of 1859, did not constitute res judicata in her favour. Krishna Behari Roy v. Brajeswari Chowdhry, I. L. R., 2 I. A., 283, referred to and followed. Held also that the brother having appealed against a decree dismissing the suit as res judicata (the judgment which that decree followed having nevertheless found that the widow was disentitled by reason of the brothers having been in fact joint in estate), the widow could have supported the decree without filing a cross-appeal as to that finding, on the ground that the decree had been rightly made (though not for the reason given) in her favour. *RUN BAHADUR SINGH v. So the judgment in a suit before the Deputy Collector which decides merely questions of rent—in other words a rent suit pronounced by a Court not having jurisdiction to decide the question of title to the property itself cannot be regarded as amounting to res judicata in a subsequent suit brought to decide the question of title to that property. *Ran Bahadoor v. The lower Court held that the defendants were entitled to the District Court to recover from the defendants the sum of Rs 68 alleged to have been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of the land in question. He made the same allegations as in the former suit. The District Judge dismissed the suit, holding it to be res judicata. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held that, although

In 1882 S sued P to recover all the property comprised in the deed of gift. Held that S was estopped by the decree in the former suit from claiming the house. It was contended by P that the deed of gift was invalid. Held that, as to validity of the deed of gift, the decree of the Munsif's Court was not the decree of a competent Court within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and therefore that S was not estopped from showing that the deed was valid and claiming the rest of the property comprised therein. PATHUMA v. 473. ——— Jurisdiction of Court at time suit is brought—Decision of Munsif—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13.—In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed; and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties, a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. The fact that the previous suit had been brought in a Munsif's Court, whereas the present suit was brought before a Subordinate Judge, did not affect the question, inasmuch as the property was the same, and it was not shown that the present suit, if brought in 1860, would not have been within the jurisdiction of the Munsif, nor was it alleged that the suit in 1860 was beyond his jurisdiction. In s. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 the words "in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit" refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the first suit is brought. Thus, when the first suit is within the jurisdiction of a Munsif, and the subsequent suit, by reason of an increase in value of the property, is beyond his jurisdiction, such subsequent suit would nevertheless be barred, inasmuch as, if the subsequent suit had been brought at the time when the first suit was brought, the Munsif would have been competent to try it. GORI NATH CHOBAY v. Reading expl. VI with the earlier part of s. 13 the term "Court of competent jurisdiction" includes a foreign competent Court. The plaintiff sued as the adopted son of O to recover certain property in British territory. The defendants disputed the plaintiff's adoption. The plaintiff relied on a decree of a Native Court which he obtained against defendant No. 2 in a suit for possession of certain other property belonging to O and situate within the territorial jurisdiction of the Native Court. In that suit the question of plaintiff's adoption had been raised and decided in plaintiff's favour. In the present suit both the lower Courts, without attaching any weight to this decree of the Native Court, held that the plaintiff's adoption was not proved and dismissed the suit. Held on second appeal that the question of plaintiff's adoption was res judicata as between him and defendant No. 2, the judgment of the Native Court being one on the merits and conclusive between the parties within the territory of the Native State. BADABHAT v. a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises. After the decree, a compromise was effected between all the parties, with the exception of R S, by the terms of which, in consideration of the judgment-debtors (mortgagors) undertaking to do certain acts, S S promised to execute his decree against only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises. The judgment-debtors (mortgagors) having failed to carry out the compromise, S S applied for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises, but on the petition of R S setting out the terms of the compromise to which he was no party, the Subordinate Judge, by an order of the 7th September 1885, held that under the agreement S S was entitled to sell only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises, which was accordingly directed to be sold. That order was not appealed against, but subsequently in March 1886 S S made a fresh application for a sale of the remainder of the premises, R S objecting. Held that the order of the 7th September was one which the Court was competent to make under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and by reason of that order not being appealed it became final. *BASUDEO NARAIN SINGH v. 485. — Separate suit on disallowance of objection to execution—Evidence Act, s. 44.—In execution of decree the defendant, who was sued as the representative of her deceased brother, objected under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the attachment of certain lands to which she set up independent title. The objection was disallowed, and the land was sold. She then sued the execution-purchaser to set aside the Court-sale, and obtained a decree, against which no appeal was preferred. She now sued for possession. Held that, as against the execution-purchaser, the decree in the former suit was res judicata and therefore final. Per Cur.—The words “not competent” in s. 44 of the Evidence Act refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction. *KETTILAMMA v. 486. — “Court of competent jurisdiction”—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 98, 103.—Landlord and tenant—Suit for damages against lessor—Joinder of one of two co-lessees as defendant—Suit dismissed against such lessee.—In 1883 A, the trustee of a certain charity, executed in favour of X and Y an agricultural lease for nine years and delivered over possession of the lands comprised in it, being part of the trust property. The lease contained a provision that it should be cancelled on default being made in payment of the rent and kist, and it contained no express covenant for quiet enjoyment. In 1887 default was made in payment of the rent and kist. A thereupon cancelled the lease and sued X and Y in a subordinate Court and obtained a decree for the arrear, the total amount of his claim being Rs. 2,807. In that suit X alleged that Y was merely a name lender for A, who desired to benefit himself at the expense of the charity, and also that certain raiyats setting up a false claim had evicted X from the lands demised at the instigation of A, who had subsequently sought unsuccessfully to obtain further advantages for himself. The Subordinate Judge framed an issue on each of these allegations and recorded findings in the negative. In the same year X filed a suit for damages for breach of contract against A and Y in the High Court, repeating in his plaint the above allegations. When that suit came on for hearing, it was dismissed for default, Y being the only party who appeared. X now sued A again on the same cause of action, making the same allegations. Y was subsequently brought on to the record as being a necessary party to the suit, being joined as second defendant, but he applied to be and was struck off the record on the ground that the dismissal of the former suit in the High Court was final as against him. Held that the matters put in issue in the subordinate Court were not res judicata by reason of the decision of that Court; and that the plaint disclosed a good cause of action against the lessor. *VITHILINGA PADAYACHI v. Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 13, 433—Suit against a Sovereign Prince.—A suit for a declaration of the title of the plaintiffs' tarwad to certain land was filed in a District Court against the Maharaja of Cochin and others, including the trustees of a devasom. It appeared that the same land was the subject of a suit instituted in a subordinate Court on the 6th August 1877, to which the representatives of both the plaintiffs' tarwad and the devasom were parties, and that the land was then found to be the property of the devasom; and a decree was passed accordingly. It was contended that the present claim was not res judicata by reason of that decree, because, under the provisions of Act X of 1877, s. 433, which came into operation during the pendency of that suit, no Sovereign Prince could be sued in any Court subordinate to a District Court, and the Court which passed that decree was not therefore “a Court of jurisdiction competent to try” the present suit within the meaning of Civil Procedure Code, s. 13. Held that, although these words must be taken to refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the suit was heard and determined, yet the present claim was res judicata, since the title to the land was a matter in issue within the cognizance of the Subordinate Judge and was adjudicated on by him. *KUNJI AMMA v. 496. ————— Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 13.—In a suit for arrears of rent brought against A in a Munsif's Court, B intervened as a defendant, alleging that he, and not A, was the true tenant in possession. B succeeded in the first Court, but on appeal it was decided that B had no right in or possession of the tenure. In a second suit for arrears of rent brought against A, the tenure was sold in execution of decree, and the landlords purchased and took possession of it. B brought the present suit (valued at more than Rs. 1,000) in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for declaration of his right and recovery of possession. The lower Court of appeal held that the decision in the former suit, in which B intervened, operated as res judicata upon the question of title raised in the present suit, and in support of that decision it was contended that the word "suit" in s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code included an appeal, and that, as the District Judge who tried the appeal in the former suit had jurisdiction to try the present suit and it was the decision of that Court which was pleaded in bar, the defence on the ground of res judicata was good and valid. Held that, as the Small Cause Court could not have jurisdiction to decide as to the lien, its decree would only be relevant as showing that the defendants at the time owed the money to the plaintiff, and that it would be open to the defendant to question the execution and bona fides of the bond as affecting the property which he had taken by conveyance. *PONOLI MULLICK v. Held that the proceedings of the settlement officer were of an executive rather than of a judicial character, and did not operate either as a res judicata under s 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure or as a final decree under s 107 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, estopping the plaintiffs from having the same matters tried by the regular Civil Court. The plaintiff thereupon, under the provisions of s. 39 of that Act, preferred an application contesting his liability to be ejected, alleging that he had a right of occupancy in such land jointly with the defendants and was not their sub-tenant. The Assistant Collector trying the case finally decided that the plaintiff was the sub-tenant of the defendants, and the plaintiff was ejected. The plaintiff then sued the defendants in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right as an occupancy tenant to such land and possession of the same. Held that the decision of the Assistant Collector as to the respective rights of the parties could only be regarded as incidental and ancillary to the main point to be determined by him, viz., whether, assuming the relation of landlord and tenant to exist between the parties, the plaintiff was liable to be ejected; and such decision was not a bar to a fresh determination of such rights in the Civil Court. BIRBAL v. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), s. 112 and 114—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 13—Mortgage—Foreclosure—Suit for redemption.*—One H S mortgaged in 1864, by two mortgages of the same date certain immovable property to one A S. In 1877 A S applied for foreclosure of these mortgages and obtained an order under s. 8 of Regulation XXVII of 1806, but these proceedings were, it was alleged, never brought to a legal conclusion. Subsequently, the mortgagee applied in a Court of revenue for partition in his favour of the mortgaged property. The mortgagor resisted that application on the ground that the foreclosure proceedings had not been completed; but the Court, acting under ss. 113 and 114 of Act XIX of 1873, overruled that objection and granted partition in favour of the mortgagee. In 1892 the mortgagor sued the representatives of the original mortgagee in a Civil Court for redemption of the mortgages of 1864. The defendants resisted the suit principally on the plea that s. 13 of Act XIV of 1852 applied and was a bar to the suit; but no plea of res judicata outside s. 13 was raised. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed as stated by the principle of res judicata. The plaintiff appealed. Held by TYRRELL, J., that the Court of revenue being incompetent to determine the suit in which the issue whether the mortgages had been foreclosed or not was subsequently raised, s. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 did not apply, and no plea of res judicata outside s. 13 could be entertained, inasmuch as no such plea had been put forward in the Court below or in the High Court. *Misir Raghobar Dial v. S N and B N, on their application, were made plaintiffs in that suit, but no alteration in the amount either of stamp or claim was made in the plaint. The Principal Sudder Ameen awarded to A B one-fourth of the field, and to S N and B N conjointly he awarded one-fourth, but as to the remaining one-half he passed no decree, as it had not been claimed in the plaint. S N and B N thereupon filed a fresh suit to recover possession of their remaining one-fourth of the field, and the Principal Sudder Ameen passed a decree in their favour. This decree was confirmed by the Joint Judge. Held that the decrees of the lower Courts were erroneous, and that the claim of the plaintiffs was barred by the provisions of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, but leave was granted to them to apply to the Court below for a review of the decree passed in the former suit. On the death of plaintiff in that suit, the reversionary heirs of G sued the appellant for an adjudication of their right to 16 annas of Mouzah M B, and it was found that Mouzahs B K and M B were not usli with dakhili, but distinct mouzahs, and that the mortgage-deed did not include Mouzah M B. Held, affirming the judgment of the High Court, that in the first suit the Court was called on to adjudicate upon the property as described in the body of the plaint, and not as described in the schedule annexed thereto, and that the question in the latter suit was therefore not res judicata. 592. ——— Issue advisedly left undecided in former suit.—In 1878 A, as the auction-purchaser of a talukh, sued 35 persons for possession of a part of this talukh. In this suit the issues raised were—(1) whether A had purchased the whole talukh, or an 8-anna share of the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors therein; (2) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the talukh as given in the plaint. The Court held that A had purchased the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors in the talukh, and as it appeared that some of the defendants were not judgment-debtors, and as it did not appear what portions of the talukh were held by the several defendants, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit within the proper time. In 1880 A brought a fresh suit against 16 of the same defendants and 19 others for possession of a portion of the same talukh. The issues raised were—(1) whether the suit was barred under s. 13 of the Code; (2) whether A had purchased the whole or a portion of the talukh; (3) whether the defendants were in possession of all the disputed land, and, if not, what portions of the talukh were held by the several defendants; (4) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the talukh. The Munsif held that the suit was not barred, and on the merits gave A a decree. The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was barred, and refused to go into the merits. Held that the question whether A had purchased the whole or only a portion of the talukh was res judicata, but that the question as to what lands A was entitled to by virtue of his purchase having been left undecided in the former suit, A was entitled to a decision on that point. 601. — Dismissal of application to set aside ex-parte decree and sale in execution on ground of fraud. Right to bring suit for same purpose without appealing against order—Effect of not appealing against an appealable order—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 13, 108, 244, and 311.—The plaintiff, having applied unsuccessfully under ss. 108 and 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside an ex-parte decree against him and the sale of his property in execution thereof on the ground of fraud, and without preferring an appeal against the order rejecting his said application under s. 108 of the Code, instituted this suit praying for the same relief. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit as not maintainable. Held that such a suit was maintainable, and that ss. 13 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were no bar thereto. The facts that his application under s. 108 was unsuccessful, and that he did not appeal against the order rejecting that application, did not disentitle him from prosecuting his remedy by suit on the ground of fraud. Abdul Mazumdar v. Mahomed Gazi Chowdhry, I. L. R., 21 Cal., 605, approved. Held also that, when there is an appeal against a decision, the effect of not appealing is that the decision holds good for what it is worth; so far as concerns any other modes of relief available, the person not appealing is in no worse position than if he had appealed and failed. *Raj Kishen Mockenjee v. 603. — Point decided by lower Court, but not dealt with on appeal—Issue as to enhancement of rent—Subsequent suit for enhancement.—In a suit for enhancement of rent, the Munsif found that the service of notice was sufficient, but that the rent could not be enhanced. On appeal, the District Judge found that the service was insufficient, and dismissed the suit, expressly declining to consider the question whether the rent was enhanceable. In a subsequent suit for enhancement by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, the Munsif found that no sufficient ground for enhancement had been made out, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the Munsif on this point, and held also that the decision of the Munsif in the first suit, that the rent could not be enhanced, was res judicata. Held that, where the decision of a lower Court is appealed to a superior tribunal, which for any reason does not think fit to decide the matter, the question is left open, and is not res judicata. CHUNDER COOMAR MITTAL v. NILVARTU . I. L. R., 6 Bom., 110

605. — Effect of judgment pending appeal—Dismissal of appeal for want of prosecution.—The plaintiff sued to recover two villages from the defendants, claiming title from C, the purchaser. The first defendant alleged that her husband, not C, was the purchaser. This question was determined in a former suit, in which the present first defendant was plaintiff, and the present plaintiff defendant, in favour of the present plaintiff, by the Civil Judge, and the decision was confirmed on appeal by the Sudder Court. An appeal to Her Majesty in Council was dismissed for want of prosecution. Held that the matter in issue was res judicata. Quære—Whether the former judgment could be deemed conclusive whilst an appeal was pending. *KARKALAPUDI SURİYANARAYANARAZU GARU v. In 1832 A and four other rayats, not parties to the former suit, sued B, C and thirteen others not parties to the former suit for a decree declaring that the plaintiffs were entitled to the exclusive use of the water in the channel by day. The lower Courts held that the suit was barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that, as between the plaintiffs other than A and the defendants and as between A and the defendants other than B and C, the suit was not barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *THANAKOTT v. 13. ———— Husband and wife

—Hindu law—Suit by Hindu husband out of caste at time of suit—Decree for restitution conditional on plaintiff's obtaining restoration to caste.

—In a suit by a Hindu, a Sunar by caste, against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights, it was found that the plaintiff, in consequence of having left his wife and cohabited with a Mahomedan woman (whom, however, he had left at the time of suit), had been turned out of caste, but that the misconduct of which he had been guilty was not of such a character as to render him liable to perpetual excommunication, and upon making certain amends, he could obtain restoration to his caste. Held that, while the plaintiff was entitled to come into Court for the relief prayed, unless, in the circumstances above stated, the marriage had, under the Hindu law, been dissolved, the Court was bound, when asked to employing coercive process to compel a wife to return to her husband, not to disregard any reasonable objection she might raise to such process being granted, either on the ground that she had been subjected before to personal injury or cruelty at the hands of her husband, or that she went in fear of one or the other, or that the husband was actually living in adultery with another woman, or that, if she resumed cohabitation or association with him, he being outcasted, she would herself incur the risk of being put out of caste. Held therefore that in decreeing a claim of this description a Court was entitled, if it saw good reason to do so, while recognizing the civil rights of husband to his wife to put such conditions upon the enforcement of his rights by legal process as the circumstances of the case might fairly demand; and that, applying this principle to the present case, the defendant might reasonably ask the Court, before compelling her return to her husband, to make it a condition that he should first obtain his restoration to caste. Held also that, under the Hindu law, the fact that a husband had had adulterous intercourse with another woman, which had ceased at the time of suit, was not an answer to a claim by him for restitution of conjugal rights. PAIGI v. SHEONARAIN

14. ———— Ground for suit—Mahomedan law—Dower—Lien of wife for dower.

—In a suit brought by a husband for restitution of conjugal rights, the parties being Sunni Mahomedans governed by the Hanafi law, the defendant pleaded that the suit was not maintainable, as the plaintiff had not paid her dower-debt. The plaintiff thereupon deposited the whole of the dower-debt in Court. It appeared that the defendant's dower had been fixed without any specification as to whether it was to be wholly or partly prompt. It also appeared that she had attained majority before the marriage, and that she had cohabited with the plaintiff for three months after marriage, and there was no evidence that she had ever demanded payment of her dower before the suit was filed, or that she had refused cohabitation on the ground of non-payment. Besides the plea already mentioned, she also relied upon allegations of divorce and cruelty, but these allegations were found to be untrue. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, holding that, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not paid the dower-debt at the time when he brought his suit, he had no cause of action under the provisions of the Mahomedan law. Held by the Full Bench that the lower Appellate Court's view of the Mahomedan law relating to conjugal rights and the husband's obligation to pay dower was erroneous; and that the plaintiff, under the circumstances of the case, had a right to maintain the suit. —Dower—Prompt dower—Stipulation as to residence.—In a suit by a Mahomedan husband for restitution of conjugal rights the defendant, his wife, pleaded first that he had entered into a stipulation at the time of the marriage to reside with her in the house of her father and that he had not done so; and secondly that he had not paid the exigible portion of the dower due to her, the marriage having been consummated.—Held as to the first point, upon the facts (after referring to the authorities, but without deciding whether a stipulation of this kind can be valid in any case), that the stipulation relied upon was not a sufficient answer to the plaintiff's claim. Held upon the authorities that the non-payment of prompt dower is not a sufficient plea in bar of such a suit. *Abdul Kadir v. 16. ———— Hindu law—

Defence to suit—Cruelty of husband.—A suit for restitution of conjugal rights may be maintained by a Hindu: but quære if the same state of circumstances which would justify such a suit or which would be an answer to such a suit in the case of a European would be equally so in the case of a Hindu. Where cruelty on the part of the husband has been condoned by the wife, a much smaller measure of offence would be sufficient to neutralize the condonation than would have justified the wife, in the first instance, in separating from her husband. But the act or acts constituting the offence must be of such a nature as to give the wife just reason to suppose that the husband is about to renew his former course of conduct, and consequently to entertain well-founded apprehension for her personal safety. RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS—continued.

restitution of conjugal rights. PURSHOTANDAS MANICKLAL v. BAIMANI . I. L. R., 21 Bom., 610

13. ———— Husband and wife—Hindu law Suit by Hindu husband out of caste at time of suit—Decree for restitution conditional on plaintiff's obtaining restoration to caste.—In a suit by a Hindu, a Sannar by caste, against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights, it was found that the plaintiff, in consequence of having left his wife and cohabited with a Mahomedan woman (whom, however, he had left at the time of suit), had been turned out of caste, but that the misconduct of which he had been guilty was not of such a character as to render him liable to perpetual excommunication, and upon making certain amends, he could obtain restoration to his caste. Held that, while the plaintiff was entitled to come into Court for the relief prayed, unless, in the circumstances above stated, the marriage had, under the Hindu law, been dissolved, the Court was bound, when asked to employing coercive process to compel a wife to return to her husband, not to disregard any reasonable objection she might raise to such process being granted, either on the ground that she had been subjected before to personal injury or cruelty at the hands of her husband, or that she went in fear of one or the other or that the husband was actually living in adultery with another woman, or that, if she resumed cohabitation or association with him, he being outcasted, she would herself incur the risk of being put out of caste. Held therefore that in decreeing a claim of this description a Court was entitled, if it saw good reason to do so, while recognizing the civil rights of husband to his wife to put such conditions upon the enforcement of his rights by legal process as the circumstances of the case might fairly demand; and that, applying this principle to the present case, the defendant might reasonably ask the Court, before compelling her return to her husband, to make it a condition that he should first obtain his restoration to caste. Held also that, under the Hindu law, the fact that a husband had had adulterous intercourse with another woman, which had ceased at the time of suit, was not an answer to a claim by him for restitution of conjugal rights. PAIGI v. SHEONARAIN

14. ———— Ground for suit—Mahomedan law—Dower—Lien of wife for dower.—In a suit brought by a husband for restitution of conjugal rights, the parties being Sunni Mahomedans governed by the Hanafi law, the defendant pleaded that the suit was not maintainable, as the plaintiff had not paid her dower-debt. The plaintiff thereupon deposited the whole of the dower-debt in Court. It appeared that the defendant's dower had been fixed without any specification as to whether it was to be wholly or partly prompt. It also appeared that she had attained majority before the marriage, and that she had cohabited with the plaintiff for three months after marriage, and there was no evidence that she had ever demanded payment of her dower before the suit was filed, or that she had refused cohabitation on the ground of non-payment. Besides the plea already mentioned, she also relied upon allegations of divorce and cruelty, but these allegations were found to be untrue. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, holding that, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not paid the dower-debt at the time when he brought his suit, he had no cause of action under the provisions of the Mahomedan law. Held by the Full Bench that the lower Appellate Court's view of the Mahomedan law relating to conjugal rights and the husband's obligation to pay dower was erroneous; and that the plaintiff, under the circumstances of the case, had a right to maintain the suit. ABDUL KADIR v. SALIMA . I. L. R., 8 All., 149

15. ———— Mahomedan law—Dower—Prompt dower—Stipulation as to residence.—In a suit by a Mahomedan husband for restitution of conjugal rights the defendant, his wife, pleaded first that he had entered into a stipulation at the time of the marriage to reside with her in the house of her father and that he had not done so; and secondly that he had not paid the exigible portion of the dower due to her, the marriage having been consummated. Held as to the first point, upon the facts (after referring to the authorities, but without deciding whether a stipulation of this kind can be valid in any case), that the stipulation relied upon was not a sufficient answer to the plaintiff's claim. Held upon the authorities that the non-payment of prompt dower is not a sufficient plea in bar of such a suit. Abdul Kadir v. Salima, I. L. R., 8 All., 149, approved HAMIDUNNESSA BIBI v. ZOHIRUDDIN SHEIK [I. L. R., 17 Calc., 670]

16. ———— Hindu law—Defence to suit—Cruelty of husband.—A suit for restitution of conjugal rights may be maintained by a Hindu: but quære if the same state of circumstances which would justify such a suit or which would be an answer to such a suit in the case of a European would be equally so in the case of a Hindu. Where cruelty on the part of the husband has been condoned by the wife, a much smaller measure of offence would be sufficient to neutralize the condonation than would have justified the wife, in the first instance, in separating from her husband. But the act or acts constituting the offence must be of such a nature as to give the wife just reason to suppose that the husband is about to renew his former course of conduct, and consequently to entertain well-founded apprehension for her personal safety. decree was subsequently set aside on B's appeal, but no order as to restitution was made in it. Held, on motion by H, that he was entitled to be put into the same position as before the partition was made (i.e., joint possession with A) and to remove any tenants who refused to vacate. *ROHNI SINGH v. 2. ———— Restitution of an advantage obtained by virtue of a decree of High Court subsequently reversed on appeal to Privy Council—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 583—Right of suit—Parties, Non-joinder of.—The holder of a decree of the High Court for costs assigned his rights under that decree. The assignee caused his name to be brought on to the record as transferee in place of the decree-holder, and he, and after him his legal representative, executed the decree against the judgment-debtor. The decree was appealed to the Privy Council, but the assignee was not a party to the record in that Court. The Privy Council reversed the decree. Thereupon the successful plaintiff applied under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure to obtain restitution from the representative of the assignee of the amount realized in execution of the decree of the High Court. Held that, whether or not the amount realized by the assignee was recoverable by suit, it was not recoverable by proceedings under s. 583 of the Code, inasmuch as the assignee was no party to the decree of the Privy Council. *BHAGWATI PRASAD v. 9. ——— Right to resume subordinate tenure by istemrardar—Customary right.—A custom was alleged entitling a Patwi Thakur, or chief belonging to the Rathor clan of Rajputs, who was the istemrardar of an ancient and impartible talukh in Ajmere, to resume land formerly part of it, but granted some generations back as a subordinate estate to a collateral relation of the chief. The ground of the resumption claimed was that the last successor to the estate so granted had died without issue and without adopting. Held that the Commissioner's judgment, which was that a right of resumption exercisable merely on the above ground had not been established, was correct, being supported to some extent certainly by answers received by the Chief Commissioner on enquiry from the neighbouring durbars of Rajputana chiefs, and on the whole, by the balance of the evidence. RAO BAHADUR SINGH v. 23 ——— Notice to parties—Party not in possession.—In resumption proceedings it is not necessary to give notice to a party not in possession or to make him a formal party to the suit. RAM CHUNDER SHAHA v COLLECTOR OF MYMENSINGH [22 W. R., 48]

24 ——— Beng Reg II of 1819, s 16—Omission to give notice.—Where the resumption officer, as directed by s 15 Regulation II of 1819 supplied the defendant in a resumption suit with a copy of his reasons for considering the lands in question liable to resumption and subsequently, in the absence of the defendant, declared

RESUMPTION—continued.2. PROCEDURE—concluded.

25. ——— Right to intervene in suit —Beng. Regs. II of 1819 and III of 1828—Decree of Special Commissioners.—In a suit by Government under Regulation II of 1819 to resume invalid lakhiraj land held by a mohunt, as the interests of the zamindar, who claimed a portion of the lands sought to be assessed, as forming part of his permanently-assessed estate, were liable to be affected by the decision of the Collector,—Held that he had a right to intervene and become a party to the suit, and to prefer an appeal from the decree. The decree of the Special Commissioners under Regulation III of 1828 was final, if no appeal or petition of review was presented within a reasonably sufficient period. MOHESHUR SINGH v. GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
[3 W. R., P. C., 45: 7 Moore's I. A., 283]

3. EFFECT OF RESUMPTION.

26. ——— Finality of proceedings—Injury to parties—Diluvion.—Resumption proceedings are final and not liable to question by the Civil Courts. But when proceedings take place in the nature of extensive settlements with other parties after intermediate and temporary settlements, and acts are done wholly without jurisdiction, or lands are taken not included in the original decree, there should be a remedy to parties deeming themselves to have been wronged thereby. If lands adjudged to Government in a resumption suit diluviate and re-form on the same site, Government does not thereby lose its rights to them, nor is it obliged to institute wholly new proceedings. Diluvion does not create any new right. COLLECTOR OF DACOA v. KISHEN KISHORE CHATTERJEE. JUGO BUNDHOO BOSE v. COLLECTOR OF DACOA
W. R., 1864, 273

27. ——— Finality of resumption-decree—Settlement proceedings—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—The ruling of the late Sudder Court as to the final and conclusive character of a resumption-decree was held not to apply to what was subsequently done administratively by a settlement officer, the proper distinction being that the decree of the Resumption Court as to the liability of the resumed mehal to be assessed with a Government demand is final; but the subsequent dealing by the settlement officer with alleged proprietary right and claim to land not mentioned in the decree, is open to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. MAHOMED GAZEE CHOWDREY v. LALL BEBEE

RAM CHUNDER SHAHA v. COLLECTOR OF MYMENSINGH
22 W. R., 48

28. ——— Effect on contract between zamindar and tenant—Resumption of lakhiraj tenure by Government—Under-tenants, Rights of.—The mere resumption of a lakhiraj tenure by Government does not dissolve the contract between the zamindar and tenant. The tenant has the option to determine his tenancy, or he may consent that the amount of revenue which the landlord must pay to Government, or a portion of it, shall be added to his original jumma. FARZHARA BANU v. AZIZUNNISEA BIHI

29. ——— Effect on tenant—Illegal assessment of revenue—Mad. Reg. XXVII of 1802.—In a suit against a Collector for an illegal seizure and subsequent usurpation of plaintiff's shares in an agraharam village for non-payment of tirvai due from other tenants of the village, and to recover the increased tirvai imposed by the Collector,—Held that the plaintiff's right to enjoy his share of the village lands under the original pottah was not legally determined by resumption; and that, continuing liable only to the fixed rent, the plaintiff was entitled to the return of the amount paid under compulsion, in excess of such rent, at the date of the suit. Madras Regulation XXVII of 1802 considered. ELLAIYA v. COLLECTOR OF SALEM

Affirmed by the Privy Council on appeal in BRETT v. ELLAIYA
[13 Moore's I. A., 104: 12 W. R., P. C., 33]

30. ——— Effect on howladar—Rights of howladars.—The resumption by Government of a parent estate did not nullify the existing rights of a howladar within the estate, or deprive him of the benefit of the presumption arising under s. 16 of Act X of 1859. MOTHOORA NATH GUNGOPADHYA v. SHRETA MONEE
9 W. R., 354

31. ——— Effect on sub-tenure—Sub-tenures before decennial settlement.—A sub-tenure created before, and in existence at the time of, the decennial settlement cannot be invalidated by any subsequent settlement of the mehal in which it is situated. Resumption of lakhiraj land under the revenue law does not destroy any such sub-tenure in the estate resumed. ABDOOL ALI v. RAMGUTTY
[12 W. R., 128]

32. ——— Effect on lakhirajdars—Rights of lakhirajdars—Settlement—Cause of action.—A resumption-decree does not destroy the proprietary right of the lakhirajdars, which continues unless and until they are dispossessed in due course of law. By obtaining a permanent settlement they acquire no new right; a cause of action accrues to them if ousted before settlement. THAKOOR DASS ROY CHOWDHRY v. NUBEEN KISHEN GHOSE
[15 W. R., 552]

33. ——— Effect on charitable trust—Omission of mention of existence of charitable trust or endowment.—The resumption of lands by Government, and the making a fresh settlement of the resumed lands without any allusion to their being held in trust for charitable purposes prior to the resumption proceedings, are not conclusive proof that there was no such trust. The only question decided by the Government in resuming was that those who claimed the land as lakhiraj had not been able to prove that the land was held under any such religious or charitable trust as would debar Government from resuming. LEELANUND SINGH BAHADOOR v. 40 ———— Effect on inamdar—Inam—Landlord and tenant—On the resumption of an inam the inamdar's right to exemption from the payment of the Government assessment ceases and the inamdar becomes liable to pay such assessment, but all his other rights remain unaffected and therefore those who were his tenants before the resumption do not thereby cease to be so and can be ejected if they are not permanent tenants or are not otherwise entitled to remain in possession GANGABHAI v KALAPA DARI MUKRYA 1 L R, 9 Bom., 419 of Government in 1873 and 1876, by which the plaintiff was recognized as the representative of the Waikar family, were not acts of State. The status of the Waikars and other persons, with whom the agreements of 1820 were entered into, was not that of an independent sovereign. They (the Waikars) were merely powerful saranjamdars subordinate to the Raja of Satara, and after the annexation of the territory of the Raja in 1819 they held their lands under the East India Company. Secretary of State for India v. Narayan Balbhanit Bhosle, Printed Judgments for 1883, p. 244. HARI SADASHIV v. AJMUDIN . . . I. L. R., 11 Bom., 235

42. ——— Resumption of saranjam by British Government, Effect of, on position and rights of the saranjamdar—Occupancy rights of a saranjamdar—Inam, Resumption of—Public and private property of an absolute chief—Landlord and tenant—Tenancy created by chief prior to resumption of land by Government—Effect of resumption on rights of landlord—Adverse possession—Recognition of tenant by Government officers, as occupant paying assessment, does not prejudice landlord's rights.—A, the Chief of Kagradd, let certain land to the defendant for a term of twelve years by a lease dated 12th June 1857. A died in the same year without male issue, and his saranjam was resumed by the British Government. In 1858 the Collector treated the defendant as occupant of the land in question for the purposes of assessment, and again in 1860 entered his name as occupant in the Government books. In January 1868 the widow of A adopted the plaintiff as his son. In 1881 the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover possession of the land let to the defendant in 1857. The defendant contended that the land was not the private land of A, but belonged to the State of Kagradd, which was resumed on his death by the Government; and that the plaintiff's claim was barred by the law of limitation. The Subordinate Judge allowed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land was the private property of A, and that the claim was not barred. The District Judge, on appeal, held that the land was not the private property of the Chief, but was the property of the State, and on the resumption of the State by the British Government, the defendant's lease came to an end, and the relation of landlord and tenant, previously existing between the Chief and the defendant, ceased. He also held that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation, and reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that no distinction could be drawn between the public and private property of an absolute chief, which A was. That, in the absence of a contrary intention, the resumption by the British Government of a saranjam or inam leaves the occupancy rights of the saranjamdar or inamdar untouched; that a saranjamdar or inamdar may acquire occupancy rights during the continuance of the saranjam or inam. Held also that the fact that the revenue officers placed the defendant's name in the Government books as the

4. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

43. ——— Illegal resumption by Government—Liability to account.—The Government having seized certain chur lands and disposed the proprietor in possession, and having entirely failed to establish any claim for assessment or resumption during the period of attachment following the dispossession of the proprietor,—Held that the Government must be regarded as a wrong-doer for the whole period, and must account to the proprietor for all the collections made by its officers up to the time of the restitution. SUBNOMOYEE v. COLLECTOR OF RUNGPOO . W. R., F. B., 4: Marsh., 13 [1 Hay, 37]

44. ——— Right of mortgagee or transferee of maafi land on resumption—Right to question bona fide character of proceedings.—Where a mortgagee of maafi land was no party to resumption proceedings under Act X of 1859, s. 28, and the land was resumed with the mortgagor's consent,—Held the mortgagee or transferee from him was entitled to question the bona fide character of the resumption proceedings. *TOOLUN v. This application was rejected, on the ground that the Court could not take cognizance of the merits of a case in special appeal, and therefore could not admit a review upon fresh evidence. The special appellant then applied to the lower Appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was admitted, and a review of the judgment was allowed. The executors of the will subsequently brought this suit to have the will construed and the rights of K in the testator's estate ascertained and declared. A decree was made on the 1st October 1887, by which it was declared that K's adoption was a condition precedent to his inheritance, and that, unless he was adopted, he was not entitled to any part of the testator's property. On the 22nd October 1894 K filed a petition of review, stating that at the date of the decree he was a minor and had only recently attained the age of eighteen years. He contended that there was error apparent on the face of the decree inasmuch as it did not provide that he should have an opportunity of showing cause against it in so far as it affected his interest after he attained his majority. Held that the review could not be granted. The Courts in India, after deciding an issue in which an infant, party to suit, is interested have no power to reserve to the infant the right of questioning such decision. At all events a decree is not erroneous for not containing such a provision when the issue in which the infant is interested has been fully gone into and argued.

One of the defendants, who, it appeared, had not been served with notice of the previous application for review, subsequently applied to the Special Judge to review his decree, and that application was granted on the ground that the applicant had not had notice of the former review. On this subsequent review the Special Judge discovered that he had made a mistake with reference to the date of certain documents, and that this mistake had led him to a wrong conclusion upon the merits of the case. He consequently reversed his former order and dismissed the suit, confirming the original decree of the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff then applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction (s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882). Held that in granting a re-hearing the Special Judge had exercised a reasonable discretion with which the High Court could not interfere in its extraordinary jurisdiction. The Civil Procedure Code is not applicable to proceedings before the Special Judge, and the conduct of such proceedings rests within his discretion. *Badaricharya v. Ramchandra Gopal Savant, I. L. 57 ——— Hearing of application by different Judge when allowable Delay—A review was intended to be a consideration of the same subject by the same Judge, as distinguished from an appeal, which is a hearing before another tribunal. A review therefore should be presented with as much expedition as possible with a view to the rehearing before the same Judge. The exceptions to this rule are allowable only ex necessitate, that is from death of the original Judge or some unexpected and unavoidable cause which prevents him from hearing the review. under a decree to abide the result of an appeal to the High Court by the vendee on which it was decreed that the money on the lands belonging to a mother and natural son (the lands were described as nakri (i.e. hereditary of assessment) and the sale deed provided that in case the vendee were at any future time compelled to pay assessment to Government in respect of the nakri lands the vendor should recoup the vendee for any payment so made. In 1872 Government for the first time levied assessment on the nakri lands. In 1876 the plaintiff filed a suit against the talukhdar to recover the amount of assessment paid by them in respect of the nakri lands for the years 1872-76. The High Court passed a decree in plaintiffs' favour in March 1883. Against this decree the talukhdar appealed to the Privy Council. In April 1883 the plaintiff filed a second suit on the same cause of action to recover from the talukhdar the amount of assessment levied on the nakri lands for the years 1877-82. In this suit a decree was passed against the talukhdar solely on the strength of the High Court's decree in the former suit. In execution of this decree the plaintiffs attached the talukhdar's property. Thereupon the talukhdar deposited in

of the money he had deposited in Court. It was suggested that his proper remedy was by an application for review of the decree in the second suit. The talukhdar accordingly presented a petition of review. This petition was rejected by the District Judge on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to grant a review of his predecessor's decision, except on the grounds set forth in s. 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the District Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the application for review. The decision of the Privy Council reversing the decree of the High Court in the first suit, having been passed subsequently to the decree in the second suit, which depended on the reversed decree of the High Court, was "new and important matter" within the meaning of ss. 623 and 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *WAGHELA RAISANGJI SHIVSANGJI v. An application for review of judgment was made on two grounds, viz., (i) that the Bench was wrong in thinking that such issue had not been determined by the Court of first appeal; and (ii) that the Bench, sitting as a Court of second appeal, was not empowered to determine an issue of fact which the Court of first appeal had omitted to determine, but should have referred such issue to that Court for determination under s. 566 of the Civil Procedure Code. which governed the case, but which had not been urged at the previous hearing, it was considered that the applicant was not to blame for his omission to bring the decision to the notice of the Court at the first hearing, and the application for review of judgment was granted. ACHUTA v. MAMMAVU

101. — “Any other sufficient reason”—Civil Procedure Code, s. 623—Power to grant review.—S. 623 gives a more extensive right of review than existed in England, where a review could only be obtained by showing that there was apparent on the record error in law, or that new and relevant matter had been discovered after the judgment which could not possibly have been used when the judgment was given, or that judgment was obtained by fraud. The words “or for any other sufficient reason” mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court or Judge to whom the application for review is made, and they cannot be held to be limited to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence or the occurring of a mistake or error apparent on the record. Whether or not there is in such cases “any other sufficient reason” may depend on a question of law or a question of fact, or a mixed question of law and fact. Reasat Hosein v. Hadjee Abdullah, I. L. R., 2 Calc., 131, referred to. In cases where a stay of execution or an injunction is granted on an ex-parte application, liberty to apply to the Judge to vary or set aside his order must be implied, if not expressed. Fritz v. Hobson, L. R., 14 Ch. Div., 542, referred to. On the 29th July 1886 an application was made by a party against whom the High Court, on second appeal, had passed a decree dated the 18th March 1816, for review of judgment. On the 28th August the applicant made a further application that execution of the decree might be stayed pending the determination of the application for review, and an order was passed ex parte granting this application. Subsequently the opposite party applied under s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code for a review of the ex-parte order on the grounds (i) that the Court had no jurisdiction to make it, and (ii) that the application of the 29th July was beyond time, and therefore there could be no review of judgment, and no order for stay of execution pending such review. Held that the Court had power, under s. 623 of the Code, to review the ex-parte order of the 28th August, and that such order had been made without jurisdiction and ought to be reviewed. Held that, having regard to the circumstances that the order of the 28th August was made without jurisdiction, and upon an ex-parte application, of which the opposite party had no notice, and interfered perhaps indefinitely with his right to obtain the money in Court under the final and unappealable decree in his favour, as to which no application for review had been granted, and that the application for review of judgment was made after the statutory period of ninety days had expired, and contained no explanation of the delay, sufficient reason for reviewing the order of the 28th August had been shown. *AMIR HASAN v. 102. — Civil Procedure Code, s. 623—Omission to serve notice of hearing of appeal on applicant—Practice—Notice to show cause—Right to begin.—An appeal which was referred to the Full Bench for disposal was heard and determined by the Full Bench, and judgment given in favour of the appellant in the absence of the respondent. Subsequently the respondent applied for a review of judgment, and proved that his absence at the hearing before the Full Bench was due to a mistake which had been made in not serving him with notice of the reference. Held by the Full Bench that under the circumstances the applicant's absence at the hearing came within the words “any other sufficient reason” in s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the review should be granted and the appeal re-heard. Upon the hearing of an application for review of judgment, upon which an order has been passed directing the opposite party to show cause why the application should not be granted, counsel for the opposite party should begin. *GHANSHAM SING v. She was then asked if she desired to apply to be declared an insolvent under the insolvency sections of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), but not doing so she was committed to jail. Subsequently, however, she applied to be declared an insolvent, but her application was rejected. She then claimed to be released on the ground of her coverture. The Judge rejected her application as being too late. On reference to the High Court, Held that her application for release was virtually an application for review of the order for her imprisonment, on the ground that it was contrary to law; that her mere omission to take the objection at the time of her arrest could not be regarded as a waiver of her right of exemption from arrest; and having regard to the nature of the right claimed, it was one which the Court could not properly decline to consider on review, however late the application might have been. IN RE THE PETITION OF RADHI

105 ————— Erroneous application of s 575, Civil Procedure Code—Civil Procedure Code, s 623—One of the cases to which a 575 of the Code does not apply is where, a preliminary of the appeal but precedes the hearing or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed, it cannot be said that the Court which, by reason of the Limitation Act, has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, should nevertheless "affirm" the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion

The suit was decreed by the Subordinate Judge but eventually dismissed by the High Court on the ground that the plaintiff by suing for his money decree only had deprived himself of the benefit of his lien as against the third party. 136. ———— Mistake of counsel—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 623—"Sufficient cause."—In a suit between A and B heard to the 29th January 1883, a certain conveyance was filed with the plaint, but up to the hearing this conveyance had been protected from discovery. B's counsel had, however, had a copy thereof delivered to him at the time B's written statement was being drawn, and a copy briefed to him at the hearing. At the hearing, A's counsel stated that the effect of the conveyance was to vest the entirety of a certain property in A; this view was accepted by B's counsel, who did not read the conveyance. The only issue in the case was "who was in possession of the property," and the Court decided this issue on the 5th February in favour of the plaintiff. On the 26th February B brought a suit against A to set aside this conveyance on the ground of fraud. And in certain proceedings in this case taken on the 31st March, B's counsel discovered, as he alleged for the first time that under the conveyance a moiety of a seven twenty fourth share remained in B. On that day instructions were given to B's counsel to draw up a petition of review of the judgment of the 5th February. This petition, owing to the Easter vacation was not, and could not have been, presented till the 9th April. Held that the words "sufficient reason" in s 623 of the Code should receive a liberal construction and should be construed so as to do substantial justice to the parties, that as in this case it appeared to the Court that the construction placed upon the conveyance by B's counsel was the correct one "sufficient reason" had been shown for making the application. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF SOLOMON GOPAL CHUNDER LAHIRI v SOLOMON

Held, on the appeal, per GARTH C J.—Although it is difficult and perhaps undesirable, to attempt to define precisely the meaning of the words "any other sufficient reason" in s 623 of the Civil Procedure Code yet from the earlier part of the clause it is clear that a point which might have been, but which was not, discovered at the trial by the exercise of due diligence, was not intended by the section to afford any sufficient reason for review. Per WILSON J.—Seem—If at a trial all parties, counsel on both sides, and the Judge are under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document, or even if the Judge alone is misled on such a point and in consequence a wrong decree is made, the mistake ought to be corrected on review. GOPAL CHANDRA LAHIRI v SOLOMON able cause—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 377—The plaintiff in a suit applied more than two years after the proper time for a review of judgment in such suit, filing with his application a copy of a decision by the High Court which had been passed subsequently to the date of such judgment, in support of a contention contained in his application which should have been, but was not urged at the hearing of his suit. Such contention and the other arguments and statements contained in his application might have been adduced within the time allowed by law for an application for a review of judgment. Held that as such contention might have been urged at the first hearing of the case, there was no "just and reasonable cause" for preferring the application after time, and the Court of first instance was therefore not warranted in granting the application and reviewing its judgment. MADHO DAS v RUDMAN SEWAK SINGH

One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated on the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it, for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. On application for review, it was urged that the Court ought to have listened to this ground, but the Court adhered to its former decision. In each case the Court to which the application is made must consider and decide whether a review is necessary to correct any evident error or omission, or is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice. *IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF CHINTAMANI PAL. 9. APPEALS AND PROCEDURE IN APPEALS —concluded.

160. — — Objection taken on appeal—Objection as to improper grant of review—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 376.—Although the order itself for granting a review of judgment is final, yet, on appeal against the decision passed in review, objection may be taken that the review was improperly granted. ABDUL RAHIM v. RACHA RAI [I. L. R., 1 All., 363]

161. — — Objection that evidence was within knowledge of applicant.—Where, owing to the conduct of the opposite party, who, though served with notice, made no objection, an applicant for review had no opportunity of showing that a new piece of evidence which he adduced was not within his knowledge and could not be adduced by him when the decree was passed, such opposite party cannot afterwards be allowed to object on the ground of the Full Bench ruling in Bhyrub Chunder Surmah Chowdhry v. Madhubram Surmah, 11 B. L. R., 423 : 20 W. R., 84. RAM JOY GOPTO v. JUGODES-SUREE 22 W. R., 399

162. — — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 378—Appeal against review not justified by evidence.—The Full Bench ruling, Bhyrub Chunder Surmah Chowdhry v. Madhubram Surmah, 11 B. L. R., 423 : 20 W. R., 84, that a special appeal would lie to determine whether in an order granting a review there had been any irregularity, and that the word "final" in the Civil Procedure Code, s. 378, would not prevent the Appellate Court from considering afterwards the legality of the order, was held to apply to cases in which a regular appeal is preferred on the ground that the admission of the review was not justified by the evidence. JOY KISHEN MOOKERJEE v. PARBUTTY CHURN GHOSAL [22 W. R., 183]

163. — — Fresh evidence—Error in granting review.—The Munsif dismissed a suit. Afterwards he issued a rule calling upon the defendant to show cause why a review of judgment should not be granted. The defendant showed cause, but his objections were overruled; the review was granted, both plaintiff and defendant adduced new evidence, and a decree was given for the plaintiff. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed this decision on the ground relied upon by the defendant in showing cause in the lower Court, namely, that the defendant had not established that with due diligence he could not have brought forward in the original trial the evidence upon which his application for review was based. Held on special appeal that the fact of the defendant having adduced fresh evidence in the Court below did not debar him from objecting before the Subordinate Judge that the review was wrongly granted, because the order admitting it was final. *PRANNATH BHADOORY v. 167. — — Review of portion of case—Power to re-hear case on another point.—Where a Judge, who had ordered a certificate of guardianship to be granted under Act XL of 1858, granted a review of his order on one point,—Held that he had no power to re-open another question which he had already decided finally, and on which no application for review was made. BYJ-NATH SAHOY v. WUZEER NARAIN . 24 W. R., 427

168. — — Power to entertain another objection without remand.—In a suit to recover possession of certain land, which, though described in the plaint as partly bastoo and partly agricultural land, was treated by both parties as agricultural only, it was found by the Court of first instance that the defendants had acquired a right of occupancy. This finding having been confirmed by the lower Appellate Court, an application was made for a review, and on review that Court reversed its former decree on the ground that no right of occupancy could be acquired. Held that on review the lower Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection that the land was not agricultural without remanding the case for the trial of a fresh issue on that point. KHORESH MAHOMED v. MAHOMED TAKEE 10 C. L. R., 106

169. — — Power to reverse order for re-hearing of suit—Re-hearing before another Judge.—Where one Judge decided that the suit was not barred as a res judicata, and directed the suit to be re-tried on the merits, and after another trial it came on appeal to the same Court before another Judge,—Held, whatever power he would have had to review the order of his predecessor had nothing been done on it, he could not reverse the order at that stage, one Court having no power to reverse an order

185. ———— Order rejecting appeal as barred by limitation—Review of such order—Finality of judgments in criminal matters—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), ss. 421 and 430.—A Sessions Judge dismissed an appeal on the ground that it was barred by limitation. On a subsequent application by the accused, the Judge admitted the appeal and at the hearing acquitted him. The High Court sent for the record in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. Held that the order of acquittal was ultra vires under s. 430 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The order dismissing the appeal was final and not open to review. It was argued that s. 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code only applies to orders passed on the merits, and that, as the order rejecting the appeal was not of that class, it was not an order "upon appeal" and was not final under s. 430. Held that s. 421 was not limited to orders passed on the merits, and that the order in question was an order upon appeal and final under s. 430. The Criminal Procedure Code makes no provision for review of judgments in criminal matters by subordinate Appellate Courts. The jurisdiction of revision is vested in the High Court which has ample powers under Ch. XXXII to rectify any inadvertent failure of justice. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BHIMAPPA BIN RAMANNA [I. L. 186. ———— Power of view in criminal cases.—Where a District Magistrate on 12th June 1897 made an order after hearing inquiry as to the possession of some missing property supposed to have been stolen, and afterwards on August 1897 reversed the order as erroneous, per RANADE, J., the District Magistrate had no power to review his own previous order of the 12th 1897, passed on full inquiry and after hearing parties. The power of revision in criminal cases is very strictly confined, and the same considerations which prevent subordinate Courts from altering judgments on review hold good in respect of orders which are of the nature of a judgment. *I. 6 ——— Jurisdiction and superintendence of the High Court—Civil Procedure Code (1882) s 622—Practice—An error of law or procedure in the Small Cause Court confers jurisdiction upon the High Court to exercise the power committed by s 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887). The powers conferred by the section are however purely discretionary and the section does not give a right of appeal in all Small Cause Court cases either on law or on fact. The High Court is to determine in what cases it shall exercise the powers conferred upon it. It is not the practice of the Bombay High Court to interfere under s 25 of the Act when there are no substantial merits in the case of the applicant. It interferes to remedy injustice. It is slow to interfere where substantial justice has been done by the subordinate Court although that Court may technically have erred. The provisions of s 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) do not afford a safe guide for the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction under s 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. The wording of the two sections is wholly different that of s 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act being of the widest description and conferring the most ample discretion on the High Court while it has been held by the Privy

Civil Procedure

*Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 203—Decree not according to law—Substantial failure of justice—Interference under extraordinary jurisdiction.—*The plaintiff, a Hindu widow, sued for Rs 74-4-0, being the balance due on an account. She called six witnesses to prove her claim. The defendant did not appear to defend the suit. The Judge, however, dismissed the suit, the only judgment recorded by him being as follows: "Claim not proved. Claim rejected with costs." The plaintiff thereupon applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction and the above decree was set aside, and a decree passed for the plaintiff with costs. Held that the decree, being founded on a judgment not in accordance with s. 203 of the Civil Procedure Code, was not according to law, and therefore the High Court, under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, had jurisdiction to pass such order in the matter as it thought fit. Per FARRAN, C.J.—In a case where there is nothing to excite suspicion, and where the plaintiff had given such proof of her claim as the law requires, the plaintiff is entitled, and this Court is entitled, to have some indication from the Judge of the point upon which he dismisses the suit, to show that he is not acting from mere caprice or in ignorance of the rules of law which regulate the proof requisite to establish a plaintiff's claim. Per FULTON, J.—The ground on which I would base our decision is that the error under s. 203 brings the case within our jurisdiction, and that the case being thus before us we are entitled, on being convinced that a failure of justice has occurred, to pass an order which will rectify the mistake. *BAI JASODA v. Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act (1888), ss. 135 and 157—

*"Valuation," Meaning of—Re-valuation made by the Municipality within six years from the date of the valuation made after hearing objection, Legality of—Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), s. 622—Stat. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15—Superintendence of High Court.—*The word "valuation" in s. 135 of the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act (Bengal Act II of 1888) means, not "the amount of the valuation" only, but also the process or act of valuation. A valuation was made by the Calcutta Municipality of a holding, the rate-payer objected to the amount, and the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality, on hearing the objection, fixed the valuation at a certain amount.

Within six years from this valuation fixed after objection, a re-valuation was made by the Municipality, and the rate-payer objected to the legality of such valuation on the ground that the Municipality had no power to make a re-valuation within six years from the date of the last valuation. The Vice-Chairman overruled the objection, and the rate-payer appealed under s. 157 of the Act to the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Sealdah, who allowed the appeal. Held that, inasmuch as the objection raised by the rate-payer was an objection to the valuation within the meaning of s. 135 of the Act, the Judge of the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to deal with it. That being so, it was not open to the High Court to interfere either under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, or under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104. *CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. 44 ——— Criminal Proprejudicing prisoner—Madras Police Act, 1859, s 44—A police constable was tried and convicted by the Assistant Agent of Vizagapatnam under s 44 of Act XXIV of 1859, and sentenced to fine and imprisonment. On appeal the Agent reversed the conviction and sentence on the ground that there had been irregularity of procedure on the part of his assistant in not recording evidence for the prosecution and in only taking down the substance of the prisoner's statement, and not the full statement as made. Held that the question was whether there had been such error and irregularity on the part of the Assistant Agent as to prejudice the accused and to occasion a failure of justice, that if not the order reversing the conviction was rendered bad in law by ss 426 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, that the accused did not appear to have been prejudiced consequently the order of the Appellate Court was set aside and a re-hearing directed.

49. ———— Power of High Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), s. 366—Examination of accused—Postponement of trial for summoning a witness—Discretion of Judge.—A Deputy Magistrate committed certain prisoners for trial on a charge of dacoity. Some of the prisoners had confessed before the Deputy Magistrate, but he failed to record the examination of the prisoners, or to attest it as required by s. 205 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Sessions Judge therefore refused to admit the examination of the prisoners by the Deputy Magistrate in evidence, and also refused to postpone the trial for the purpose of summoning the Deputy Magistrate and taking his evidence in the matter. Held that, it being wholly within the discretion of the Judge, under s. 366, to say whether or not he should postpone the trial, or summon any witness to give his evidence, the High Court as a Court of revision would not interfere or order a new trial. QUEEN v. The Local Government, being of opinion that the sentence was inadequate, moved the High Court under s 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) to quash the Magistrate's proceedings and ordered the accused to be committed for trial to the High Court. 94 ————— Ground for interference with verdict—Power of High Court—Verdict will their A prisoner was charged under ss 302 and 304 of the Penal Code and the Judge at the trial added a further charge under s 25. The Judge in his charge to the jury directed them that in the event of their finding the charges under s 302 and 304 unsustainable they might find the prisoner guilty under s 325. The jury unanimously acquitted the prisoner under the charge framed under s 302 and a majority of them acquitted him under the charge framed under s 304, but a majority of them found him guilty under the charge framed under s 325. The Judge disagreed with their finding as regards the charge framed under s 304 and referred the case to the High Court under s 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The High Court refused to interfere with the verdict on ground that the verdict could not be said to be manifestly erroneous the Judge having heard the evidence and having expressed his opinion to the jury that they might find the prisoner guilty under s 325. QUEEN v JACQUIET I L R, 11 Cal, 85

95 ————— Conviction on evidence not amounting to proof—A jury may be satisfied with a minimum of proof and it is beyond the power of the High Court in such cases to interfere with its verdict but when there is nothing which can be believed amount to proof the case should not be put to the jury at all as a verdict of guilty cannot under such circumstances be sustained. Under such circumstances the Court will set a conviction aside. QUEEN v RUTTON DASS [18 W R, Cr, 19]

97 ————— Omission to charge jury properly—Power of High Court to set aside verdict—Omission to sum up properly to the jury is if the prisoner is thereby prejudiced an error in law such as to justify a Court of appeal in setting aside the verdict. REG v FATTECHAND VASTA CHAND 5 Bom, Cr, 85

98 ————— Misdirection—Trial by jury—Power to go into facts of case—Mode of dealing with directions of Judge to jury—In a case tried by jury the High Court has no power to go into the facts of the case in order to see whether or not the conviction was right that standing entirely upon the verdict of the jury. The Court has only to consider the facts in order to see whether the Judge has done his duty in laying the case before the jury for their consideration. The mode of dealing by the High Court with the Judge's summing up to the jury pointed out first as regards the law and then as regards the facts. QUEEN v NIMCHAND MOOKERJEE 20 W R, Cr, 41

99 ————— Error in law—Prejudice to accused—New trial—Improper advice given by the Judge to the jury upon a question of fact or the omission of the Judge to give that advice which a Judge in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion ought to give the jury upon questions of fact amounts to such an error in law in summing up as to require a new trial or revision. cause Certain persons were convicted by a Magistrate of the 1st class of assault on offence punishable under s 352 of Act X of 1877. The case was brought to the knowledge of the High Court by the complainant performing a petition to it together with a copy of the Magistrate's order. This petition was laid before STRAIGHT J who observing that the case was one in which the Magistrate should have taken security from such persons for keeping the peace as provided by s 489 of Act X of 1872 directed the Magistrate to summon such persons to show cause why they should not be required under s 491 of

He then took out execution, attached, sold, and himself purchased the property in question. The objector meantime appealed to the Privy Council, and, having obtained a decree reversing the declaratory decree, took out execution against the opposite party for costs and wasilat. 22. ———— Plaintiff, Amendment of—

Adding a defendant in a suit where leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, was necessary—Alternative liability—Order to add new defendant—Appeal against such order by original defendant.—The plaintiff filed this suit against the defendant F alleging that she had a firm and carried on business at Sihore, in the territory of Bhopal. Before the suit was filed, leave was duly obtained under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. In her written statement, F denied that she was the owner of the Sihore firm, or that she was responsible for any of its dealings with the plaintiffs. She alleged that the Sihore firm had belonged to her son P, who died in Samvat 1943, leaving a daughter named G, a minor, who was still living. The plaintiff then obtained a summons calling on the defendant F to show cause why the plaint and proceedings should not be amended by adding the name of G as a party-defendant. The summons was made absolute, and an order was made to add G as a defendant. The defendant F appealed, contending that the effect of adding a defendant would be to institute a new suit against G without obtaining the necessary leave under the Letters Patent. She relied on Rampurab v. Premsukh Chandamal, I. L. R., 15 Bom., 93. Held, dismissing the appeal, that the defendant F could not appeal against the order making G a party. It might be that G might object to the order either before or at the hearing, but she only could take the objection. The defendant F could not take it for her. The case of Rampurab v. Premsukh Chandamal did not apply. In that case the proposed amendment altered the cause of action. Here it was left unaffected. On the cause of action as set forth in the plaint leave had been given under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent to sue the defendant F, and, so far as she was concerned, there was no objection to the form of the suit. If her allegation was true, G, and not F, was liable. That question would be decided at the trial. FOOLIBAI v. RAMPRATAB SAMRATRAI

23. ———— Appeal by defendants against whom specifically no decree was made, but whose defence to the suit was necessarily disposed of by the decree.—Certain plaintiffs sued as second assignees of a debt to recover the debt, and made defendants to the suit their assignors, the original debtors, and certain persons whom they alleged to have been prior assignees of the debt, but whose assignment, according to them, had become void through non-fulfilment of the conditions upon which it was made. The Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiffs against the original debtors. An appeal by the first assignees was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that, there being no decree against the appellants, their appeal would not lie. On second appeal it was held that the appeal would lie, inasmuch as the decree, though not a decree against the appellants by name, necessarily implied a finding that the assignment to the appellants, upon the basis of which they resisted the plaintiff's claim, had become void. *JAMNA DAS v. 42. ——— Sir land—N. W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 8—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Occupancy tenure.—Where land, originally the sir of a proprietor, has been transferred to a mortgagee, and has in his hands lost its character of sir, and has been leased to a tenant on the usual conditions of a tenancy, which otherwise do not bar the acquisition of a right of occupancy in the land, such a right will be acquired by twelve years' occupancy under s. 8 of the Rent Act. In 1846 B mortgaged a share in a village, together with certain land which was recorded as his sir, and which was so described in the deed of mortgage. After the mortgage it ceased to be recorded as his sir, and was recorded as land held by tenants in the same way as other lands in the estate. In 1857 it was leased to S, and in 1863 to H, and from 1863 to 1882 remained in the possession of the last-mentioned lessee. In 1882 B redeemed the mortgage, and subsequently brought a suit against H to establish that the land was his sir, and for possession of it. Held by the Full Bench that there being nothing in terms of the mortgage-deed to indicate that the land was transferred to the mortgagee to be held as sir and the land having ceased to be recorded as the sir of the proprietor, and not having been leased as the sir of the lessor, it had not retained its character as sir when the defendant's tenancy commenced, so as to prevent him from acquiring a right of occupancy therein under the provisions of s. 8 of the Rent Act. Per MAHMOOD, J., that there is nothing in the law to prevent a zamindar from relinquishing his rights in sir land and converting it into land held by ordinary tenants; that the mortgage-deed of 1846 showed that the sir right in the land in suit had been relinquished by the mortgagor; and that the sir land once relinquished

(c) MODE OF ACQUISITION.

56. ——— Nature of right—Right independent of wish of zamindar or mortgagee—Acquisition under usufructuary mortgage.—The right of occupancy conferred by the Legislature upon cultivators of more than twelve years' standing is a right wholly independent of the wishes either of the zamindar or his mortgagee in possession, and when a cultivator acquires such a right it cannot be taken as in the nature of a grant from either of them. The right of occupancy may thus be acquired during the currency of a usufructuary mortgage and during the period of the mortgagee's possession of the zamindari rights, and the zamindar upon redeeming the mortgage cannot disturb the possession of such occupancy tenants on the ground that, when he mortgaged the zamindari, it was free of such occupancy tenures. Heeroo v. Dhoree, 2 N. W., 129, referred to. HARPAI SINGH v. BAL GOBIND. I. L. R., 7 All., 586

57. ——— Conditions necessary for acquisition—Non-payment of rent—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, ss. 6, 22, and 52.—Two conditions only are necessary for the acquiring of a right of occupancy,—viz., (1) the cultivation or holding of land for a period of twelve years; and (2) that the person holding or cultivating the land should be a raiyat. The essential conditions of s. 6, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, are fulfilled without showing the payment of rent, that only being a condition necessary for the maintaining of the right when created. In a suit brought to evict a tenant who had been in possession of certain land for a longer period than twelve years, when it was shown that rent had not been paid, and notice to quit had been given,—Held that a right of occupancy had been acquired, and that the raiyat had the power to prevent forfeiture under the provisions of s. 52, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. NARAIN ROY v. 58. ——— Holding and cultivating for twelve years—Acquisition previous to Rent Act, 1859.—After the permanent settlement and before Act X of 1859 a right of occupancy was not acquired by a raiyat merely by holding or cultivating land for a period of twelve years. When there is no contract, and the statute of limitation does not apply, the raiyat cannot, by occupying and cultivating, become the proprietor of the soil; neither can he, by occupying with the consent of the zamindar and paying rent for the land to him, become entitled to the proprietorship of the soil, even though he should acquire a right of occupancy by virtue of Act X of 1859. ISHORE GHOSE v. 60. ——— Suits pending at time Act came into force—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 20, 21—Suit for ejectment.—S. 21 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies to suits pending at the time the Act came into force, viz., 1st November 1885, which had not then resulted in a decree. In a suit instituted on 8th October 1885 to eject the defendants after notice to quit it was held that, although the defendant had held the land from which it was sought to eject him for less than twelve years, and therefore would not, if the Bengal Rent Act VII of 1869 had been applicable, have acquired a right of occupancy, yet the effect of ss. 20 and 21 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was to give him a right of occupancy, and therefore he could not be ejected. JOGESSUR DAS v. 61. ——— Holding under purchaser of permanent transferable interest in land—Reservation of rent—Relinquishment.—Any raiyat, holding under any purchaser of a permanent transferable interest in land can acquire a right of occupancy if he fulfil the other conditions required by the law; and the mere fact that a certain rent is reserved year by year does not interfere with his right unless something in his pottah is fatal to it. In reference to this, it was held that a lessee of land continuously in cultivating possession for a period of twelve years, under several written leases or pottahs which were for specified terms of years, but in which there was no express stipulation for the landlord's re-entry on their expiration, had a right of occupancy. The mere existence of a term in a lease was not an "express stipulation" to the contrary, within the meaning of s. 7, so as to exclude the right of occupancy. The Questions arose as to the character of the usage required to be proved in such cases and the nature of the evidence required to prove the usage. In second appeal the High Court, (1) upon a review of the previous law on the subject, held that, however the law may have been previously declared, as it is now expressed in the Bengal Tenancy Act, s. 183, III. 1, a transfer in accordance with usage is valid even without the consent of the landlord. (2) After applying the principles laid down by the Privy Council as regards evidence of mercantile usage in the case of Juggomohun Ghose v. Manick Chand, 7 Moore's I. A., 263,—Held that it would be necessary in these cases either to prove the existence of the usage on the landlord's estate or that it is so prevalent in the neighbourhood that it can reasonably be presumed to exist on that estate. The finding of the lower Appellate Court on the existence of the usage being founded on irrelevant matters, the case was remanded for re-trial. PALAKDHARI RAI v. MANNERS . I. L. Abandonment—Status of purchaser as regards zamindar.—A tenant having a right of occupancy cannot create an intermediate tenure between himself and the zamindar. If a raiyat not having a transferable tenure quits possession, makes over his interests, and gives over the land to a third person, he may be treated as having abandoned all rights formerly possessed by him in the land. When a purchaser takes possession of a non-transferable tenure, and interposes himself between the zamindar and the raiyats on the land, he thereby commits a wrong, and the zamindar may sue to declare that no interest is vested in such purchaser or to restrain him from interfering with the collection of rent. HUREEHUR MOOKERJEE v. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 93 (b)—Mortgage by ex-proprietary tenant—Act “inconsistent with the purpose for which land was let”—Act XII of 1881, ss. 9, 56.—The policy of the framers of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) was not to protect the interest of the purchaser of proprietary rights, but that of the person whose proprietary rights have been sold, and who has become an ex-proprietary tenant. It would be straining the law, as laid down in s. 93 (b) of the Act, to hold that a mortgage of his holding granted by an ex-proprietary tenant was an act “inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let” within the meaning of that provision. The words quoted have reference to something which may alter the character of the land, or cause injury to the land and thus to the landholder. In the case of a mortgage by an ex-proprietary tenant, the landholder would not be damaged by being unable, in the event of his rent being in arrear, to distrain the crops grown upon the land by the so-called mortgagee, s. 56 of the Rent Act giving the landholder a right to distrain any crops growing upon the land, by whomsoever grown, in respect of which the arrear arises. *Debi Prasad v. In puttidari tenures, in which the lands are divided and held in severalty, each proprietor managing his own lands, there may be lands which come within the classification of sir given in the Rent Act, but they would not seem to be on a different footing from any other land held in severalty by a proprietor. Per BRODHURST, J.—So long as a person is the sole proprietor of a mehal, he is not restrained by any law from effecting a sale of his proprietary rights in his sir land, even though he retains possession of the whole of the other lands of the mehal. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the proprietary rights of a joint co-sharer in his sir land form an essential part of his rights in the mehal; that such proprietary rights in the sir land may be sold, but that the purchaser under such a sale could not obtain any such possession as would operate indefeasance of the exproprietary right in such sir land conferred by

in cross examination by accused* The fact that the accused has during the cross examination of the witnesses for the prosecution used certain documents and that such documents have been put in as evidence on his behalf does not entitle the prosecutor to the right of reply, if when asked upon the close of the case for the prosecution whether he

11. ————— Witnesses not called for defence—Reply by prosecutor—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 239, 292.—At the close of the evidence for the prosecution, the attorney for the defence, in answer to the Judge, stated that he meant to call witnesses. The Court then adjourned, and on the following day the attorney stated that, on re-consideration, he did not intend to call witnesses. The Judge allowed the prosecutor to reply. Held that, though the strict interpretation of ss. 289 and 292 of the Criminal Procedure Code would warrant this course, it was never meant by the Legislature that the prosecutor should have a reply when no witnesses are called for the defence, the object of the law being evidently to let each side have an opportunity of commenting on the evidence of the other, and not to give an additional advantage to the prosecutor in such a case as the present. HURRY CHURN CHUCKERBUTTY v. EMPRESS

12. ————— Documents put in evidence on behalf of accused during cross-examination of witnesses for prosecution—No witnesses called for defence—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 292—Practice.—The fact that during the cross-examination of witnesses for the prosecution documents are put in evidence on behalf of the accused does not give the prosecution the right of reply if no witnesses are called for the defence. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KRISHNAJI BABURAV BULELL I. L. R., 14 Bom., 436

13. ————— Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 289, 292—Adducing evidence for the defence—Documents produced for cross-examination of Crown witness—Practice.—In a trial before a High Court or a Court of Session, evidence for the defence cannot be adduced until the close of the case for the prosecution; but counsel for the defence may, while a witness for the Crown is under cross-examination, put documents to him, and if in so doing counsel reads or causes to be read to the Court such documents, he thereby impliedly undertakes to put those documents in as evidence at the proper time. When such documents as aforesaid are filed in Court as evidence, or any other documentary evidence is put in by the defence, the defence has "adduced evidence" within the meaning of ss. 289 et seq. of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so as to give the prosecution a right of reply, though no witnesses may be called for the defence. In a trial at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court during the cross-examination of one of the witnesses for the Crown, counsel for the defence put certain documents to the witness, and these were read to the Court and jury and marked as exhibits as evidence for the defence, and were filed with the record in the same way as the evidence for the prosecution had been marked and filed. During the cross-examination of the next witness a similar course was pursued, and, after the cross-examination had continued for some time, counsel for the defence applied to the Court for a ruling as to whether the fact of documents having been used during cross-examination in the manner above stated would, under s. 292 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, entitle the Crown to a reply, in the event of the accused not calling witnesses. Held that although, as a matter of order, such a question would be better raised either when the first document intended to be used in this way was put to a witness or when the accused was asked if he meant to adduce evidence, yet there was nothing in the Code of Criminal Procedure to prevent the Court from deciding the question at any other stage, and that, under the special circumstances of the case, it might be considered then. Held also that the use of the documents in the manner above stated gave the prosecution a right of reply. Queen-Empress v. Grees Chunder Banerjee, I. L. R., 10 Calc., 1024; Empress of India v. Kaliprosunno Doss, I. L. R., 14 Calc., 245; Queen-Empress v. Solomon, I. L. R., 17 Calc., 930; and *Queen-Empress v. 14. ————— Several persons tried jointly—Right of reply where one of several accused calls witnesses and the others do not—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), ss. 289, 290, and 292.—Where one of several accused persons tried jointly calls witnesses at the trial, but the other accused call no witnesses, they must, under s. 290 of the Criminal Procedure Code, all follow one another in their defence, and the prosecution has, under s. 292, the right of reply on the whole case. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. When the plaintiff in a suit, seeking solely the payment into Court of a fund for the relief of poor Armenian orphans, had no interest except as a member of the Armenian community,—Held that he had no such title to part of the fund as would support the suit. Held also that the consent of the defendants, the trustees of the fund, to the decree sought by the plaintiff would not justify the Court in making it. 9. ——— Interest as Collector of revenue of Government—Suit for accretion.—A chur, B, formed by gradual accretion to an estate (mouzah B), was resumed by Government, who successively made temporary settlements for it with the patnidar of mouzah B, and finally with the zamindar. While the second settlement was in force, another chur formed, and a dispute arose between the patnidar of B and the patnidar of an adjoining mouzah, D, as to its ownership. Three suits were brought by the latter, claiming the second chur as an accretion to his estate, in all which suits he was successful, and in one of which Government was a party. Government then sued to set aside the decrees in the two suits in which it was not a party, and for possession of the land in dispute, and it was found in that suit that the land was continuous to chur B, and not to mouzah D. Held that Government, having a right to revenue, but not to actual possession, could have no locus standi as plaintiff in such a suit. *MOOKTAKESHEE DEBEA v. After the confiscation, Government allowed the amount to the lambardar by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held that by such arrangement the Government did in effect convey to him (lambardar) as trustee on behalf of Government such an interest in the estate as would enable him to sue, and enforce such claim. ZAHOO HOSKIN & ASSUR AM 2 Agra, Pt II, 178

She had, in former years adopted a son to her deceased husband. The defendant objected throughout that his son (deceased in 1884) having been of full age in 1881 when this suit was brought the widow was not entitled to sue at that time, he having that right. Held that the Courts below had rightly disallowed this objection. She had, in former years adopted a son to her deceased husband. The defendant objected throughout that this son (deceased in 1834) having been of full age in 1831 when this suit was brought the widow was not entitled to sue at that time he having that right. Held that the Courts below had rightly disallowed this objection. While the second settlement was in force, another chur formed, and a dispute arose between the patnidar of B and the patnidar of an adjoining mouzah, D, as to its ownership. Three suits were brought by the latter, claiming the second chur as an accretion to his estate, in all which suits he was successful, and in one of which Government was a party. Government then sued to set aside the decrees in the two suits in which it was not a party, and for possession of the land in dispute, and it was found in that suit that the land was continuous to chur B, and not to mouzah D. Held that Government, having a right to revenue, but not to actual possession, could have no locus standi as plaintiff in such a suit. *MOOKTAKESHEE DEBEA v. After the maafi was resumed and a Government jumma assessed upon it the nuzzeraana continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafi was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation, Government allowed the amount to the lambardar by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held that by such arrangement the Government did in effect convey to him (lambardar) as trustee on behalf of Government such an interest in the estate as would enable him to sue, and enforce such claim. ZAHOR HOSSEIN v. suit in which he claimed to set aside as fraudulent a mortgage on which the defendant had obtained a decree against the vendees, and the decree itself. 21. ——— Re-admission to caste —Contract to procure admission to caste—Contract made by head of a caste in representative capacity not enforceable by him after he has ceased to hold office.—The defendant was the eldest of three brothers whose mother on her marriage had been put out of the Lovana caste for having married a man belonging to a different caste. The defendant was anxious that he and his brothers should be re-admitted to the caste; and in 1864 he entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, who was at that time one of the setias of the caste, whereby the latter agreed to procure the admission of the plaintiff and his brothers and get them married to girls belonging to the caste. In consideration of these services, the defendant was to pay the plaintiff the sum of Rs. 5,000, which sum was to become due on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother to a girl of the caste, and to be expended in purchasing caste utensils, which were to be kept for the use of the caste. The plaintiff alleged that part of this money had been already paid to him, and that on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother in 1880 he had demanded payment of the balance (viz., Rs. 149), which the defendant had not paid. He now sued to recover this balance. One of the witnesses at the hearing was the setia of the caste who had succeeded the plaintiff in that position. He stated that he and other leaders of the caste to whom he had spoken, disapproved of this suit. Held that the suit was not maintainable. The agreement was made with the plaintiff as one of the heads of the caste. It was made with him in his representative, not in his personal, capacity, and the benefit of the agreement accrued, not to him, but to the caste. It was therefore for the caste to say whether they wished to enforce the agreement. The plaintiff, however, had lost his position as one of the heads of the caste in 1869, and was no longer the spokesman or the representative of the caste. His successor had told the Court that the leaders of the caste disapproved, as he did himself, of this suit. Under these circumstances, the suit was not maintainable. PITAMBER RATANSI v. On its being contended that defendant was under no obligation to provide for the expenses of his brother's daughter's marriage, Held that defendant was liable, the marriage having been properly performed. Held further that the suit was maintainable, though it had been brought by the mother of the bride, and not by the bride herself. Semble—That the mother was, within the meaning of s. 69 of the Indian Contract Act, interested in making the payment which had given rise to the action. It was not necessary for her to prove that she had been compelled to make it or that she had made it at the defendant's request. VAIKUNTAM AMMANGAR v. KALLAPIRAN AYYANGAR

The plaintiff and the first defendant appeared before a punchayet composed of members of their caste, and the first defendant having refused to live any longer with the plaintiff, the punchayet awarded the compensation claimed, and the defendants promised to deliver the grain. The award was brought about, not under that Regulation, but owing to an application of the plaintiff for a partition of the share under Regulation VII of 1822, which application was rejected in reference to the award declaring the plaintiff's vendors were not in possession at the time of the sale. It was not necessary that the award should be set aside prior to an adjudication on the claim, as it determined no question of title. If the dispossession of the vendors did not take place at a period more remote than twelve years before the commencement of the suit, the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for possession on establishment of their right, even if there was no sufficient reason to set aside the award. GUNGA BAKSH v. 68. ———— Erection of buildings by owners of adjoining sites under agreements with Government—Government surveyor made arbiter in case of dispute—Party wall, Liability of owners for costs of—Suit before obtaining Government surveyor's certificate.—Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following: "(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878 on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of ₹20 515 4 11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. Both the defendants pleaded limitation and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the under which the said wall was erected, and that his suit was not barred but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor, in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost, and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order may be seen that the plaintiff was not entitled to the rear portion of the said wall, and stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc., of the wall

The case came on again before SCOTT, J. who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendant appealed. Held that, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set off on the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue, and upon which the Court might give judgment. COOPER, J. He reserved the paramount authority over, and management of, the said lands to his family, of which the plaintiff was the representative. The lands were sold illegally, as alleged by the plaintiff, to the defendant at an auction in execution of a decree obtained against one N, who with his predecessors had, as was alleged, been employed to worship at the shrine. The plaintiff accordingly sought to have the sale set aside, and to be put into possession of the lands. Held that the object of the suit being merely to recover the trust property from outsiders, did not fall within s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and it could be proceeded with without making the Advocate General a party to it. A large portion of the funds required for building the temple was advanced by one N N, at that time the leading man in the caste, the rest was obtained from the caste by subscription. The firm of N & A acted as the bankers to the caste and to the temple, received all the gifts and offerings made by the worshippers and for many years administered all the affairs of the temple. The sums advanced by N & A were gradually but entirely repaid to him out of the gifts and offerings. There were three separate funds of which separate accounts were kept in the books—viz, (1) the d rasi fund which was devoted to the temple purposes such as maintenance of priests repairs, etc, and gifts to poorer temples, (2) the sadaran fund, which was more extended in its objects but still limited to religious and charitable purposes, such as payments to poor devotees irrespective of their caste etc, and (3) the mahajan fund, which was devoted to caste purposes such as purchase of caste utensils etc. All three funds were collected at the temple. meanwhile had invested the funds of the temple in eight lots of immoveable property. In 1867 the caste determined to appoint trustees of the temple property, and in September 1867 a trust-deed was executed whereby H, K, and G (defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3), together with three others who were dead at the time of this suit,—viz., J R, T W, and M T—were appointed trustees of all the immoveable property belonging to the temple. The deed set forth the objects to which the income of the property should be applied, and provided that the surplus should be invested in Government securities, in corporation shares or in landed property, but in no other shares of any description whatsoever. It also authorized the trustees to invest surplus moneys in the firm of V N & Co. It was admitted that, subsequently to June 1869, the trustees managed the temple, and not only the immoveable property, but all the funds. A debt of Rs. 2,40,000 was due from the firm of V N & Co. to the temple and caste when the trustees took over the management. In 1870 the firm of V N & Co. became insolvent, and in their schedule the trustees were entered as creditors in respect of darasa account, Rs. 1,57,649; on mahajan account Rs. 68,017; on sadaran account, Rs. 22,597. It was admitted that the trustees knew of this entry in the said schedule. They, however, received no dividend, although other creditors, including K (defendant No. 2), were paid two annas in the rupee. This sum of Rs. 2,40,000 due to the temple was wholly lost. In April 1867, Rs. 15,000 of the temple funds were invested - it did not appear by whom—in the name of G (defendant No. 3), and in August 1868 a sum of Rs. 15,000 was advanced to one J P. In 1869 a sum of Rs. 10,000 was advanced by the trustees to N K & Co., which was never repaid, nor was any interest received upon it. It was lost on the failure of that firm in 1879. The principal partner of that firm (N K) was the only son of K (defendant No. 2), who also had an interest in it. In 1877-78 various loans were made by the trustees to three mills in which one or more of the trustees was interested. Of Rs. 55,000 lent to the mills and to N K & Co., Rs. 42,000 were lost. Half a lakh of outstanding gifts to the temple remained uncollected owing to the negligence of the trustees. Two suits brought by another caste against the trustees were defended out of the temple funds. All the defendants (trustees), with the exception of K, were in needy circumstances. In 1880 a hundred members of the caste protested against the management of caste and temple affairs by the defendants. The plaintiffs, six in number, took part in the protest, and filed the present suit in 1881. Thereupon there was a caste agitation in favour of the defendants, who were all shettias of the caste. A meeting of the caste was held, and a series of resolutions, supporting the defendant's management and approving of their conduct, was passed, and a document to that effect was signed by 1,468 persons—the whole caste in Bombay numbering only 1,500. The plaintiffs sought to make the defendants liable in respect of the moneys lost to the caste and temple funds, and prayed for the appointment of new trustees and for the settlement of a scheme. The defendants denied the charges of negligence, and pleaded that the suit was not properly constituted, not having been brought under s. 30 or 539 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877, and that it was in contravention of Regulation II of 1827, Ch. II, s. 21. They relied upon the fact that the caste had approved of their conduct and had allowed them to defend this suit at the expense of the caste. They contended that under these circumstances the plaintiffs were not entitled to maintain the suit, and that the Court would not interfere with or control the decision of the majority of the caste in matters relating to the internal management of its affairs. Held that s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) did not apply. If the plaintiffs had any right of action, it was a complete right of action vested in each of them, and not a mere joint right shared with others and incomplete unless they united themselves with others. They sued as subscribers to the temple and devotees of the idol, and as such each had a right to complain of maladministration. They were entitled to sue in their own right and in their own name without permission of the Court or notice to other parties interested. Held also (following Thanga Karuppa v. Arumuga Nadan, I. L. R., 5 Mad., 383) that s. 539 of Act X of 1877 did not apply. The three funds administered by the defendants were different in character. The mahajan fund was a purely secular fund; the other two funds were religious and charitable funds. Even if the case came under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539 would not apply, that section being permissive or directory, and not mandatory. Any person interested in the proper observance of a religious endowment may sue in his own name to have the trust properly administered. The section does not prohibit a private suit, and does not make the sanction of the Advocate General a condition precedent. The gifts to the temple comprised in the darasa and sadaran funds were irrevocably dedicated to a public charity, and therefore the approval by the caste of the conduct of the trustees was no bar to the suit. They were also dedicated to the idol, who was a public, not a mere private household, divinity. The ideal personality of such an idol is well recognized, and in case of misappropriation of the property he is entitled to the protection of the public authorities, on the ground that it has been devoted to public religious purposes, and must not be wasted even by the donors. The management of the temple belonged to the Dossa Oswal Bania caste, and not to the whole Jain community. Although the donations were irrevocably dedicated to public purposes, the donors had never lost the right, which was attached to the caste from the beginning, of managing the temple which they had founded, and their management could only be interfered with as a public charitable trust on proof of maladministration. On the evidence,—Held that the defendants were not liable for losses prior to 1867. It was not clearly proved that they were managers of the temple funds before that date. Held also that the defendants were liable for the losses incurred subsequently to 1867. They assumed the management on the execution of the trust-deed in that year, and ought to have taken steps to recover the moneys which had been improperly advanced on loan or otherwise negligently invested "wilful neglect, which had been used to the first d that the remaining defendants had ever acted as trustees. The negligence of the trustees in not taking steps to recover the Rs 240,000 due from the firm of P A & Co was a clear breach of trust. The evidence showed that, although the whole sum could not have been recovered at any time during the trusteeship of the defendants, yet that some portion of the money might have been obtained if due diligence had been used, and that other creditors of the firm had actually been paid 2 annas in the rupee. The first three defendants were therefore liable to refund 2 annas in the rupee of such portion of the Rs 240,000 as belonged to the dargah and Sadran. As to the mahajan fund, it belonged to the

wayfarers and travellers, to pass and shrine in the evening and to meeting the expenses of repeating prayers on the occasion of Id and Bakrid, and that the said profits were never spent for personal purposes. The plaintiff based her right to sue upon the fact that her deceased husband had been mutwalli and she prayed that the property in suit might be declared wakf, and that certain alienations made by her step son since her husband's death might be set aside. Held that the trust to which the suit related was one partly for charitable and partly for religious purposes. As far as it related to the former, it was governed by s 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, and if viewed in the light of the latter, by Act XX of 186, and that the suit, not being properly framed in compliance with the provisions of either of these enactments was not maintainable. The plaintiff asked that the property purchased might be appointed by the Court, the acts of the wakf might be defrayed from the profits of the property belonging to the endowment. Held that, so far as regarded that portion of the prayer which fell within the provisions of s 539 of the Code, the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue, as they were not persons having a direct interest in the trust within the meaning of the section and that the suit should have been instituted under s 14 of Act XX of 1863 after sanction obtained under s 18. Held also that, though the plaintiffs might possibly have obtained leave to sue under s 30 of the Code on behalf of themselves and the other persons attending the mosque they, not having obtained such leave were not entitled to institute the suit for the purpose of obtaining the relief asked for in the other prayers of the plaint. A trust for a Hindu idol and temple is to be regarded in India as one created "for public charitable purposes" within the meaning of s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). 2. The Hindu law recognizes not only corporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation apart from its individual members, but also the judicial persons or subjects called foundations. A Hindu who wishes to establish a religious or charitable institution may, according to his law, express his purpose and endow it, and the ruler will give effect to the bounty, or at least protect it. A trust is not required for this purpose as it is by English law. 3. Those who take charge of gifts made to a religious or charitable institution—whether such gifts consist of cash, jewels, or land—incur thereby a responsibility for their due application to the purposes of the institution. They are answerable as trustees would be, even though they have not consciously accepted a trust, and a remedy may be sought against them for maladministration by suit open to any one interested as under the Roman system in a like case by means of a popularis actio. The plaintiffs as relators filed this suit under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) against the defendants as trustees of the temple of Shri Ranehhod Raiji at Dakor. The plaintiffs were five in number. The first plaintiff was the hereditary manager of the temple and its appendant villages. The other plaintiffs were priests residing at Dakor, who ordinarily took charge of pilgrims visiting the shrine, and performed worship of the idol on their behalf. The defendants were the shevaks or ministers of the idol—about one hundred and fifty in number—who took office by hereditary descent. They remained in constant attendance on the idol, performed the daily services at the temple, collected all the offerings made at the shrine, and kept them in a bhandar or store-room. The god Shri Ranehhod Raiji was held in great veneration by the followers of the Vaishnava religion throughout Western India. Every full moon thousands of pilgrims resorted to the shrine, and made offerings to the deity, of cash, ornaments, clothes, and other articles amounting in value to about a lakh of rupees in the course of a year. Besides these offerings, the temple enjoyed a grant, in perpetuity, of the revenues of several inam villages, of which Dakor and Kangri yielded the largest income. The plaintiffs sued as persons interested in the maintenance of this public religious and charitable institution, and prayed that the Court would make the defendants, as recipients of the offerings at the idol's shrine, accountable as trustees, for the right disposal of the property thus acquired. The plaintiffs alleged that the income of the temple had largely increased, and had been wrongly appropriated by the defendants to their personal purposes. They therefore prayed for an account, for the appointment of a receiver, for the removal of the shevaks from their office, and for the settlement of a scheme of future management. The defendants answered (inter alia) that the plaintiffs had not such a direct interest in the institution as to entitle them to sue under s. 539 of Act X of 1877; that they themselves were owners of the idol and of the idol's property, and that as such they were not liable to render an account of the offerings they had collected at the shrine. They also contended that they were not liable to be removed from their offices, which they and their ancestors had held for several centuries past. The District Judge dismissed the suit, on the preliminary ground that, except the first plaintiff, who was a hereditary manager of the temple, the other plaintiffs had not such a direct interest in the charity as to entitle them to sue under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). Held, reversing the decision of the District Judge, that plaintiffs Nos. 2–5, as priests residing at Dakor and taking part in the worship of the idol, were directly interested in its due performance and its maintenance. Though they might not be trustees, they were clearly among those who in practice benefited by the execution of the trust. They had thus an undeniable locus standi as relators, and the suit could proceed at their

by appointing a receiver or otherwise in his discretion, for guarding the property of the temple, (2) to take an account of the property and of the receipts and disbursements of the temple (3) to make the requisite orders for recovering property appropriated by the shevaks and (4) to draw up a scheme for the future management of the temple and its funds regard being had to the established practice of the institution and to the position of the shevaks and of other persons connected with it. 92 ——— Suit by worshipper of Hindu temple relating to trust—Trust for public religious purposes—Private trust—Civil Procedure Code ss 30 539—Act XX of 1863—Hindu Law—The defendants made a gift of land to a Hindu temple for the purpose of defraying the expenses appertaining to the idol. The temple was built and the gift made in 1877. The defendants obtained from the revenue authorities mutation of names in the idol's favour and an acknowledgment of the person whom they nominated as agent or manager. The plaintiff, alleging that they had subsequently repossessed themselves of the land and the profits accruing therefrom, and that he was interested as a Hindu in worshipping at the temple, and professing to sue on behalf of the entire body of the worshippers thereat, sued for declaration that the

Under that section, as originally enacted, the words were "having a direct interest in the trust," and the word "direct" has been taken out by Act VII of 1888. The inference is that the Legislature intended to allow persons having the same sort of interest that is sufficient under s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 to maintain a suit under s. 539. The Collector, in giving his consent to the institution of a suit under s. 539, has to exercise his judgment in the matter, and see not only whether the persons suing are persons having an interest in the trust, but also whether the trust is a public trust of the kind contemplated by the section and whether there are prima facie grounds for thinking that there has been a breach of trust. But where the form of the permission showed that he had omitted to exercise his judgment in the matter of the interest of the plaintiffs in the trust, such omission was held to be a mere irregularity and within the scope of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. *SAJEDUR RAJA CHOWDHURI v. On his death, the widow and mother executed a document, relating to the property, to give effect to the wishes of the deceased for the benefit of Brahmans; and three years later the widow took in adoption a boy, whose father acquiesced in the deceased man's dispositions. The plaintiffs also prayed for the appointment of new trustees, and for the settlement of a new scheme of management under the direction of the Court. The plaintiffs and defendant were the descendants of Shri Morya Gosavi, the original founder of the savasthan. Shri Morya Gosavi was a devotee of the deity Shri Mangal Murti. He dedicated a temple to the deity at the village of Chinchvad, and established an annachhatra and sadavart for feeding the poor and the destitute. He buried himself alive, and over his tomb a temple was built to perpetuate his memory. The Raja of Satara conferred on his descendants from time to time grants of lands, villages, and varshasans for the maintenance of the shrine and of the charities connected with it. Votaries of the god Shri Mangal Murti visited the shrine in large numbers, and took part in the annual festivals and celebrations held in honour of the founder of the savasthan. In course of time the Chinchvad savasthan became one of the most popular sacerdotal institutions of the Deccan. In 1744 the Peshwa made a tahananama (or award) by which he set apart one half of the savasthan property exclusively for religious and charitable purposes, and distributed the other half among the descendants of the founder, to provide for their temporal wants. Subsequently to the date of this award, fresh grants were made to the manager of the savasthan by the ruling authorities of the day. In 1774 and 1776 A.D. the new acquisitions were divided on the principle adopted in the Peshwa's award,—one-half being reserved exclusively for the savasthan, the other half distributed among the heirs of the grantee. In 1874 the defendant 1 succeeded to the office of manager and trustee of the savasthan. Within a few years after entering upon his office, the defendant 1, in conjunction with his son defendant 2, incurred heavy debts, mortgaged several villages belonging to the savasthan, and dealt with the savasthan income as if it was his own absolute property. The plaintiffs filed the present suit with the consent of the Advocate General in 1883. The defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the property in suit was not burdened with a public religious or charitable trust; that they were not trustees, but owners, of the savasthan; and that the plaintiffs had not such direct interest in the property as to entitle them to sue under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Judge, who tried the case, found that the savasthan was a public religious and charitable institution; that the defendants were trustees in charge of the savasthan property, and that they were guilty of such gross misconduct as to make them unfit to act as trustees in future. He therefore passed a decree, directing the defendants to be removed from their office as trustees, appointed a new trustee in their place, and framed a scheme for the future management of the savasthan. Held on the evidence that the management of the Chinchvad savasthan—consisting of the sacred shrines at the villages of Chinchvad, Moregav, Theur, and Sidhateks with their endowments—constituted a public religious and charitable trust within the contemplation of s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held also that the plaintiffs, being worshippers and devotees of the god Shri Mangal Murti and being also descendants of the original founder of the endowment, had a direct interest in the trust, entitling them to sue under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held further that the defendants' assertion of their right to treat the trust property as their private estate and to apply the trust funds to their private purposes was sufficient to justify their removal from the trust. Held further, upon the construction of the Peshwa's tahananama (or award), that it was the intention of the governing power in 1744 A.D. that thenceforth the Chinchvad savasthan—consisting of the shrines at Chinchvad, Moregav, Theur, and Sidhatek—should constitute a public devasthan; and that in setting apart a moiety of the property for the savasthan, the object was to provide a fund appointed in his place. The plaintiffs alleged that they and the 42 others named in the schedule were in the habit of worshipping the idol or of contributing to the worship and expenses of it but it was clearly established by the evidence that any Hindu who chose was at liberty to give puja or render service and worship and that others than the plaintiffs and the 42 persons named in fact did so and that the plaintiffs and the persons named were therefore not the only persons interested in the suit. The suit was one to which the provisions of s 539

114. — Public religious and charitable trust—Civil Procedure Code (Act XII of 1882), s. 539—Hindu temple, with a dhar-mashala and sadavart attached to it—Liability of constructive trustee—Suit to remove trustee—Limitation.—A Hindu built a temple in honour of the deity Shri Paudurang, to which were attached a dhar-mashala and a sadavart for feeding travellers and giving alms to the poor. For the maintenance of the temple and the charities connected with it, he dedicated certain property by a deed of gift, under which he constituted himself a trustee for life and appointed a pauch to act as his successors in the trust. During his life-time he managed the temple as provided in the deed. On his death in 1867, the pauch did not take charge, but his son (the defendant) assumed the management. The temple was open to the Hindu community. In 1891 the pujari of the temple and five other worshippers of the idol filed this suit, under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with the sanction of the Advocate General, for removing the defendant from the management of the temple on the ground of his misconduct and mismanagement of the trust property. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the property was not a public religious and charitable trust, that he was not a trustee, that the plaintiffs had no right to sue, and that the suit was time-barred. Held (1) that, having regard to the fact that a certain number of the public had always used the temple, that there was attached to it a dhar-mashala, and that the surplus funds not required for the service of the temple were to be applied to feeding travellers and maintaining a sadavart, the intention of the founder was to devote the property to public religious and charitable purposes; (2) that although the defendant was not appointed a trustee, yet by taking charge of the endowment and purporting to manage it as temple property he made himself a constructive trustee, and was liable, as such, to the beneficiaries; (3) that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the suit under s. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (4) that the suit was not time-barred, as with every fresh breach of the constructive trust or whenever the direction of the Court was deemed necessary a fresh cause of action arose. JUGAL KISHORE v. Upon the same date A. executed an ikram-namah, in which he agreed that he would not collect the rents of the 2 annas transferred to him, that he would not ever demand partition of that share, and that he would not alienate or mortgage it or otherwise exercise proprietary rights over it. It was further provided that in the event of A. committing any breach of covenant the sale should be voided, and the proprietary rights in the 2 annas share should revert to M. A suit was subsequently brought by M. upon the allegation that, in breach of the covenants of the ikram-namah, A. had collected the rents of the share; that, in consequence of his action in collecting the rents, the plaintiff had been compelled to sue the tenants; that in these suits the tenants exhibited receipts given by A. on the basis of which the suits were dismissed; and that he had been subjected to various costs and expenses. He therefore claimed by way of damages from A. certain sums of money realized by A. as rent from the tenants, and further, by reason of the ikram-namah, to avoid the sale-deed which preceded it. Held that provisions of this kind, which absolutely debar the person to whom the proprietary rights have passed from exercising these rights, impose conditions which no Court ought to recognize or give effect to; that a covenant in a sale-deed the effect of which is to disable the vendee from either alienating or enjoying the interest conveyed to him is not only contrary to public policy, but in violation of the principle of ss. 10 and 11 of the Transfer of Property Act; and that therefore, as the agreement on the basis of which the plaintiff asked for relief was one which no Court should assist him in enforcing, the suit must fail. *Holman v. On the 6th November 1889 the plaintiff's petition in insolvency was dismissed for non prosecution and on the 18th November 1889 K re assigned the contract to the plaintiff. was equivalent to G's interest in the value of the wood removed; the only remedy open to the plaintiff being a suit against A, his cotenant, for an account. Though G, being out of possession to the knowledge of the licensee, could convey to them in right, yet A could; and a license from A gave a right to cut wood in the whole of the forest, since a cotenant may lawfully enjoy the whole property in any way not destructive of its substance so as to amount to an ouster of the other cotenants, and whatever a cotenant may do him- or herself is licit for another to do. 18 CUSTOMARY RIGHTS.

146. ——— Suit to restrain the use for tazias of land used for the purposes of the Holi.—Easement—Cause of action.—A, a Mahomedan, purchased a house adjacent to a piece of waste land, on which after such purchase he caused a tazia to be erected at the time of the Mohurrum. J and others, Hindus, instituted a suit against A, alleging in their plaint that for a long time previously they had been in the habit of going upon the land at the time of the Holi festival for the purpose of burning the Holi and celebrating the ceremonies incident thereto, and praying that the defendant "be restrained from improper interference, and that the plaintiffs be put in possession, by maintaining observance of the Holi rights, according to the custom of the place."—Held that the plaintiffs had the right of festival, and that the defendant was also proved that neither the plaintiffs nor the defendant had any proprietary right in the land, and that it belonged to the zamandars of the kasha, who did not appear to object to its use by the defendant and other Mahomedans at the time of the Mohurrum, for the erection of tazias. Held that the plaintiffs' claim appeared to be a claim to a right by custom of the nature described in Mcune v. Lemy, 13 L. J. Ex., 52, and Abbot v. Weekly, 1 Ler., 179, and could not strictly be regarded as for an easement, the right not being set up in respect of any dominant tenement to which it was appurtenant over a servient tenement subject to it. Held further that, inasmuch as the nature of the right claimed was to come on the land for a few days at one period of the year, it by no means followed that the plaintiffs were entitled to object to the defendant's use of the land at an other period; and that, looking to the extent and nature of the said right and to the form in which the plaintiff was charged, the having of a tazia upon the land at the Mohurrum could not be held to be any interference with such right sufficient to afford a cause of action on which to come into Court. *ABRAHAM ALI v. 150. ——— Suit for right to use ghāt for religious purpose.—Allegation.—Cause of action.—A Hindu brought a suit in which he alleged that the Hindu community had acquired by long-established custom an exclusive right to use for religious purposes a ghāt situated on the River Ganges, but that the Mahomedans were in the habit of interfering with the exercise of such right by bathing at the ghāt. He prayed for a declaration of the right, and for a perpetual injunction to be granted to the Mahomedans generally forbidding them to resort to the ghāt. No act of trespass was charged against any of the defendants. The defence was that the Mahomedans were entitled to use the place, and that their use of it did not cause any inconvenience to the plaintiff. Held that at the suit was not maintainable, since the plaintiff had no power to pass a decree against persons who had never interfered with the plaintiff's exercise of an injunction against the whole Mahomedan community but that, inasmuch as the defence is bad, the case will stand as if the suit were maintainable and upon a false plea, both sides to pay their costs. *SHAN MUHAMMAD v. Bombay. The execution of the decree in such suits is rigorously confined to immovable estate. The ground of the interference of the High Court in such cases is that practically the judgment creditor could not recover his debt except by process against the immovable estate of the debtor. In such cases the plaintiff must contain an averment and the plaintiff must establish to the satisfaction of the High Court that there is not any sufficient moveable property of the defendant against which the decree of the Court of Small Causes can be fully executed, and that he has immovable property situated within the original execution.

193. ——— Suit by a dharmakarta disaffirming the acts of his predecessor—Act XX of 1863, s. 7—Mad. Reg. VII of 1817, s. 12—Suit to set aside lease granted by former dharmakarta of temple—Limitation—Cause of action.—The plaintiff, who had been appointed in 1886 by the Sub-Collector to be dharmakarta of a Hindu temple, for which no committee had been appointed under the Religious Endowments Act, s. 7, sued in 1886 to recover possession of land demised to the defendant on a perpetual lease in or about 1856 by a previous dharmakarta, who died in 1885. Held that, Madras Regulation VII of 1817 having been repealed as regards Hindu temples by Act XX of 1863, the appointment by the Sub-Collector gave the plaintiff no right to sue: accordingly, it was necessary to determine the question whether he had such right apart from that appointment. Held that, assuming he had such right, the plaintiff, since he did not derive title through his predecessor in office (the grantor of the lease), would be entitled to disaffirm his acts and could maintain the suit. The cause of action arose, and the period of limitation would therefore run not from the date of the lease, but from the date of the accession of the plaintiff to his office. MAHOMED v. GANAPATI . The defendant had been in possession of the land for more than twelve years, falsely asserting the title of kanomdar with the permission of the plaintiff's predecessor in office. Held (1) the suit was not barred by limitation; (2) the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit for the purpose of recovering for the trusts of the devasom property improperly alienated by his predecessor. Suppammal v. 197. ——— Alienation of wakf property—Suit to set aside such alienation—Mahomedan Law—Wakf—Mutawali—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539.—Plaintiffs sued to recover possession of certain lands, alleging that they had been granted in wakf to their ancestor and his lineal descendants to defray the expenses for, or connected with, the services of a certain mosque; that their father (defendant No. 3) and 'cousins (defendants Nos. 4 and 5), who were mutawallis in charge of the said property, had illegally alienated some of these lands, and had also ceased to render any service to the mosque, whereupon they (the plaintiffs) had been acting as mutwalis in their stead. They therefore claimed to be entitled, as such, to the management and enjoyment of the lands in dispute. It was contended (inter alia) that the plaintiffs could not sue in the lifetime of their father (defendant No. 3), he not having transferred his rights to them. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue to have the alienation made by their father and cousins set aside and the wakf property restored to the service of the mosque. They were not merely beneficiaries, but members of the family of the mutwalis, and were the persons on whom, on the death of the existing mutwalis, the office of mutwali would fall by descent, if, indeed, it had not already fallen upon them, as alleged in the plaint, by abandonment and resignation. Wakf property cannot be alienated, and any person interested in the endowment can sue to have alienations set aside and the property restored to the trust. Per RANADE, J.—As a suit for possession, the suit was defective in form, and could not be maintained. It was a suit for partition of a moiety of the lands, and the owner of the other moiety was not a party. The suit was, however, really a suit for a declaration that the lands were the immovable property of the mosque, and as such, was not liable to alienation for the private debts of defendants Nos 3, 4, and 5. The plaintiffs were entitled to sue for such a declaration, although they could not obtain actual possession. They were beneficiaries and had a right to sue under s 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). When a suit is brought to set aside an alienation made to a stranger, such a suit by the worshipper at a mosque or temple can be maintained and does not fall within s 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). That section is only applicable where there is an alleged breach of trust created for a public, charitable, or religious purpose, and the direction of the Court is necessary for the administration of the trust. As against strangers s 539 does not apply. HASSAN v SAGUN BALKRISHNA question between him and the attaching creditor is properly one between the parties to the suit under s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where the judgment debtor raises the claim or objection on behalf of third parties who are not represented before the Court the order passed thereon must be regarded as an order under s 280 of the Code, and the only mode in which that order can be contested is in a regular suit as provided by s 283. In execution of a decree against a judgment debtor in his private capacity, the judgment creditor attached certain property. Thereupon the judgment debtor objected that the property attached had been dedicated by him some time previously as wakf under a registered wakfnama, and that he was only in possession as mutwahi under the deed. The lower Court found that the document created a valid wakf, and allowed the objection and released the property from attachment. The judgment creditor appealed. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended that no appeal lay, inasmuch as the order was one under s 280 of the Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of the judgment creditor it was contended that the order was one under s 244 and was thus appealable. Held that the order was one under s 280, and that no appeal lay, the remedy of the judgment creditor being by way of a regular suit as provided by s 283. ROOP LALL DASS v BEKANT MEAH MOHINDER MOHUN ROY v BEKANT MEAH

Money-decree against mortgagor—Sale of equity of redemption by mortgagor—Mortgaged land attached and sold in execution—Claim by purchaser of equity of redemption—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 246—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 278 to 283.—In 1870 B mortgaged to N, with possession, a certain piece of land. On 17th June 1871 M and T obtained a money-decree against B. On 9th March 1872 the defendants bought from B his equity of redemption. In July 1872 M and T attached the land in execution of their decree. The defendants objected to the attachment under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), but on investigation of their claim an order was made disallowing their claim on the 23rd December 1872. In June 1873 the defendants paid off the mortgage-debt and were put into possession by the mortgagee. In October 1873 M and T put up the land for sale in execution of their decree, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. On seeking to obtain possession, the plaintiff was resisted by the defendants, whose claim was allowed by the Subordinate Judge after inquiry. The plaintiff therefore brought this suit under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The lower Courts rejected his claim. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that, where, under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) or the corresponding sections (273 to 283) of the Civil Procedure Codes of 1877 and 1882, an order has been passed against any person making a claim to property under attachment, such person may bring a suit to establish his title to the property within one year from the date of such order; but in default of his bringing such suit within the prescribed time, he is precluded from asserting his title against the auction-purchaser, whether as plaintiff or defendant. In the present case an order had been passed against the defendants under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, on the 23rd December 1872; and as they had brought no suit within a year from that date, they could not now contest the plaintiff's title to the property. The defendants, however, having, since date of the said order, paid off the mortgage,—Held that it would be contrary to justice, equity, and good conscience for the Court to assist the plaintiff in obtaining possession unless he paid the defendants the amount paid by them to the mortgagee to free the property from the incumbrance. NILO PANDU-BANG v. Suit to stay execution of decree—Suit to stay execution against certain property until judgment—creditor had proceeded against other property—Res judicata—Suit for land—Jurisdiction—Letters Patent, cl. 12.—One K C was entitled to a share in pergunnah Alumpore. Before he obtained possession, Government revenue on the whole estate fell due. K C failed to pay his share, and his co-sharer K, to save the estate, mortgaged her share of the estate to one H B and with the amount so borrowed paid the whole sum due, and subsequently sued K C for the amount, eventually obtaining a decree. Subsequently this decree became vested in one R, and the pergunnah Alumpore came into the possession of one K G, who in 1874 took an assignment of the mortgage executed by K in favour of H B. The plaintiffs also alleged that since the execution proceedings had commenced they had discovered a secret arrangement made in 1877 between K G, R, and H B, by which it was agreed that R should not execute the decree against Alumpore, but would release K G from all liability in respect of the charge on that property, and in consideration K G executed a patni lease to H B of a portion of Alumpore at a small rent. R obtained an order for execution against the property of K C, and, having transferred his decree to the High Court proceeded to enforce the decree against the plaintiff, the widow of K C, and her son by attacking the family dwelling house in Calcutta. The widow and son then brought this suit against K G, R, and H B to have the share of A C in Alumpore ascertained and praying for a decree calling upon K G to pay the amount of the value of the share of Alumpore in satisfaction of R's decree. Held that the suit could not be maintained so far as it attempted to make the decree a charge against Alumpore. Held on appeal that the suit was rightly dismissed, that as far as R was concerned, it had already been decided that R was entitled if he so chose, to execute his decree against the Calcutta property, and that therefore that question was res judicata and that, as regards the plaintiff's claim that the patni given by K G to H B should be treated as part payment to R, such a question could only be decided in execution proceedings, that the mere existence of the agreement between A G, R, and H B did not entitle the plaintiff to join them

Subsequently, at the instance of A, the said ex-parte decree was set aside on the ground of non-service of summons, and the original suit was restored, but that was dismissed for default, as the then plaintiff did not proceed with it. An application was then made by A to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud which was rejected, because the auction-purchaser was not made a party to the proceedings. A then brought a suit for declaration of title to a portion of the land sold and for confirmation of possession, challenging not only the sale, but also the decree, on the ground of fraud. The defence mainly was that, regard being had to the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the suit was not maintainable. Held that, although there was no decree to be actually set aside, the plaintiff was entitled to show that the decree under which the sale was held was obtained by fraud as against him, and that therefore the suit was maintainable. *Abdul Mazumdar v. In this case a suit brought in the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon to set aside a decree of the Court of Small Causes at Rangoon on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud was held under the circumstances of the case to be not maintainable. *MAHOMED GOLAB v. Subsequently, at the instance of A, the said ex-parte decree was set aside on the ground of non-service of summons, and the original suit was restored, but that was dismissed for default, as the then plaintiff did not proceed with it. An application was then made by A to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud which was rejected, because the auction-purchaser was not made a party to the proceedings. A then brought a suit for declaration of title to a portion of the land sold and for confirmation of possession, challenging not only the sale, but also the decree, on the ground of fraud. The defence mainly was that, regard being had to the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the suit was not maintainable. Held that, although there was no decree to be actually set aside, the plaintiff was entitled to show that the decree under which the sale was held was obtained by fraud as against him, and that therefore the suit was maintainable. *Abdul Mazumdar v. the mortgage, as he was not at the time joint with M and the other sons of S B, and that the loan was not one required for family necessity. The plaintiff's application was dismissed. In 1882 the plaintiff brought a suit against B, in which he prayed for a decree giving him possession of the room on the terms of the decree in 1877. By the defendant it was (inter alia) contended that the previous suit on the mortgage had exhausted the plaintiff's cause of action, and that the plaintiff had no further right against the defendant. Held that the decree in the former suit could not effect the defendant, as he was not a party to it, nor was he represented. If he had been represented he could not have resisted the execution of the decree. Not having been represented he could on principle be exempted from liability in the present suit only if the cause of action was merged in the judgment against his uncle and brother. Here, however there was no such merger. The previous decree had awarded possession of the whole house to the plaintiff. The existence of that decree could not be a reason for not awarding part of the same house when detained by the defendant. He avowed himself a stranger to the defendants against whom the previous decree was obtained and his act might be regarded as constituting a separate cause of action. Held also that s 328 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, does not make it obligatory on a decree holder, who is obstructed in execution of the decree, to pursue his remedy under that section. Accordingly the omission of the plaintiff to avail himself of the remedy under that section did not prevent him from proceeding against the defendant by a regular suit. BALVANT SANTARAM v BARAJI BIN SAMBHAFA

222. ——— Suit for damages on account of omission to offer food to idol—Cause of action.—The plaintiff, alleging that he was a member of a family of Guravs holding a vatan attached to a temple, complained that the defendant was the holder of an inam allowance, granted in consideration of his daily offering to the idol some rice and cake, and burning a lamp; and that he had omitted to make such offering for one year. The plaintiff claimed Rs15 damages. Held that the plaintiff had no cause of action. In 1886 R had presented a petition in insolvency, and a vesting order had been duly made. No final order of discharge was ever made, and R died in 1888. The plaintiffs sued, as the heirs of R, for their share in the said properties. The point taken in special appeal was that the defendant not being a party on the record of these proceedings, the plaintiffs could not recover in this form of action. Held that, though the proper and more prudent course would have been to sue the defendant for damages, yet, this being a mere matter of form, the Court refused to interfere with the decision of the Courts below. *KFELARAM DOSS VITTELI v. 238. ——— Suit by one executor against another—Letters of administration—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 190 and 266—Administration suit.—D, a Parsi, died intestate in 1877, leaving him surviving a widow, three daughters, and two sons. A and F. On D's death, his sons, without taking out administration, assumed the management of the estate, and each received sums of money on account of it. The widow and daughters of the deceased obtained letters of administration, but limited to the extent of their interests in the estate. In 1888 A brought a suit against his brother F and the other members of the family to recover out of the estate a certain sum of money advanced by him to D. Held that, the estate being unrepresented, the suit could not be maintained (s. 190 of Act X of 1865). The letters of administration issued to the widow and daughters of the deceased, being limited only to the extent of their shares in the estate, were not letters of administration such as are meant by s. 190 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865). Held also that the only course open to the plaintiff was to take proceedings for the appointment of an administrator of the estate who would either administer it by the payment of the debts and the distribution of the surplus (if any) amongst the heirs, after taking an account of all property already received out of it by the creditors or heirs, or who could be compelled to do so by an administration suit. *FRAMJI DORABJI GHASWALA v. 274. ——— Suit to establish right to build structure forbidden by Municipality—Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873), s. 33.—S. 33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) gives the Municipality a discretion to issue such orders as it thinks proper with reference to a proposed building. Civil Courts cannot interfere with that discretion, unless it is exercised in a capricious, wanton, and oppressive manner. The plaintiff was the owner of two houses on each side of the passage of a khidki, or open square, containing three or four other houses. He proposed to connect the two houses by building a storey across the passage at such a height as not to interfere with the passage of those who were entitled to go to and fro. He applied to the local Municipality for permission to build in the manner he proposed. The Municipality forbade the work, on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses. The plaintiff thereupon sued the Municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure. It was contended for the plaintiff that the Municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interest of the neighbouring householders, who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury. Held that the suit would not lie, as the order of the Municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case. Held further that the authority of the Municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured. NAGAR VALAB NARSI v. gate was erected in a public street (by the permission of the Municipal Council), which obstructed the exercise by the plaintiff and the public of their right to resort to and draw water from a well. It appeared in evidence although it was not alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff had to use the land between the newly erected gate and the well when he repaired his house. The plaintiff, not having obtained permission to sue under the Civil Procedure Code s. 30, sued for a declaration of his right to use the street and draw water from the well and for an injunction

The Municipal Committee sold such land to M and constructed a new thoroughfare. M used and occupied such land so as to obstruct F's access to the new thoroughfare and his use of the drain. F therefore sued him to establish a right of access to the new thoroughfare over such land and a right to the use of such drain. Held that having suffered special damage from M's acts, F had a right of action against him and that such right of action was not affected by the circumstance that M had acquired his title to the land from the Municipal Committee, inasmuch as the Municipal Committee could not have dealt with the old thoroughfare to the special injury of F and had it closed the same, would have been bound to provide adequately for his access to the new thoroughfare and for his damage. FAZAL HAQ v. Both the lower Courts found as a fact that the road along which plaintiffs desired to carry their tabuts to the sea was a public road. Held on special appeal that plaintiffs could not maintain a civil suit in respect of such obstruction, unless they could prove some particular damage to themselves personally, in addition to the general inconvenience occasioned to the public. The mere absence of the religious or sentimental gratification arising from carrying tabuts along a public road is not any such particular loss or injury as would be sufficient, according to English and Indian precedents, to sustain a civil action. 287. ——— Special damage—Lessee—Right of lessee—Trespass.—The plaintiff, a holder of a ten years' lease of the share and rights of one of the co-shrers of a village, sued for the demolition of certain buildings and constructions on a plot of land within the area of the village, on the ground that the public had been very much inconvenienced in going to and coming from the road, and in taking carts, carriages, cattle, etc., and that he, by reason of his own inconvenience and also as lessee in possession of the entire rights of his lessor, had legally and justly a right to bring the action. The findings of fact were that by the terms of the lease plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action as representing the zamindari rights of his lessor; that the obstructions complained of existed when the lease was granted; that the roadway mentioned in the plaint was one used by the public in general as a footpath and also for vehicles, and that the buildings complained of had encroached on the road. The suit was dismissed by the first Court, but decreed in appeal by the lower Appellate Court. Held that, in the absence of damage over and above that which in common with the rest of the public the plaintiff has sustained, his action must fail. Public nuisance is actionable only at the suit of a party who has sustained special damage, and the case law of British India in this respect is the same as the rule of English law on the subject. Further, that the lease to plaintiff failed to show either that the land upon which the defendant had built is included in the lease, or that it intended to confer upon the plaintiff any right to question the legality of the erections existing at the time of the lease. Satbu v. 288. ——— Suit by zamindar for removal of building—Obstruction by building—Special damage.—The plaintiff, who is the zamindar of the village, brought an action claiming to have a chabutra or building erected by the defendant in one of the village roads removed. The road in question was a katcha road used by the village over which the public had a right of way, and it had been dedicated as a road for the use and convenience of the general public. The plaintiff got a decree for the removal of the chabutra, and the defendant appealed. Held that the rule of English law that a member of the public cannot maintain an action for obstruction to a public road without showing special injury to himself beyond that suffered by any member of the public does not apply to a zamindar who or whose predecessor in title had dedicated to the public the road over his zamindari land. A zamindar, in giving the public a right of road of way over his land, does not give the public or any one else a right to interfere with the soil of the road, as by erecting a building upon it. In such a case the zamindar has, in common with the public, the right to use the road as a road; over and above it, he has a right to the soil in the road, which he had never given to the public. In an action of this kind the zamindar does not sue as a guardian of the public, but in respect of an interference with his own rights of property. Baroda Prasad Mustafa v. 289. ——— Suit to remove obstruction in public right of way—Special injury—Cause of action—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—In a suit for the removal of an obstruction in a public pathway, it was found by the Courts below that the plaintiffs were deprived of the only means of grazing their cattle by the obstruction, and that they lost some cows thereby. It was contended on behalf of the defendant on second appeal, that such damage would not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain a suit in the Civil Court. Held that the injury caused to the plaintiffs by the obstruction of the way leading from the village where they resided to that in which they had their fields and pastures, was peculiar to them and to their calling, and it caused them substantial loss of time and inconvenience, and that it was sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the action. Held also that the death of the cows was too remotely and indirectly connected with the obstruction to furnish a cause of action. *Winterbottom v Lord Derby, L R, 2 Exch, 316. R, one of the two shareholders in the zamindari, brought a suit for arrears of rent of the tenure against G, and in execution of the decree he obtained in that suit the tenure was sold and purchased by the other zamindar, by whom the plaintiffs were dispossessed. Held that the plaintiffs were not precluded by the fact that their names were not registered as tenants, under s. 26 of the Rent Act, from bringing a suit to recover possession of the tenure. The holder of the decree, in execution of which the tenure was sold, assuming him to be only a shareholder in the zamindari right, had no right under s. 64 to sell the tenure, but only the interest of the person against whom the decree was passed. The mortgagees, to save the property from sale, paid up certain arrears of Government revenue. Subsequently the defendant, who was the representative of the mortgagors under s. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, paid the original sum due under the mortgage into Court. The mortgagees withdrew the money so paid in and deposited the mortgage-deed in Court. The mortgagees then, after relinquishing possession of the mortgaged property, sued to recover the money which they had paid as Government revenue by sale of the mortgaged property. Held that, though the mortgagees might originally have treated the amount paid by them as Government revenue as part of the mortgage-money, they did not by such payment obtain a lien independently of their position as mortgagees, and when once they had abandoned their lien on the mortgaged property by accepting the money paid into Court by the mortgagors and by relinquishing possession of the mortgaged property, they could not afterwards revive it; and their suit, which was for realization of the Government revenue paid by them by sale of the mortgaged property, must fail. Semble—A mortgagee, who had given up his lien under circumstances similar to those above described, might bring a simple money suit to recover money paid by him to save the property from sale in execution for arrears of Government revenue. *Kinu Ram Dass v. By the sale a much larger sum than was sufficient to satisfy the arrears of revenue was realized. The Collector, instead of paying the surplus to the defaulter, mortgagor, paid therewith one of the mortgagees in full and the other in part. The mortgagee who had been paid in part only sued the other mortgagee for the balance due on his (the plaintiff's) mortgage, alleging that it was prior to that of the defendant and ought to have been paid off in full. Held that the suit would not lie. The action of the Collector in contravention of the express provisions of s. 185 of Act XIX of 1873 gave the plaintiff no cause of action against the other mortgagee. *KUNJ BEHARI LAL v. At the sale the tenure was purchased by N. S then brought a suit against B and N to set aside the sale on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent, and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of N. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie, and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined, and were determined, by the Court executing the decree. Held that neither s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code nor the corresponding s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 has any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, and that the suit, being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable. Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. maintainable, the matter being one for determination in execution proceedings under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure,—Held (1) that, although the sale was contrary to the provisions of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, that section being for the benefit only of a particular class of persons, namely, those concerned with a right to redeem mortgaged property, such a sale was not void, but voidable; (2) that the question, being one arising between the parties to the suit wherein the sale was made and relating to execution, could not be raised and decided in a suit, but should be raised and tried only in execution proceedings taken under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the sale set aside if such relief were not, for any reason, barred; (3) that the sale having been confirmed, such confirmation was final, and precluded the mortgagors from seeking the relief to which they would otherwise have been entitled; and (4) that, notwithstanding such sale and confirmation, the mortgagors might not be precluded from suing to redeem the mortgaged property on payment of the amount given credit for by the mortgagee in respect of the sale. MAYAN PATHUTI v. the decrees made an order setting aside such sale on that ground S thereupon sued B to have such order set aside and to have such sale confirmed and to obtain possession of such property Held that, inasmuch as such order had not been made under s 257 of Act VIII of 1859 but had been made at the instance of a purchaser under another decree, and B's decree, as a matter of fact, had not been satisfied S's suit to have such order set aside was maintainable SANGAM RAM v SHEOBART BHAGAT [I L R, 3 All, 112]

On the 20th April 1877 such sale was set aside under s 256 of Act VIII of 1859 on the ground that the order attaching such property and the notifications of sale had not, as required by s 222 been signed by the Court executing the decree but by the Munshiram of the Court. On the 27th June 1877 M conveyed such property to H, who purchased it bona fide and for value, and satisfied the encumbrances existing thereon. barred under the last clause of s. 312 nor under s. 588, cl. 16. Held also that the rules framed by Government under s. 320 of the Code only restricted the powers of the Court to interfere with the procedure of the execution of decrees transferred to the Collector. They did not come in the way of a party bringing a civil suit to establish his purchase. Held also that the Collector had no power under s. 311 of the Code to set aside the sale and receive payment from the judgment-debtor. MATHURADAS v. 379. ——— Advance by mortgagee to pay off prior lien on mortgaged property and save the property from sale in execution of decree—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 60, 68, 72, 74, 75, 95—Suit against purchaser of property to recover amount so advanced—Charge on the mortgaged property.—Plaintiff's undivided brother had advanced money on a usufructuary mortgage-bond to enable the owners of certain property to obtain possession of it from one in whose favour a lien had been decreed to subsist. The money not having been so applied, the holder of the lien attached the property and applied to the Court for its sale. To save the property from being sold, plaintiff's said brother further paid the amount of the lien into Court; and at about the same time the mortgagor sold the property to defendant. Plaintiff's brother had never obtained possession of the property, and had since died. Upon plaintiff suing to recover (in addition to the mortgage amount, liability for which was not disputed) the amount of the lien so paid into Court to save the property from sale, — Held that, inasmuch as plaintiff could only succeed by showing that by such payment a charge was created upon the land (the money not having been paid at the request or for the benefit of the defendant), the suit must fail. There is no provision in the Transfer of Property Act to support the proposition (involved by the plaintiff's suit) that a second mortgagee may, by a transaction between himself and the first mortgagee, without knowledge or concurrence on the part of the mortgagor, acquire a new right over the mortgaged property. Per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J.—That as against the mortgagors, plaintiff would have been entitled to add the sums paid by him to the prior incumbrancer to the mortgage amount. But as the mortgage was usufructuary and plaintiff had never obtained possession, he had acquired no charge on the mortgaged property for the money recoverable by him under s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act. The amount sought to be added thereto consequently stood on a similar footing, and the plaintiff's contention that a charge in respect of it existed in his favour was unsustainable. Nogender Chunder Ghose v. [20 W. R., 16]

381. ——— Suit by purchaser at execution sale to sue for partition—Certificate of purchase by Registrar—Conveyance—Declaration of right to share—Rules of Court, 415, 431.—The position of a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of the High Court after he has obtained a certificate from the Registrar under rule 415 of the Rules of Court is that of a person clothed with a right to a conveyance in virtue of a contract; he does not hold, save as regards the parties to the contract of sale, the position of an owner. When the sale is confirmed, the purchaser is entitled to a conveyance, and until he obtains a conveyance the property in the estate purchased does not, having regard to rule 431, pass to him so as to give him rights as against parties not bound by the decree under which the sale took place. All that passes to him as against the defendant in that suit is an equitable estate and a right to a conveyance of the property. And therefore, as the estate in the property purchased has not passed, the purchaser is not entitled to maintain a suit for partition. In such a suit he could not on partition give a good conveyance to the parties interested in the estate, nor would he be entitled to a declaration of his share in the property. JOHUR MULL KHOORBA v. B obtained a decree directing the sale of the property in satisfaction of his two mortgages, and it was sold accordingly. Subsequent to the sale, C obtained a similar decree upon his mortgage, and, having unsuccessfully applied in his own suit to have proceeds after payment of 1874, brought a suit to recover the amount received by B in respect of B's mortgage of November 1877. Held that to read the words "an incumbrance" in s. 205, prov. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code as "an incumbrance or encumbrance," so as to give priority to B's mortgage of November 1877 over C's earlier mortgage of March 1877, would be to defeat the intention of the Legislature as expressed in that section and also in s. 80 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that C was entitled to maintain the suit. S seized the ship in French territory for a debt due to him by M, and claimed on Court in India C to judgment against M. C sued S to obtain a declaration of his right to recover the amount due by M on the bond. Held that, whether or not his lien was destroyed by the sale of the ship in French territory, C was not entitled to any of the proceeds of the sale, either at the date of the sale or of his claim in the French Court, and the denial by S of C's right to any of the proceeds of the sale gave C no cause of action. 15. ————— Easement—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 26—User as of right—Prescriptive right.—For the purpose of acquiring a right of way or other easement under s. 26 of the Limitation Act, it is not necessary that the enjoyment of the easement should be known to the servient owner. In this respect there is a difference between the acquisition of such rights under that Act and their acquisition under the English Prescription Act. ABZAN v. RAKHAL CHUNDER ROY CHOWDHRY I. L. 16. ————— User of twenty years to support servitude—Extent and mode of user—Calcutta Municipal Act (Beng. Act IV of 1876).—As establishing his right of way over the defendant's passage, the plaintiff relied upon a user of it, several times in the year, for twenty years prior to the defendant's interruption of it, by mehters for the purpose of removing the contents of a cess-pool connected with a privy belonging to the plaintiffs' house. The facts indicated by way of limit to the user of the passage only showed that it must be a reasonable user for the above purpose. There was no agreement specifying times or occasions of access, and the inference was that, if the plaintiffs had thought fit to use the passage more frequently than they did, they were at liberty to do so. In and after 1876, instead of the plaintiffs' mehters, those employed by the Municipality came and went upon the passage, not at distant intervals, but daily, the plaintiffs under bye-laws, in conformity with Bengal Act IV of 1876, being bound to give them access, and the system being to clean the place daily. Held that the above was neither a discontinuance by the plaintiffs of their user nor an aggravation of the servitude. Also that, although a servitude gained for one purpose cannot be used for another, the purposes before and after 1876 being identical, the user proved prior to that year supported a right in the plaintiffs to use the passage for giving access to the servants of the Municipality for the above purpose at reasonable and convenient times. JADULAL MULLICK v. thereon. No privy was built with or attached to the hut, the occupants of the hut using the oart, or neighbouring oarts, for natural purposes. The plaintiff bought the hut, knocked it down, and proceeded to build a substantial dwelling with a privy on the site of the old hut. Defendant denied his right to build a privy, or to have any right of way for sweepers to the said privy when built. Held that the suitable enjoyment of the hut, when it was originally built, implied the use of a privy, whenever the occupants of the hut should think fit to build one; and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to build a privy, and consequently also to a way of necessity for a sweeper to have access to the privy when built. The occupants of the old hut had been allowed, as a way of necessity, and had always used as a means of access to that portion of the site of the old hut on which the new privy was now being built, a path which went in a straight line from the gate in the outer wall of the oart to the front door of the hut, and thence, skirting the hut, to the site of the new privy. The plaintiff now claimed a right of way for his sweeper in a direct line from the outer gate to the new privy, thus avoiding the front entrance of the house. Held that, having regard to the class of persons who had lived in the old hut (who were of low caste), there could have arisen, up to the present time, no reasonable necessity for two ways to the site in question, and therefore the plaintiff was limited to the old way enjoyed by his predecessor in title. Quære—Whether, if the lessees had been persons belonging to one of the higher castes, it would not be right to take into consideration the prejudice entertained by members of such castes against being brought into close proximity with persons following the occupation of a sweeper, and, if necessary, to modify the general principle of English law, which lays down that a grantee is only entitled to one way of necessity. *ESUDAI v. 32. ——— Place dedicated by owner of land for convenience of occupiers of adjoining houses—User of such open space—Covenant or grant presumed—Easement—Public land—Encroachment—Injunction.—The plaintiff and defendant occupied houses situated in the same lane and opposite each other. Close to both houses was an open space in which a cross had stood. The plaintiff alleged that the said vacant space was originally intended for, and had always been used by the occupants of his house and the residents in the lane in common for, the purposes of recreation, save where the cross stood. The cross had been for many years visited by Christian worshippers who prayed and worshipped there. The plaintiff also alleged that, in addition to the general use of the open space, he and his predecessors in title and the occupants of his said house had for more than twenty years used the open space as a footway and a way for carriages and other vehicles to approach the said house and to stand and be able to turn there. He complained that the defendant had wrongfully removed the cross, and enclosed the greater portion of the said open space, and he prayed for a declaration that he and the occupants of his house were entitled to the use of the said space for purposes of recreation, and as a footway and carriage-way and for an injunction. The defendant pleaded that the whole of the open space formerly belonged to a Portuguese religious confraternity who were the fazendars of both his property and the plaintiff's; that this confraternity had permitted the cross to be erected on the land, at which the residents of the houses of the plaintiff and defendant and other adjacent houses who were then Portuguese used to assemble and worship; that the Portuguese having left the locality the cross was removed, and the part of the open space which had been enclosed by the defendant had been sold to him by the confraternity in 1887. He denied the use of the space alleged by the plaintiff. Held that the evidence was not sufficient to establish that the land in dispute had been dedicated to the public, but that, on the evidence, the Court was justified in presuming, and ought to presume, a covenant on the part of the fazendari owners of the oart to keep the lane, including the upper end of it, open for the use of the owners of the houses abutting upon it. Such a covenant should be presumed equally in the case of a land-owner giving land for building purposes to fazendari tenants in a perpetual tenure at a fixed rent, and in the case of a owner selling land out and out for building purposes. RANCHORDAS AMTHABHAI v. MANEKAL GORDHANDAS . . . I. L. R., 17 Bom., 648

33. ——— Easement of necessity—Easements Act (V of 1882)—Act I of 1872, s. 114, illus. (g)—Presumption against plaintiff from failure to produce his title-deeds.—The plaintiffs were owners of an hotel, and the defendant of certain adjacent property. The two properties had at one time been united, and at that time the manager of the hotel on behalf of the owner used to obtain water for the purposes of the hotel from a certain spring by means of a road which ran over land which subsequently became the defendant's. There was another but smaller and much less convenient path from the hotel to the spring. The plaintiffs became owners of their portion of the property in 1886, and the defendant of his portion in 1888. The plaintiffs continued to use the above-mentioned road through the defendant's property for the purpose of getting water from the hotel until 1889, when the defendant refused to permit them any longer to use the road. The plaintiffs accordingly sued the defendant for a declaration of their right of way over the said road, but refused to put in evidence the deed under which they became owners of the hotel property. Held upon these facts that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any right of way over the land in question. Owing to the non-production by the plaintiffs of their title-deed, it must be presumed as against them that the evidence afforded thereby would be unfavourable to their claim, and no right of way in favour of the plaintiffs could be shown to arise otherwise, either as an easement of necessity or as an easement the intention to grant which might be inferred. *Charu Surnokar v. York water. The owner of a land fed by natural streams, who engaged for the supply of natural water and a few water, used for an irrigation to certainly require riparian owners from damage to the stream, a riparian with the supply of water, over which the plaintiff claimed a right of ownership.
The issue as to the ownership of the land on which the stream runs was undecided. Held (1) The Statute Act only declared the existing law as to ownership of water; (2) An agreement can therefore

25. ————— Irrigation channels—Power of Collector to regulate water-supply.—In a suit between raiyats holding lands under Government, in which the Collector of the district was joined as second defendant, it appeared that the first defendant, in pursuance of an order of the Sub-Collector, made on a petition preferred by him, had opened a new irrigation channel, thereby materially diminishing the supply of water necessary for the cultivation of the plaintiff's land and causing damage to him. The lower Court passed a decree for damage and issued an injunction directing that the channel be closed. Held that the order of the Sub-Collector was in excess of his powers. RANCHANDRA v. NARAYANASAMI . . . I. L. R., 16 Mad., 333

26. ————— Water rights for irrigation where a stream flows through separate estates—Relative rights of upper and lower proprietors on the banks to the use of the water—Issues not raising actual rights.—A riparian owner, where a stream flows in a channel down from a property higher up, is entitled to the flow of water without interruption, and without substantial diminution caused by the upper proprietor, who may for legitimate purposes withdraw so much only of the water as will not materially lessen the downward flow on to his neighbour's land. In this suit the upper proprietor claimed the right to dam up a stream on his own estate, and to impound so much of its water as he might find convenient for irrigation, leaving only the surplus, if any, for the use of the proprietors below. He has no such right, in the absence of a right obtained by him in virtue of contract with the lower proprietors, or acquired by him as a consequence of prescriptive use. His common law right is to take for the purpose of irrigation so much water only as can be abstracted without materially diminishing what is to be allowed to descend. What quantity of water can be abstracted and used without infringing that essential condition, must, in all cases, be a question of the circumstances depending mainly upon the size of the stream and the proportion which the water taken bears to its entire volume. In this suit, the upper proprietor's claim having been put too high, the real question as to the proportion of his share had been omitted. No issue had raised it, and no evidence had been given to determine it approximately. The Court of first instance and the first Appellate Court had attempted to decree what they considered would be the just proportion, but the High Court had rightly pointed out that there had been no materials before the Courts upon which a right to a more limited kind than that which had been in excess claimed could be decreed to the upper proprietor; and the suit had been rightly dismissed. DEBI PERSHAD SINGH v. thereupon, and that the accused had been justified in resisting the trespass by force. Inasmuch, however, as he considered the accused had exceeded their right of private defence of their property, he convicted them of rioting under s. 148 of the Penal Code. Held that, on the findings of the Judge, the conviction could not be supported, inasmuch as on such findings the persons convicted were not members of an unlawful assembly. IN THE MATTER OF KALLER MUNDLE 10 C. 11. ————— Forcibly getting possession of cattle seized for trespass—Penal Code, s. 147—Act III of 1857, s. 11.—The prisoners having been part of an assembly of more than five persons, whose common object, as apparent from their acts, was, by means of criminal force, to recover possession of their cattle seized for trespass (whether properly pounded or not), and who made use of such force and took away their cattle, were held guilty of rioting, and liable to conviction under s. 147 of the Penal Code, and not under s. 11, Act III of 1857. QUEEN v. BOKOO SHEIKH . W. R., 1884, Cr., 21

12. ————— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 141 and 147.—A party of persons consisting of some five peadas and a number of coolies sufficient for the work to be done, went to a spot on a river flowing through the lands of M, for the purpose of either repairing or erecting a bund across it to cause the water to flow down a channel on the lands of their master T. The river at the time was almost dry, and the party did not go armed ready to fight or use force, and they did not during the subsequent occurrence use force. Having arrived at the spot about 10 A.M., they proceeded to work at the bund until the afternoon. At about 4 P.M. a body of men, consisting of about 1,200 in all, many of them armed with lathies and headed by the prisoners, who were servants of M, which had been seen collecting together during the day, proceeded to the spot, and about 25 or 30 of them attacked T's men, some five of whom were more or less severely wounded with the lathies. The occurrence resulted in the conviction of some of M's servants for rioting under s. 147 of the Penal Code. M's people wholly denied any right on the part of T to construct or repair the bund, and had previously denied the existence of such right, and refused permission to T to exercise it. It was contended that the assembly of M's people was not an "unlawful assembly;" that the interference by T's people with the channel of the river justified them in coming to stop the work, and the show and use of force in compelling them to do so. Held that the prisoners had been rightly convicted. Queen v. of land which was found by the Court to be in the possession of the accused, collected a large number of men, some of whom were armed, and went through the village to the land in question. While they were engaged in ploughing, the complainant's party came up, some of them being armed, and interfered with the ploughing. A fight ensued, in the course of which one of the complainant's party was grievously wounded and subsequently died, and two of the accused's party were hurt. Held that, if the accused were rightfully in possession of the land and found it necessary to protect themselves from aggression on the part of another body of men, they were justified in taking such precautions as they thought were required and using such force or violence as was necessary to prevent the aggression. Held also that under such circumstances they could not rightly be held to be members of an unlawful assembly. Queen-Empress v. The tenant, with the assistance of eleven other persons, forcibly obstructed the removal of the cattle which had already been actually seized and driven for some yards. Bombay Municipal Act (XXVI of 1850)—Rules whether ultra vires.—Rules made under Act XXVI of 1850, which purport to give the managing committee of the Municipal Commissioners power to try offenders against such rules, or to levy fines upon them, are ultra vires and illegal. Rules of the Municipalities of Balsad, Surat, Malcolm Pet, and Ahmedabad referred to and commented on. How far a rule partially ultra vires and partially intra vires can be enforced, as to the latter portion, considered REG. v. YENKU BAPUJI. . . 8 Bom., Cr., 39

1. Meaning of “with effect from the 31st October 1880.”—Held that effect cannot be given to the rules prescribed by the Local Government under s. 320 of Act X of 1877, unless an order for sale has been made on or after the 1st October 1880. *HAFIZ-UN-NISSA v. 2. Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888), s. 30—Rules framed by the Local Government under s. 320 of Act XIV of 1882 as amended by s. 30 of Act VII of 1888, Effect of—Sale in execution of decree—Confirmation of sale—Collector’s power to confirm or set aside a sale.—The rules framed by the Local Government in 1890 in exercise of the powers conferred by s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by s. 30 of Act VII of 1888, are not retrospective in their operation so as to give the Collector the power to confirm a sale held before the date of issue of the rules. Nor do the rules authorize the Collector to set aside a sale. On 27th July 1889 the property in dispute was sold by the Collector in execution of a decree which was referred to him under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). On 23rd September 1889 the Collector set aside the sale, on the ground that the auction-purchaser had purchased the property for, and on behalf of, the decree-holder. Thereupon the auction-purchaser applied to the Court which had passed the decree, complaining of the Collector’s proceeding, and praying for a confirmation of the sale. The Court asked the Collector to return the record of the case, but this he refused to do, on the ground that he had extended the time given by the decree to the judgment-debtor to redeem. In January 1890, the Local Government framed new rules in exercise of the powers conferred by s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure as amended by s. 30 of Act VII of 1888. One of these rules empowered the Collector to confirm a sale held in execution of a decree transferred to him. In April 1890 the auction-purchaser again applied to the Court for a confirmation of the sale. This application was rejected, on the ground that under the new rules framed by Government the Collector alone had the power to confirm the sale. Held that the rules in question had no application to the present case, the sale having been held before the rules were promulgated. The Civil Court was therefore competent to confirm the sale. Held further that, even if the rules did apply, they did not empower the Collector to set aside the sale or extend the time given by the decree to the judgment-debtor to redeem. *GANPATRAM MOTIRAM v. 3. Transmission of decree to Collector for execution—Power of Local Government to make rules for regulating procedure of Collector—Rule providing for appeal from Collector to Commissioner—Rule No. 17, cl. XIX, of 12th November 1883, Validity of—Act VII of 1888 (Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act), s. 30—Act XIX of 1873 (N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act), s. 243.—The authority conferred upon the Local Government by s. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code prior to the amendment of that section by s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888) to make rules for regulating the procedure of the Collector in executing decrees transmitted to him included power to make a rule providing for an appeal from the Collector’s orders. Cl. XIX of rule 17, which was added to the rules (No. 671 of 30th August 1880) published in the N.-W. P. and Oudh Gazette of the 14th September 1880, by a notification in the Gazette of the 17th November 1883, and which made the order of a Collector confirming a sale appealable to the Commissioner of the Division, was therefore not ultra vires of the Local Government. Madho Prasad v. Hanasa Kuar, I. L. R., 5 All., 314, referred to. S. 243 of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) does not apply to such orders passed by a Collector. TAKADDUS FATIMA v. BALDEO DAS
